

12.15.13.

Library of the Theological Seminary,
PRINCETON, N. J.

BV 4832 .K4 1907
Keble, John, 1792-1866.
The Christian year ..

112

FOURTH EDITION

LIBRARY OF BRIMINGTON

1913

SEMINARY

THE CHRISTIAN YEAR

BY JOHN KEBLE

WITH NOTES
AND INTRO-DUCTION BY WALTER LOCK
D.D.
WARDEN OF KEBLE COLLEGE

METHUEN & CO
36 ESSEX ST. W.C.
LONDON

First Published . . . April 1898
Second Edition . . . December 1901
Third Edition . . . January 1905
Fourth Edition . . . November 1907

CONTENTS

	PAGE
Introduction	ix
Appendix I.	xxvii
Appendix II.	xxviii
Note	xxxiv

Advertisement	xxxv
Morning	1
Evening	4
Advent Sunday	7
Second Sunday in Advent. The Signs of the Times	11
Third Sunday in Advent. The travellers	14
Fourth Sunday in Advent. Dimness	17
Christmas Day	20
S. Stephen's Day	23
S. John's Day	26
The Holy Innocents	28
First Sunday after Christmas. The Sun Dial of Ahaz	30
The Circumcision	33
Second Sunday after Christmas. The Pilgrim's Song	36
The Epiphany	39
First Sunday after Epiphany. The Nightingale	42
Second Sunday after Epiphany. The Secret of perpetual Youth	44
Third Sunday after Epiphany. The Good Centurion	47
Fourth Sunday after Epiphany. The World is for Excitement, the Gospel for Soothing	51
Fifth Sunday after Epiphany. Cure Sin and you cure Sorrow	54
Sixth Sunday after Epiphany. The Benefits of Uncertainty	57
Septuagesima Sunday	61

	PAGE
Sexagesima Sunday	64
Quinquagesima Sunday	67
Ash-Wednesday	69
First Sunday in Lent. The City of Refuge	72
Second Sunday in Lent. Esau's Forfeit	74
Third Sunday in Lent. The Spoils of Satan	77
Fourth Sunday in Lent. The Rosebud	80
Fifth Sunday in Lent. The Burning Bush	83
Palm Sunday. The Children in the Temple	87
Monday before Easter. Christ waiting for the Cross	89
Tuesday before Easter. Christ refusing the Wine and Myrrh	92
Wednesday before Easter. Christ in the Garden	94
Thursday before Easter. The Vision of the Latter Days	98
Good Friday	100
Easter Eve	103
Easter Day	106
Monday in Easter Week. S. Peter and Cornelius	109
Tuesday in Easter Week. The Snowdrop	111
First Sunday after Easter. The restless Pastor reproved	114
Second Sunday after Easter. Balaam	116
Third Sunday after Easter. Languor and Travail	119
Fourth Sunday after Easter. The Dove on the Cross	121
Fifth Sunday after Easter. The Priest's Inter- cessor	125
Ascension Day	128
Sunday after Ascension Day. Seed-time	130
Whitsunday	133
Monday in Whitsun-week. The City of Con- fusion	135
Tuesday in Whitsun-week. Holy Orders	138
Trinity Sunday	141
First Sunday after Trinity. Israel among the Ruins of Canaan	144
Second Sunday after Trinity. Charity the Life of Faith	146

CONTENTS

vii

	PAGE
Third Sunday after Trinity. Comfort for Sinners in the presence of the Good	149
Fourth Sunday after Trinity. The Groans of Nature	152
Fifth Sunday after Trinity. The Fishermen of Bethsaida	156
Sixth Sunday after Trinity. The Psalmist re- penting	159
Seventh Sunday after Trinity. The Feast in the Wilderness	161
Eighth Sunday after Trinity. The Disobedient Prophet	165
Ninth Sunday after Trinity. Elijah in Horeb	167
Tenth Sunday after Trinity. Christ weeping over Jerusalem	170
Eleventh Sunday after Trinity Gehazi re- proved	172
Twelfth Sunday after Trinity. The Deaf and Dumb	175
Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity. Moses on the Mount	177
Fourteenth Sunday after Trinity. The Ten Lepers	181
Fifteenth Sunday after Trinity. The Flowers of the Field	183
Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity. Hope is better than Ease	185
Seventeenth Sunday after Trinity. Ezekiel's Vision in the Temple	188
Eighteenth Sunday after Trinity. The Church in the Wilderness	191
Nineteenth Sunday after Trinity. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego	195
Twentieth Sunday after Trinity. Mountain Scenery	198
Twenty-first Sunday after Trinity. The Red- breast in September	200
Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity. The Rule of Christian Forgiveness	203
Twenty-third Sunday after Trinity. Forest Leaves in Autumn	205

	PAGE
Twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity. Imperfection of Human Sympathy	208
Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity. The Two Rainbows	211
Sunday next before Advent. Self-Examination before Advent	213
S. Andrew's Day	216
S. Thomas the Apostle	218
Conversion of S. Paul	222
Purification of S. Mary the Virgin	225
S. Matthias' Day	228
Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary	231
S. Mark's Day	234
S. Philip and S. James's Day	236
S. Barnabas the Apostle	238
S. John Baptist's Day	242
S. Peter's Day	245
S. James the Apostle	248
S. Bartholomew the Apostle	251
S. Matthew the Apostle	254
S. Michael and all Angels	258
S. Luke the Evangelist	261
S. Simon and S. Jude, Apostles	265
All Saints' Day	267
Holy Communion	270
Holy Baptism	273
Catechism	275
Confirmation	278
Matrimony	280
Visitation and Communion of the Sick	282
Burial of the Dead	285
Churching of Women	287
Commination	289
Forms of Prayer to be used at Sea	292
Gunpowder Treason	295
King Charles the Martyr	298
The Restoration of the Royal Family	300
The Accession	303
Ordination	304
Index	307

INTRODUCTION

THERE is scant need of a fresh Introduction to "The Christian Year": the author has himself told us that his aim is to produce a sober standard of feeling in religious matters, and that his method is to do this by bringing into relief the soothing tendency of the Prayer Book. Sobriety and soothing power—these are its chief notes. Dr Barry has expanded these notes well in an essay in which he shows how the quietness of its tone, and the constant sense of the Presence of God in Nature, in Humanity, and in the Church, fits it to be a true "Companion of the Devout Life."¹ From a point of view at once literary and spiritual, Principal Shairp² has drawn out its deep and tender religious feeling, centring in a devout reverence for the Person of our Lord and in a close personal love to Him as a living friend; its consecration of home and family life; the delicate reserve with which it hints at, rather than blurts out, the deepest feelings; and the combination of the artist's touch which depicts Nature with the spiritual vision that penetrates her secrets. Finally, the present writer has elsewhere tried to show¹ that the author's dominant passion is the faith in innocence, the belief that Nature and man can alike make response to God for His gifts; that the Church can be true to its ideal; this faith ever underlies his constant protest against the sin which mars the ideal, and prevents the protest from sinking into despair.

¹ "Companions of the Devout Life," Second Series, 1876. Lecture iv.

² J. C. Shairp, "Studies in Poetry and Philosophy." "John Keble."

Yet it may be that a fresh treatment is desirable: for the book is probably not quite so popular as it has been. Why is this? There are some reasons which are accidental and temporary: thus, Miss Yonge once said that she thought that it was due—partly to the fact that Sunday is so much less strictly observed than it used to be, so that religious people do not allow themselves the leisure necessary for reading it—partly to the change of the Lectionary which has in some cases destroyed the correspondence between the Poem and the Sunday services. But it is well to remember that many of the poems were written independently of any particular Sunday: "being in many parts rather adapted with more or less propriety to the successive portions of the Liturgy than suggested by them."² The book, then, can stand on its own merits, independently of such associations, and we shall try to see, later, the interest which attaches to the study of the Poems in chronological order, without reference to their framework.

But there are also reasons resting upon the book itself: in the first place it is felt to be obscure. The charge is true, but to a much more limited extent than is thought. The majority of the poems, especially of the earlier poems, are perfectly clear. Is the Jordan itself as it bursts from the lime-stone rocks that overhang Baniyas more lucid than the poems for the Purification, S. John's Day, Whitsunday, Palm Sunday, or the Wednesday before Easter? The obscurity, where it is to be found, is sometimes due to a mystical treatment of Holy Scripture, which is not so familiar to us as it used to be: more often it is due to the quick-darting thought of the writer, passing from one subject to another by a train of feeling rather than of logic. One who heard his conversation in early life said that "to attempt to write down what he said would be as difficult as for a painter to draw his picture." There is something analogous to this in the poems, and an attempt is made in the present edition to meet the difficulty. A short analysis of the thought is prefixed to each poem: and a few notes are added explaining the rarer words and the more difficult lines, showing the various influences which have moulded the diction, and illustrating the thought from other portions of Mr Keble's own writings.

¹ W. Lock, "John Keble: a Biography," chap. iii.

² The Advertisement (p. xxxv).

Again, it is sometimes felt that the book is not quite adapted to the religious tone of the present day, that it is somewhat tame, somewhat ecclesiastically narrow, that it wants intensity, breadth, stimulus. Such a charge is even less true than the former; the tone is indeed that of self-discipline, of control, of resignation, of content :

Its still small voice is often heard
Whispering a mingled sentiment
'Twixt resignation and content.

But it is the resignation of a very sensitive soul, which has felt at once the brightness of life and its sorrow, and which in both has stayed itself upon the power of God. There is calm, but it is the calm not of a stagnant pond but of a mountain stream which has started as a bright flashing waterfall amid the trees, has forced its course over a rocky bed, and is just emerging, broad, calm, and clear, into the channel in the valley.

In reading the book once more with a view to this edition, I have been much struck with three points which justify a belief in its permanent value, and which may help those who wish to gain devotional aid from its use.

(1) The most striking feature is its width of sympathy, its sense of the consecration of all life. In Dean Stanley's words, "It has a real openness of mind for the whole large view of the Church and the world."¹ The mere diction of the poems will illustrate this: not only have all the parts of the Bible (Old Testament, New Testament, and Apocrypha) as well as the Fathers and the Prayer Book contributed to mould it, but (as the notes to the present edition will show) Homer, Æschylus, the

¹ From a letter to Principal Shairp, quoted in "Principal Shairp and his Friends," by W. Knight, p. 26.

Greek Anthology, as well as Pascal, Bishop Butler, Spenser, George Herbert, Milton, Waller, Gray, Cowper, Burns, Rogers, and, above all, Scott and Wordsworth, have enriched it with phrase or imagery. One poem especially of Wordsworth's, the Ode "On the intimations of Immortality from Recollections of Early Childhood," seems to me to have left its mark on at least five poems, on those for the Holy Innocents' Day, the Epiphany, the Seventh and Twenty-second Sundays after Trinity, and S. Philip and S. James.

But the diction is a mere symbol of the large-hearted sympathy which includes all creation within its embrace, and sees the consecration of God's Presence on every side. The whole of the material world is "a book, to show how God Himself is found"; it is the means by which lawless and perplexed souls are "tuned to hymns of perfect love." It has this power by creation, but redemption has given it a fresh glow:

Thenceforth to eyes of high desire
The meanest things below,
As with a seraph's robe of fire
Invested, burn and glow.

Not only the mountain and the sea have their voices, but cheap forms and common hues in the snowdrop, the rosebud, the willow, the red-breast, the nightingale, can speak of God, can witness to His Love, and preach contentment's power.¹

¹ Compare especially Septuagesima Sunday, Easter Day, Whitsunday, the First Sunday after Epiphany, the Second and Fourth Sundays after Trinity.

So, within the world of humanity, every human life has its value to the Christian :

Even so, who loves the Lord aright,
No soul of man can worthless find ;
All will be precious in his sight,
Since Christ on all hath shined.¹

And every part of life is sacred. Not only is this true of the innocent brightness of the infant's face, in which God's Presence is nigher to us than even in the twilight stars or the moist flowers at even, and of the calm old age of those who are waiting their summons to the sky ; but even the dull weary task of middle life, when the brightness of youth is gone and the repose of old age has not come, is consecrated by the memory of Christ's ministry.²

So again while he is essentially the poet of home and of married life, telling how

Sweet is the smile of home ; the mutual look
When hearts are of each other sure ;
Sweet all the joys that crowd the household nook,
The haunt of all affections pure ,

how the love of mother and son has been specially consecrated by Christ's example, and what is the secret of true brotherhood and true comradeship ;³ yet perhaps the richest and most

¹ Second Sunday after Trinity.

² Holy Innocents' Day, Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity, Holy Baptism, Catechism (child life): S. Philip and S. James (middle age): All Saints' Day (old age.)

³ Sexagesima Sunday, First Sunday in Lent, Wednesday before Easter, Matrimony, (husband and wife): The Annunciation (mother and son): Trinity Sunday, S. Andrew's Day, (brothers): S. Simon and S. Jude (friends) melodious of all his poems, that for S. Matthew's Day, is devoted to those hermits blest and holy maids,

The nearest Heaven on earth,
Who talk with God in shadowy glades
Free from rude care and mirth.

While he sings mainly of the joy of country life, yet that same poem shows that Christ's presence can be found within city and commercial life :

There are in this loud stunning tide
Of human care and crime,
With whom the melodies abide
Of the everlasting chime ;
Who carry music in their heart
Through dusky lane and wrangling mart,
Plying their daily task with busier feet,
Because their secret souls a holy strain repeat.

There is no touch of Puritan otherworldliness here: "brightest art" as well as "sweetest nature" offers its votive incense to God: architecture and music are drawn into the Church's service: to poetry it is given

God's own work to do on earth,
(If the word be not too bold),
Giving virtue a new birth,
And a life that ne'er grows old.

History is the record of "God teaching love and fear"; and thus all classical poetry witnesses to a truth beyond itself: for "thoughts beyond their thought to those high Bards were given." The history of Pagan religions and of Judaism is brought into line with Christianity, while the Christian centuries supply the portraits of the student S. Jerome, the Christian kings S. Louis and King Charles the First, the meek biographer Isaac Walton, the saintly theologian and confessor Henry Hammond.¹ It may be doubted whether any devotional book, except the Psalter itself, brings so wide and varied a set of themes within the range of meditation and praise. One motto of the book might well be the words of S. Paul: "Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving," or the author's own words:

There is no light but Thine; with Thee all beauty glows.

(2) Such is the first characteristic, a very bright characteristic; but equally marked is the intensity of sad feeling. Experience has taught the poet that "dreary were this earth, if earth were all." He has himself told us elsewhere that he was by nature inclined to melancholy, "to a certain humour . . . proud and fantastic, which I find very often at hand forbidding me to enjoy the good things and pursue the generous studies which a kind Providence throws so richly in my way."² The poems bear witness that it had required a struggle on his part to break with worldly ambitions and earthly hopes,¹ and that the sorrow of unrequited love had sunk deep into his heart.² He felt keenly, too, the loss of loved friends by death; but keenest of all is the sorrow for sin, the pang of remorse. It is the sense of sin in himself which makes him feel unworthy to read "one page of Nature's beautiful book"; it is this which fills him with that terrible sense of loneliness, which makes him shrink from the society of the pure and innocent;³ it is the presence of sin in the Church which makes him melancholy and despondent at moments for her future, and leads him to assume that "the Church is in a state of decay"; it is the universal presence of sin which gives a note of sadness to the blithest strains of Nature; and makes him lay stress on the terrific justice of God's punishments.⁴

¹ Third Sunday after Epiphany (architecture and music): Third Sunday in Lent and Palm Sunday (poetry): Fifth Sunday in Lent (history): The Circumcision (Jewish History): The Epiphany (Pagan History): First Sunday in Advent, King Charles, The Restoration (Church History).

² Letter to J. T. Coleridge, "Memoir," p. 66. Dean Paget quotes him as one who in modern times had conquered the tendency to "accidie." "The Spirit of Discipline," p. 35.

(3) But there is yet a third equally-marked characteristic, the faith in God's forgiving and restoring love; the faith that mercy rejoiceth against justice, that innocence and brightness can be recovered by penitence. Bishop Butler has pointed out that there is an element of mercy or compassion in the original constitution of the world, and he has treated the Atonement of Our Lord as being the climax of this

¹ First Sunday after Easter, Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity.

² Monday and Wednesday before Easter.

³ Septuagesima Sunday, Ash-Wednesday, Third and Twenty-fourth Sundays after Trinity.

⁴ First Sunday after Christmas, Second Sunday in Lent.

element.¹ It is impossible to say whether in this, as in so many other respects, Keble is consciously indebted to the author of "The Analogy"; but it is certain that the thought finds nowhere a more frequent and a more poetical expression than in "The Christian Year." Let us listen to the choir that sings of mercy. There is the nightingale reproving man's sadness with joyous cheer; the gentle breezes whispering that love yet lives; the gentle rainbow soothing the wearied sight; the lilies of the field soothing in sorrow on life's downward way; there is solace in every star and every cottage hearth: there is the sympathy of kind friends, of bosoms waiting to receive our sighs, who love us and lead us to hope in God's forgiveness: there is happiness as we watch some placid holy deathbed; the Church adds her soothing lay, the soothing charm of her Eucharistic and Burial services; the guardian spirits of the dead cheer the lonely room; the saints by sweet remembrance soothe our woes: our angel friends will be with us at the judgment: and all these lead us on with hope and faith into the Presence of the Lord Himself. And though we may not have that perilous sense of assurance, which would lead us to relax our efforts,² yet we may rest on the sense of His individual pardoning love: His atoning death gives us safety: our selfish sorrow is purified into unselfish penitence; there comes the sweet repose of hearts repenting; the princely heart of innocence is given back to the contrite: it becomes wrong to brood over the past and cherish remorseful thoughts: it is our privilege and our duty to outlive years of folly by a life of grateful Love.

¹ "The Analogy," Part ii. chap. 5.

² Compare the Sixth Sunday after Epiphany and the Fourth Sunday after Easter. The same thought of the danger of trusting to our feelings for salvation is strongly expressed in a sermon preached on Dec. 14, 1823. "Sermons Occasional and Parochial," xv., esp p. 185.

Of a truth it was not in vain that he had wooed the soothing art.

We may reach somewhat the same result by a different process. It is a most interesting study to read the poems in chronological order; and, although it is true that the intention to fit the poems into particular niches in the Christian year interferes a little with their spontaneity, yet this really only applies to the later poems, and much of human interest is gained by this process for the appreciation of the volume.¹

The earliest poem, that for the Purification, dates from 1819. As early as 1820 it was the writer's practice to keep the poems in a fair-copy book as though for publication at some future time; ² in 1825 friends induced him to prepare them at once for publication; the preface was written on May 30, 1827, and the volume appeared directly afterwards. In 1828 a third edition appeared containing as additional matter, six poems on the Occasional services. The composition of the whole volume then falls within the years 1819-1828. The circumstances of Mr Keble's life suggest a division of these years into three periods, the first extending from 1819-1823, the second from 1823-1825, and the last from 1825-1828.

¹ In Appendix II. will be found a chronological list of the Poems. This is in the main the same as that already published in my "Biography of John Keble," but in a few details I have been able to make it completer and more accurate.

² Appendix I. contains an account of this and other MSS. of "The Christian Year."

During the first period Keble was an active tutor at Oriel College, Oxford. One trace of this university life is to be found in the circumstances which caused the poem for S. John's Day;¹ the deaths of his friend Coleridge's child, and of his friend Patteson's wife in 1820, seem to be alluded to in the poem for the Wednesday before Easter, and a visit paid to Malvern and Aberystwith in 1822 has inspired his only poem on mountain scenery, that for the Twentieth Sunday after Trinity. This period has produced the brightest and most hopeful of the poems; in style a few are a little more prosaic than the later poems, but the majority are clear, melodious, and happy. They begin with the praise of purity and lowliness; they include the greater number of the poems on Nature; they tell of its symbolism, its sadness, its pervading throb of Love; they speak of the Presence of Christ in Nature, in History, in wedded life, in celibate life, in city life, and in country life, of the happiness that springs from sacrifice, and of the permanence of Christian joy.

The second period, from May 1823 to

¹ See the note there (p. 26).

September 1825 covers the time when he was living at Southrop in Gloucestershire, in pastoral charge of that and of the two neighbouring parishes; the time when he took Froude and Wilberforce and Isaac Williams as pupils in his house. No doubt it was a time of much happiness, for was it not then that the gardener made his comment on the party: "There is Master, the greatest boy of them all"? but it was marked withal by two great sorrows: it began with his mother's death (May 11, 1823); it ended with the refusal of an offer of marriage by a lady whom he had long wished to make his wife. At the same time he was growing more and more dissatisfied with the low spiritual tone which prevailed in the Church, and the Erastian spirit in which the State was prepared to deal with her. All these influences have left their mark upon the Poems: that for the Annunciation tells of the sacredness of a mother's love: those for the Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity and for Holy Innocents' Day show that pastoral love for children which was destined to produce the "Lyra Innocentium": the chief Nature Poem (First Sunday after Epiphany) preaches content: God's consecration is on suffering, doubt, and punishment: the lesson of sweet peace is rather in all to be resigned than blest: the weary task of middle life is dwelt upon, and the sad loneliness of each heart: there is more sadness for the Church itself; the signs of coming judgment are pointed out: one of the latest poems of this period (Sunday next before Advent) tells the secret of much of the utterances of the time; they come from

A bosom freshly taught to grieve
For lavished hours and love misspent.

The final period, from October 1825 to March 1828 is of a more mixed character. Commencing with the year when he was curate at Hursley, the year which an intimate friend has characterised as "the brightest and most sunshiny" period of his life,¹ it was broken by what was probably the greatest sorrow of his early life, the sudden death of his favourite sister in September 1826, and the rest of the time was passed by him quietly at Fairford as curate to his father. The time was not so prolific as the last period, and the results were varied. Two of the most perfect and happy of all the poems sprang from it: that for the Monday before Easter tells of Christ's personal love for every individual soul; that for the Fifteenth Sunday after Trinity traces the secret of the beauty of Nature to its simple trust in God. But there is still the sense of sad loneliness, of the reproaching conscience, of the desire for forgiveness, and the attractive power of the Cross becomes stronger to him (Good Friday). The style is less clear, some of the poems give the impression of being written, as it were, to order, with a view to completing the volume; but, as he himself tells us in the Advertisement, the necessity of dealing with the Occasional Services in which the Church touches personal and domestic life, brought home to him, even more than before, the soothing tendency of the Prayer Book, which it was his chief purpose to exhibit.

¹ J. T. Coleridge: "Memoir," p. 128.

Thus the chronological study of the poems leads us to emphasise the same notes of consecration, suffering, and soothing, which we have reached before, and seems to justify us in placing them in that order.

Such notes show how fitted the book is to deepen devotion, but there is one class of people above all others, for whose help it is most adapted. It is "an admirable handbook for the parish priest, because written by one who himself laboured through the greater part of his ministerial career as a parish priest."¹

This would be sufficiently obvious from the points already drawn out: it is the parish priest who more than any one else needs to realise the consecration of all life, the value of each individual soul, the seriousness of sin, the possibility and methods of bringing home the message of forgiveness, the high ideal of the Church. But his peculiar needs are more specially dealt with; the ideal of God's chosen priest is sketched in the poem for S. Matthias, that of "Comfort's true son," in those for S. Barnabas and for the Visitation of the Sick.

¹ "The Poetry of Keble as a guide to the Clergy in their Pastoral work:" by C. C. Mackarness (York, 1891), p. 8. This interesting pamphlet draws its illustrations from the "Lyra Innocentium" as well as from "The Christian Year." The pastoral allusions in "The Christian Year" are excellently drawn out in "The Country Clergyman's Ideal," by P. G. Medd. (S.P.C.K., 1887.)

The life of the Lord is sketched as a pattern of the pastor's work: the story of the false prophet bids him persevere to the end; that of Elijah teaches him to win sinners by soft, meek, tender ways, and to be content to work on without the sight of results. His eye must be lifted above earth that he may live an angel's life on earth: his daily work is to bear his Cross nor count it loss; he must sacrifice all hope of ease or praise; he must patiently travail in second birth of souls that will not be redeemed: he must preach the sternness of God's judgments, for souls may be lost while his heart is in the world, and God is "angered worst with holy things profaned and cursed."¹ But he has his special encouragements too: the Incarnation comes with a special message of hope and comfort to him; the lowly couch of sickness teaches him patience; the sight of a placid, holy death brings happiness to him; Christ is with him, and is able to bless, even in moments of apparent failure and disappointment; the spirit given in Ordination guides his pastoral warfare and wakes him when tempted to slumber; it teaches and enlightens the clergy

Till they with open heart and free
Teach all Thy word in all its power.²

¹ Compare the Second Sunday in Advent, Second Sunday in Lent, first Sunday after Easter, Tuesday in Whitsun-week, Eighth, Ninth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Twenty-first Sundays after Trinity.

² Compare Christmas Day, Tuesday in Easter week, Fifth Sunday after Trinity, Catechism, Ordination.

This list of allusions to the priestly life might easily be prolonged: but after all it is only by experience, by personal reading and meditation, that any book can gain a devotional value. It is enough to indicate the path which will lead to sights of beauty. The traveller must climb it himself, in order to see the view. This at least has become clear, that "The Christian Year" is a book which will always appeal to the educated and cultivated intellect; that it will appeal with special force to all who have the responsibility of teaching religious truth; but its appeal will not cease here. As long as men's minds are touched by the peaceful and consoling side of Nature; as long as there is reverence felt for the poor and simple; as long as there is suffering and disappointment and death in the world, so long will "The Christian Year" live in the strength of that soothing art

Which only souls in sufferings tried
Bear to their suffering brethren's side.

WALTER LOCK.

This edition is in the main a reprint of that published by Messrs Methuen in 1895; but several mistakes in that have been corrected and additional illustrations of Mr Keble's language have been added. For these I am mainly indebted to others, to the writer of an article in the Church Quarterly Review (July 1896), and to private correspondents, especially to Mrs INGE, of Worcester College, Oxford; the Rev. E. MARSHALL, of Sandford, S. Martin; and the Rev. JULIAN MORETON, who has supplied a slight emendation in the poem for S. Matthias' Day. The chief additions will be found in the Morning Hymn and the poems for Christmas Day, the Third Sunday after Epiphany, Palm Sunday, Monday in Whitsun Week, Seventh Sunday after Trinity, S. Matthias' Day, S. Peter's Day, S. Simon and S. Jude's Day, S. Matthew's Day, The Churching of Women. W. L.

1898.

APPENDIX I

MSS. OF "THE CHRISTIAN YEAR"

The poems of "The Christian Year" were circulated among friends from the time of their composition; consequently many, no doubt, still exist in private hands. But in addition to these stray copies, three MSS. are preserved in the Library of Keble College, Oxford, which have been consulted for this edition. They show considerable variant readings, but as a rule these are unimportant, or have been deliberately altered by the author. No attempt has therefore been made to offer a complete list of such variants, but only a few have been noted, which seemed to have some special features of interest. I have entitled these MSS. K. 1, K. 2, and R., and referred to them as such, when they differ. If they agree, they are classed together as "MSS." K. 1 is far the most valuable: it consists of almost the whole of the poems, written out by Keble himself, soon after composition, in seven small notebooks. The first notebook was begun at Whalton in Northumberland, on July 30, 1820; the last is dated 1827. In this MS. there are a few explanatory sidenotes, to one of which I am indebted for the note on p. 109, infra.

K. 2 is of equal value, but of less compass. It is a small volume, "MS. Verses chiefly on Sacred Subjects," written out by Keble himself and given by him to Mrs M. H. Pruen in 1822, and containing with other Poems, the earliest thirty "hymns" of "The Christian Year." They end with the Morning Hymn, Sept. 19, 1822.

R. is a large notebook written out by Mrs Samuel Rickards of Ulcombe. She received the poems from time to time as they were written from the Misses Tucker, friends of Keble's sisters, and copied them into this book. This contains nearly the whole of the volume, but, as might be expected, is less accurate than Keble's own copies.

A fourth MS., the private property of F. G. Champernowne, Esq., contains nearly the whole volume, written out, before its publication, by the Rev. Thomas Keble, the author's brother. It is of much the same value as R.

APPENDIX II

THE POEMS OF "THE CHRISTIAN YEAR"
ARRANGED IN ORDER OF COMPOSITION

1819.	Oct. 10.	The Purification.
"	Dec. 27.	S. John's Day.
"	?	Whitsunday.
"	?	Nineteenth Sunday after Trinity.
"	?	Septuagesima Sunday.
"	?	Tenth Sunday after Trinity.
1820.	Aug. 20.	Fourth Sunday after Trinity.
"	Nov. 25.	The Evening Hymn.
"	?	S. Mark's Day.
"	?	S. Matthias' Day.
"	?	Palm Sunday.
1821.	Aug. 13 or 18.	Wednesday before Easter.
"	Sept.	S. Michael and all Angels.
"	Sept. 16.	Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity.
"	?	Fourth Sunday after Easter.
"	?	The Dedication.
"	?	Fifth Sunday after Trinity.
"	?	S. Bartholomew's Day.
"	?	Fourteenth Sunday after Trinity
"	?	Second Sunday after Epiphany.

1822.	Jan. 27.	S. Andrew's Day.
"	March 2.	The Conversion of S. Paul.
"	April 6.	S. Luke's Day.
"	April 18.	Easter Day.
"	Aug. 7.	Second Sunday after Trinity.
"	Aug. 13.	Ninth Sunday after Trinity.
"	Aug. 22 or 23.	Twelfth Sunday after Trinity.
"	Sept. 14.	S. Matthew's Day.
"	Sept. 20.	The Morning Hymn.
"	Sept. 27.	Burial of the Dead (written for the Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity).
"	Oct. 11.	Seventeenth Sunday after Trinity
"	?	Third Sunday in Lent (an early draft).
"	?	Fourth Sunday in Advent.
1823.	June 5.	Thursday before Easter.
"	July 15.	Twenty - fifth Sunday after Trinity.
"	Sept. 25.	Twenty - first Sunday after Trinity.
"	Sept. 8 or 28.	Eleventh Sunday after Trinity.
"	Oct. 6.	Eighteenth Sunday after Trinity.
"	Oct. 7.	S. James's Day.
"	Oct. 7.	Twentieth Sunday after Trinity.
"	Dec. 26.	Advent Sunday.
1824.	Jan. 5.	The Holy Innocents.
"	Jan. 20.	The Circumcision.
"	Jan. 20.	The Epiphany.
"	Jan. 20 or 26.	Second Sunday in Advent.
"	Jan. 26.	Third Sunday in Advent.
"	Feb. 9.	S. Thomas' Day.
"	Feb. 18.	Sexagesima Sunday.
"	March 6.	Quinquagesima Sunday.
"	March 9.	First Sunday in Lent.
"	April 24.	Fifth Sunday in Lent.
"	May 17.	First Sunday after Epiphany.
"	May 18.	Fourth Sunday in Lent.
"	June 3.	Fifth Sunday after Easter.
"	June 25.	Sunday after Ascension Day.

1824.	?	Second Sunday in Lent.
"	?	Sixth Sunday after Epiphany.
"	?	Third Sunday after Epiphany.
"	?	S. Stephen's Day.
"	?	Christmas Day.
"	?	Easter Eve.
"	?	Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity.
1825.	?	Tuesday in Whitsun-week.
"	May 15 or 16.	S. Peter's Day.
"	June 7.	Twenty - fourth Sunday after Trinity.
"	June 18.	Ascension Day.
"	June 25.	First Sunday after Easter. [but August 1818.—R.]
"	July 4.	S. Barnabas' Day.
"	July 14.	Sunday before Advent.
"	Aug. 3.	S. Philip and S. James's Day.
"	Aug. 15.	First Sunday after Christmas.
"	Oct. 23.	All Saints' Day.
"	Nov. 4.	Seventh Sunday after Trinity.
"	Nov. 12.	Twenty - third Sunday after Trinity.
"	Nov. 29.	Second Sunday after Christmas.
"	Dec. 19.	Fourth Sunday after Epiphany.
"	or 1826.	Second Sunday after Easter.
1826.	Jan. 15.	Monday before Easter. [1825. —R.]
"	Jan. 22.	Ash-Wednesday.
"	Jan. 27.	First Sunday after Trinity.
"	Feb. 3.	Fifteenth Sunday after Trinity.
"	Feb. 7.	Twenty - second Sunday after Trinity.
"	Feb. 12.	Monday in Easter Week.
"	March.	The Annunciation.
"	March.	Trinity Sunday.
"	March 10.	Tuesday in Easter Week.
"	March 15.	Third Sunday after Easter.
"	April 3.	S. Simon and S. Jude's Day.
"	April 7.	Third Sunday after Trinity.
"	April 11.	S. John Baptist's Day.
"	April 13.	Holy Baptism.

1826.	April 15.	Sixth Sunday after Trinity.
"	May 9.	Fifth Sunday after Epiphany.
"	?	Good Friday. (An early form of this was written in 1825.)
"	?	Monday in Whitsun-week.
1827.	Jan. 31.	Holy Communion.
"	Feb. 9.	Third Sunday in Lent.
"	Feb. 16.	Catechism.
"	Feb. 21.	Confirmation.
"	?	Matrimony.
"	?	Visitation and Communion of the Sick.
"	?	Eighth Sunday after Trinity.
"	March 9.	Commination.
"	March 13.	Churching of Women.
"	March 17.	Tuesday before Easter.
"	Nov. 11.	Gunpowder Treason.
"	?	King Charles the Martyr	} Added in the third edition, 1828.
"	?	Forms of Prayer to be used at Sea.
"	?	The Accession
"	?	The Restoration of the Royal Family.
1828.	March 28.	Ordination.

It has been suggested with great probability that the exact title of the volume was borrowed from Sermon iv. "The Christian Year," of "A Christian Guide for Plain People," by the author's great friend, the Reverend J. Miller (Oxford, 1820). The sermon shows how the cycle of the Christian seasons tends to build up a practical religion in simple people. [Notes and queries V. xi., p. 224.]

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

...

THE CHRISTIAN YEAR

NOTE

IN the preliminary note prefixed to each poem, the title, wherever one is given, is Mr Keble's own. The analysis of the poem is due to the present editor.

In the notes at the foot of each page, those signed J. K. are Mr Keble's own, and are reprinted from earlier editions. The present editor is responsible for the rest

"MSS." signifies that a variant reading is found in all the three manuscripts described in Appendix I.

K. 1, K. 2, or R., signifies that the variation occurs only in one or other of these manuscripts.

The reader is indebted to the help which I have received from my friend, the Rev. F. A. Clarke, Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, who has revised the proofs and helped me with valuable suggestions

ADVERTISEMENT

NEXT to a sound rule of faith, there is nothing of so much consequence as a sober standard of feeling in matters of practical religion: and it is the peculiar happiness of the Church of England to possess, in her authorised formularies, an ample and secure provision for both. But in times of much leisure and unbounded curiosity, when excitement of every kind is sought after with a morbid eagerness, this part of the merit of our Liturgy is likely in some measure to be lost, on many even of its sincere admirers: the very tempers which most require such discipline, setting themselves, in general, most decidedly against it.

The object of the present publication will be attained, if any person find assistance from it in bringing his own thoughts and feelings into more entire unison with those recommended and exemplified in the Prayer Book. The work does not furnish a complete series of compositions; being, in many parts, rather adapted with more or less propriety to the successive portions of the Liturgy, than originally suggested by them. Something has been added at the end concerning the several Occasional Services: which constitute, from their personal and

xxxvi ADVERTISEMENT

domestic nature, the most perfect instance of that soothing tendency in the Prayer Book, which it is the chief purpose of these pages to exhibit.

May 30th, 1827.

MORNING

His compassions fail not. They are new every morning. Lamentations iii. 22, 23.

MORNING HYMN. Sept. 19 or Sept. 20, 1822.

The main thought of this meditation is the happiness of sacrifice. Nature pays its daily tribute to Heaven, and God provides for man a daily sacrifice in the path of ordinary life; if only he has the self-denial to offer it to God, he is drawn daily nearer to God. Cf. the Morning Hymn by John Austin, 1668. (Palgrave's "Treasury of Sacred Song," clxiv.)

HUES of the rich unfolding morn,¹
That, ere the glorious sun be born,
By some soft touch invisible
Around his path are taught to swell²;—

Thou rustling breeze so fresh and gay,
That dancest forth at opening day,
And brushing by with joyous wing,
Wakenest each little leaf to sing;—

Ye fragrant clouds of dewy steam,
By which deep grove and tangled stream
Pay, for soft rains in season given,
Their tribute to the genial heaven;—

¹ "Hues": "gleams."—MSS.

² Swell. The first Edition reads "dwell," but all MSS. "swell"; this should be compared with S. Matthew's Day, st. 8, which was written within a week of this poem.

Why waste your treasures of delight
 Upon our thankless, joyless sight ;
 Who day by day to sin awake,
 Seldom of Heaven and you partake ?¹

Oh ! timely happy, timely wise,
 Hearts that with rising morn arise !
 Eyes that the beam celestial view,
 Which evermore makes all things new ?²

New every morning is the love
 Our wakening and uprising prove ;
 Through sleep and darkness safely brought,
 Restored to life, and power, and thought.

New mercies, each returning day,
 Hover around us while we pray ;
 New perils past, new sins forgiven,
 New thoughts of God, new hopes of Heaven.

If on our daily course our mind
 Be set to hallow all we find,
 New treasures still, of countless price,
 God will provide for sacrifice.³

Old friends, old scenes, will lovelier be,
 As more of Heaven in each we see :⁴

¹ Between stanzas 4 and 5 all the MSS. insert—
 “ Hence the poor sinner still has found
 Life but one dull unvarying round,
 And mourned ere half his course was run
 That ‘ nought is new beneath the sun.’ ”

The stanza was printed in the proof sheet of ed. i.,
 but was struck out in the final revision.

² Rev. xxi. 5.

³ Cf. Gen. xxii. 8. My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering.

⁴ “ In each ”: “ on earth.”—R.

Some softening gleam of love and prayer
Shall dawn on every cross and care.

As for some dear familiar strain
Untired we ask, and ask again,
Ever, in its melodious store,
Finding a spell unheard before ;

Such is the bliss of souls serene,
When they have sworn, and steadfast mean,
Counting the cost, in all to espy
Their God, in all themselves deny.

O could we learn that sacrifice,
What lights would all around us rise !
How would our hearts with wisdom talk
Along Life's dullest dreariest walk ! ¹

We need not bid, for cloistered cell,
Our neighbour and our work farewell,
Nor strive to wind ourselves too high ²
For sinful man beneath the sky : ³

The trivial round, the common task,
Would furnish all we ought to ask ;
Room to deny ourselves ; a road ⁴
To bring us, daily, nearer God.

¹ Cf. S. Luke xxiv. 32. Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way ?

² "Ourselves": "our souls."—K.

³ It is interesting to compare this stanza with S. Matthew's Day, st. 1, written within a week of this poem.

⁴ "Deny": "subdue."—MSS.

EVENING

Seek we no more ; content with these,
 Let present Rapture, Comfort, Ease,
 As Heaven shall bid them, come and go :—
 The secret this of Rest below.

Only, O Lord, in Thy dear love
 Fit us for perfect Rest above ;
 And help us, this and every day,
 To live more nearly as we pray.

EVENING

Abide with us : for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. S. Luke xxiv. 29.

EVENING HYMN. Nov. 25, 1820.

A personal prayer that Christ the True Light may be with the poet in his meditation, studies, and conversation by day and in his sleep by night (St. 1-8) passes into intercession for the church, the state, the clergy, sinners, the sick, the poor (9-14).

The poem was very probably composed in two parts.
 Both in K. and R. a line is drawn between stanzas 8 and 9, and in R. "Sunday" is added at the beginning of the second part. The words "See Bishop Andrewes' Devotions" are added in K. and K. 2, probably with reference to the subjects of intercession in his Precatio
Vespertina (pp. 41, 42, Ed. Oxon. : 1853).

'TIS gone, that bright and orbèd blaze,
 Fast fading from our wistful gaze ;
 Yon mantling cloud has hid from sight
 The last faint pulse of quivering light.

In darkness and in weariness
 The traveller on his way must press,
 No gleam to watch on tree or tower,
 Whiling away the lonesome hour.

Sun of my soul! ¹ Thou Saviour dear,
 It is not night if Thou be near:
 Oh! may no earth-born cloud arise
 To hide Thee from Thy servant's eyes.

When round Thy wondrous works below
 My searching rapturous glance I throw,
 Tracing out Wisdom, Power, and Love,
 In earth or sky, in stream or grove;—

Or by the light Thy words disclose
 Watch Time's full river as it flows,
 Scanning Thy gracious Providence,
 Where not too deep for mortal sense:—²

When with dear friends sweet talk I hold,
 And all the flowers of life unfold;
 Let not my heart within me burn,
 Except in all I Thee discern.³

When the soft dews of kindly sleep
 My wearied eyelids gently steep,
 Be my last thought, how sweet to rest
 For ever on my Saviour's breast.

Abide with me from morn till eve,
 For without Thee I cannot live:
 Abide with me when night is nigh,
 For without Thee I dare not die.

¹ Clement of Alexandria ("Protrept." c. vi.) calls The Word of God "the sun of the soul," ὁ δὲ λόγος ὁ ὑγιῆς ὅς ἐστιν ἡλιος ψυχῆς, which may possibly be the origin of the phrase here.

² "Mortal": "feeble."—MSS.

³ Cf. S. Luke xxiv. 32 (p. 3 supra)

Thou Framer of the light and dark,
Steer through the tempest Thine own ark :
Amid the howling wintry sea
We are in port if we have Thee.¹

The Rulers of this Christian land,
'Twixt Thee and us ordained to stand,—
Guide Thou their course, O Lord, aright,
Let all do all as in Thy sight.

Oh! by Thine own sad burthen, borne
So meekly up the hill of scorn,
Teach Thou Thy Priests their daily cross
To bear as Thine, nor count it loss!

If some poor wandering child of Thine
Have spurned, to-day, the voice divine,
Now, Lord, the gracious work begin ;
Let him no more lie down in sin.²

Watch by the sick : enrich the poor
With blessings from Thy boundless store :
Be every mourner's sleep to-night
Like infants' slumbers, pure and light.³

Come near and bless us when we wake,
Ere through the world our way we take ;
Till in the ocean of Thy love
We lose ourselves in Heaven above.

¹ " Though winds be rough and waves be high,
It will not sink, if Thou art by."—MSS.

Cf. S. John vi. 21. Then they willingly received him into the ship, and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

² " Let him not sleep to-night in sin."—MSS.

³ " There is something calm and hushing in the very rhythm."—Miss Yonge. K. 1 and K. 2 read ' infants' slumbers,' but in the first edition it was printed ' infant's.'

ADVENT SUNDAY

Now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.—Romans xiii. 11.

ADVENT SUNDAY. Dec. 26, 1823.

The royal entry of Christ into Jerusalem is compared with His reign in Heaven and with His future return. Then He was followed both by the crowd of selfish hearts untrue and also by the few childlike souls who revered Him: so from Heaven he has seen both the blast of error in the early ages, the tide of crime in the middle ages, the light without love of the later centuries, and also the loving student, the true Christian King, the devout lover of nature and historian of the Saints. There will be the same dividing line when He appears, and the poem is a call to true Christians to be ready to meet Him.

AWAKE—again the Gospel-trump is blown—
 From year to year it swells with louder tone,
 From year to year the signs of wrath
 Are gathering round the Judge's path,
 Strange words fulfilled, and mighty works achieved,
 And truth in all the world both hated and believed.¹

Awake! why linger in the gorgeous town,
 Sworn liegemen of the Cross and thorny crown?
 Up from your beds of sloth for shame,
 Speed to the eastern mount like flame,²
 Nor wonder, should ye find your King in tears,
 E'en with the loud Hosanna ringing in His ears.³

¹ "Truth": faith.—K. R. ² "Eastern": holy.—K. R.

³ S. Luke xix. 41. Cf. the Tenth Sunday after Trinity.

Alas! no need to rouse them: ¹ long ago
 They are gone forth to swell Messiah's show:
 With glittering robes and garlands sweet
 They strew the ground beneath His feet:
 All but your hearts are there—O doomed to prove
 The arrows winged in Heaven for Faith that will not love! ²

Meanwhile He paces through the adoring crowd,
 Calm as the march of some majestic cloud,
 That o'er wild scenes of ocean-war
 Holds its still course in heaven afar:
 Even so, heart-searching Lord, as years roll on,
 Thou keepest silent watch from Thy triumphal
 throne:

Even so, the world is thronging round to gaze
 On the dread vision of the latter days,
 Constrained to own Thee, but in heart
 Prepared to take Barabbas' part:
 "Hosanna" now, to-morrow "Crucify,"
 The changeful burden still of their rude lawless
 cry. ³

Yet in that throng of selfish hearts untrue
 Thy sad eye rests upon Thy faithful few,
 Children and childlike souls are there,
 Blind Bartimeus' humble prayer,

¹ "To rouse them": "of wakening."—K. R.

² "O set to prove

True confessors in faith, worst hypocrites in love."—K. R.

³ "Is still the import of their saintly-sounding cry."
 —K. R.

And Lazarus wakened from his four days' sleep,
Enduring life again, that Passover to keep.

And fast beside the olive-bordered way Stands the blest home where Jesus deigned to stay,

The peaceful home, to Zeal sincere¹

And heavenly Contemplation dear,

Where Martha loved to wait with reverence meet,

And wiser Mary lingered at Thy sacred feet.

Still through decaying ages as they glide,
Thou lov'st Thy chosen remnant to divide;²

Sprinkled along the waste of years

Full many a soft green isle appears:

Pause where we may upon the desert road,
Some shelter is in sight, some sacred safe abode.

When withering blasts of error swept the sky,³
And Love's last flower seemed fain to droop and die,

How sweet, how lone the ray benign

On sheltered nooks of Palestine!

Then to his early home did Love repair,
And cheered his sickening heart with his own native air.⁴

¹ "Peaceful": "favoured."—K. R.

² "So still through ages of unblest decay
Thou dost divide thy remnant, Lord, alway."—K. R.

³ Arianism in the fourth century.—J. K.

⁴ S. Jerome i. 123.—J. K. The reference is to two letters in which Paula, Eustochium, and S. Jerome invite Marcella to leave Rome and to join them in the sacred quiet of Bethlehem.

Years roll away : again the tide of crime
Has swept Thy footsteps from the favoured clime.

Where shall the holy Cross find rest ?

On a crowned monarch's mailèd breast :¹
Like some bright angel o'er the darkling scene,
Through court and camp he holds his heavenward course serene.

A fouler vision yet ; an age of light,
Light without love, glares on the aching sight :
O who can tell how calm and sweet,
Meek Walton ! shews thy green retreat,
When wearied with the tale thy times disclose,
The eye first finds thee out in thy secure repose ?²

S. Louis in the thirteenth century.—J. K.

¹ Isaac Walton, 1593-1683. Author of "The Complete Angler," and of "The Lives of John Donne, Richard Hooker, Henry Wotton, George Herbert." Compare Wordsworth's Ecclesiastical Sonnets, iii. 5, "Walton's Book of Lives."

"There are no colours in the fairest sky
So fair as these. The feather, whence the pen
Was shaped that traced the lives of these good men,
Dropped from an Angel's wing. With moistened eye
We read of faith and purest charity
In Statesmen, Priest, and humble Citizen.
O could we copy their mild virtues, then
What joy to live, what blessedness to die !
Methinks their very names shine still and bright ;
Apart—like glow-worms on a summer night ;
Or lonely tapers where from far they fling
A guiding ray ; or seen—like stars on high
Satellites burning in a lucid ring—
Around meek Walton's heavenly memory."

Thus bad and good their several warnings give
 Of His approach, whom none may see and live :¹
 Faith's ear, with awful still delight,
 Counts them like minute-bells at night,
 Keeping the heart awake till dawn of morn,
 While to her funeral pile this aged world is borne.

But what are Heaven's alarms to hearts that cower
 In wilful slumber, deepening every hour,
 That draw their curtains closer round,
 The nearer swells the trumpet's sound ?
 Lord, ere our trembling lamps sink down and die,
 Touch us with chastening hand, and make us feel Thee nigh.

SECOND SUNDAY IN ADVENT

And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh. S. Luke xxi. 28.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES. Jan. 20,
 1824.—K. Jan. 26.—R.

Nature waits for the spring before her new life buds afresh, but the church begins her year in winter, for the Signs of Judgment are a message to her that her Saviour and her Judge is at hand, and His presence should sober mirth into resignation, and it especially calls the clergy to ply more actively their task.

NOT till the freezing blast is still,
 Till freely leaps the sparkling rill,
 And gales sweep soft from summer skies,
 As o'er a sleeping infant's eyes

¹ "Thus bad and good alternate warnings give
 Of the dread day which none shall see and live."—K. R.

A mother's kiss ; ere calls like these,
 No sunny gleam awakes the trees,
 Nor dare the tender flowerets show
 Their bosoms to the uncertain glow.

Why then, in sad and wintry time,
 Her heavens all dark with doubt and crime,
 Why lifts the Church her drooping head,
 As though her evil hour were fled ?
 Is she less wise than leaves of spring,
 Or birds that cower with folded wing ?
 What sees she in this lowering sky
 To tempt her meditative eye ?

She has a charm, a word of fire,
 A pledge of love that cannot tire ;
 By tempests, earthquakes, and by wars,
 By rushing waves and falling stars,
 By every sign her Lord foretold,
 She sees the world is waxing old,¹
 And through that last and direst storm
 Descries by faith her Saviour's form.

Not surer does each tender gem,
 Set in the fig-tree's polished stem,
 Foreshew the summer season bland,
 Than these dread signs Thy mighty hand : ²
 But oh ! frail hearts, and spirits dark !
 The season's flight unwarn'd we mark,
 But miss the Judge behind the door,³
 For all the light of sacred lore :

¹ The world hath lost his youth, and the times
 begin to wax old. ² Esdras xiv. 10.

² Cf. S. Luke xxi. 29.

³ See S. James v. 9.

Yet is He there : beneath our eaves
 Each sound His wakeful ear receives :
 Hush, idle words, and thoughts of ill,
 Your Lord is listening : peace, be still.¹
 Christ watches by a Christian's hearth,
 Be silent, "vain deluding mirth,"²
 Till in thine altered voice be known
 Somewhat of Resignation's tone.

But chiefly ye should lift your gaze
 Above the world's uncertain haze,
 And look with calm unwavering eye
 On the bright fields beyond the sky,
 Ye, who your Lord's commission bear,
 His way of mercy to prepare :
 Angels He calls ye :³ be your strife
 To lead on earth an Angel's life.

Think not of rest ; though dreams be sweet,
 Start up, and ply your heavenward feet.
 Is not God's oath upon your head,
 Ne'er to sink back on slothful bed,
 Never again your loins untie,
 Nor let your torches waste and die,
 Till, when the shadows thickest fall,
 Ye hear your Master's midnight call ?

¹ Ita fabulantur, ut qui sciant Dominum audire.
 Tertull. "Apolog." p. 36. edit. Rigalt.—J. K.

² "Vain deluding mirth." This is doubtless a reminiscence of the first line of "Il Penseroso":

"Hence, vain deluding joys."

³ Angels. Cf. Rev. ii. 1.

THIRD SUNDAY IN ADVENT

What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind? . . . But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet. S. Matthew xi. 7, 9.

THE TRAVELLERS. Jan. 26, 1824.

Christ's Presence still broods over the scenes where He lived, and both those who travel thither and those who stay at home and try to picture the scenes to their imagination can find Him if they are seeking not pleasure or renown but the presence of God.

The poem would seem to have been suggested by some friend's intended journey to the Holy Land, or perhaps only by the author having read some book of travels in the Holy Land

WHAT went ye out to see
 O'er the rude sandy lea,
 Where stately Jordan flows by many a palm,
 Or where Gennesaret's wave
 Delights the flowers to lave,
 That o'er her western slope breathe airs of balm?

All through the summer night,
 Those blossoms red and bright¹
 Spread their soft breasts, unheeding, to the breeze,
 Like hermits watching still
 Around the sacred hill,
 Where erst our Saviour watched upon His knees.

The Paschal moon above
 Seems like a saint to rove,

¹ Oleanders: with which the western bank of the lake is said to be clothed down to the water's edge.— J. K. The original note had "rhododendrons," which was altered in consequence of the criticism in Stanley's "Sinai and Palestine," p. 371.

Left shining in the world with Christ alone ;
Below, the lake's still face
Sleeps sweetly in the embrace
Of mountains terraced high with mossy stone.

Here may we sit, and dream
Over the heavenly theme,
Till to our soul the former days return ;
Till on the grassy bed,
Where thousands once He fed,
The world's incarnate Maker we discern.

O cross no more the main,
Wandering so wild and vain,
To count the reeds that tremble in the wind,
On listless dalliance bound,
Like children gazing round,
Who on God's works no seal of Godhead find.

Bask not in courtly bower,
Or sun-bright hall of power,
Pass Babel quick, and seek the holy land—
From robes of Tyrian dye
Turn with undazzled eye
To Bethlehem's glade or Carmel's haunted strand.

Or choose thee out a cell
In Kedron's storied dell,
Beside the springs of Love, that never die ;
Among the olives kneel
The chill night-blast to feel,
And watch the moon that saw thy Master's agony.

Then rise at dawn of day,
 And wind thy thoughtful way,
 Where rested once the Temple's stately shade,
 With due feet tracing round ¹
 The city's northern bound,
 To the other holy garden, where the Lord was laid.

Who thus alternate see
 His death and victory,
 Rising and falling as on angel wings,
 They, while they seem to roam,
 Draw daily nearer home,
 Their heart untravelled still adores the King of kings.²

Or, if at home they stay,
 Yet are they, day by day,
 In spirit journeying through the glorious land,
 Not for light Fancy's reed,
 Nor Honour's purple meed,
 Nor gifted Prophet's lore, nor Science' wondrous wand.

But more than Prophet, more
 Than Angels can adore

¹ "With due feet": cf. Milton, "Il Penseroso," l. 155.

² "Their heart untravelled": i.e. though their feet travel far from their English home, their heart never leaves its true home, God, but is ever full of adoration. For the phrase compare Goldsmith's "Traveller," l. 8:

"Where'er I roam, whatever realm to see,
 My heart untravelled fondly turns to thee."

The MS. reading "And they have leave to travel from the King of kings" expresses a different thought, that their travels are blest by God, and it points the contrast with the next stanza better.

With face unveiled, is He they go to seek :
 Blessèd be God, Whose grace
 Shews Him in every place
 To homeliest hearts of pilgrims pure and meek.

FOURTH SUNDAY IN ADVENT

The eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken. Isaiah xxxii. 3.

DIMNESS. 1822 or 1823.

Here on earth it is hard to appreciate the beauty of Nature or the harmony of music, and memory fails to recall what we most wish to remember, but hereafter our eyes will be purged to see the King in His beauty, our ears will hear heaven's strains, and memory will be no longer needed. Meanwhile the dulness of our senses also spares us from the sight of much suffering, and our spiritual vision is allowed to see enough of eternal truth to train us for the future.

OF the bright things in earth and air
 How little can the heart embrace !¹
 Soft shades and gleaming lights are there—
 I know it well, but cannot trace.

Mine eye unworthy seems to read
 One page of Nature's beauteous book ;
 It lies before me, fair outspread—
 I only cast a wishful look.²

I cannot paint to Memory's eye
 The scene, the glance, I dearest love—
 Unchanged themselves, in me they die,
 Or faint, or false, their shadows prove.

¹ "Oft as I gaze on landscape fair
 In thought I feel me poor and base."—MSS.

² "Wistful."—MSS.

In vain, with dull and tuneless ear,
 I linger by soft Music's cell,
 And in my heart of hearts would hear
 What to her own she deigns to tell.

'Tis misty all, both sight and sound—
 I only know 'tis fair and sweet—
 'Tis wandering on enchanted ground
 With dizzy brow and tottering feet.

But patience! there may come a time
 When these dull ears shall scan aright
 Strains, that outring Earth's drowsy chime,
 As Heaven outshines the taper's light.

These eyes, that dazzled now and weak,
 At glancing motes in sunshine wink,
 Shall see the King's full glory break,
 Nor from the blissful vision shrink :

In fearless love and hope unloyed
 For ever on that ocean bright¹
 Empowered to gaze; and undestroyed,
 Deeper and deeper plunge in light.

Though scarcely now their laggard glance
 Reach to an arrow's flight, that day
 They shall behold, and not in trance,
 The region "very far away."²

¹ "In soberest raptures unalloyed

For ever on 'His countenance' bright."—MSS.

² Thine eyes shall see the King in His beauty: they shall behold the land that is very far off. Isaiah xxxiii. 17.

If Memory sometimes at our spell
Refuse to speak, or speak amiss,
We shall not need her where we dwell
Ever in sight of all our bliss.

Meanwhile, if over sea or sky
Some tender lights unnoticed fleet,
Or on loved features dawn and die,
Unread, to us, their lesson sweet ;

Yet are there saddening sights around,
Which Heaven, in mercy, spares us too,
And we see far in holy ground,
If duly purged our mental view.

The distant landscape draws not nigh
For all our gazing ; but the soul,
That upward looks, may still descry
Nearer, each day, the brightening goal.

And thou, too curious ear, that fain
Wouldst thread the maze of Harmony,
Content thee with one simple strain,
The lowlier, sure, the worthier thee ;

Till thou art duly trained, and taught
The concord sweet of Love divine :
Then, with that inward Music fraught,
For ever rise, and sing, and shine.

CHRISTMAS DAY

And suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God. S. Luke ii. 13.

CHRISTMAS DAY. 1824.

The angelic message of the Incarnation tells chiefly of its lowly surroundings and is first welcomed by shepherds; so it comes home still to the lowly and single heart, and strengthens Christian Pastors for their work. The thought is very similar to that of "The Shepherds," by Henry Vaughan (Palgrave's "Treasury of Sacred Song," cxxvi.). The poem seems also influenced by Jeremy Taylor's comment upon the appearance to the shepherds and to the Magi (Life of Christ, i. § 4, vol. ii. pp. 89-97, Ed. Eden). The appropriateness of the appearance to shepherds, the analogy of the pastoral office (pp. 89, 90) the simile of a stone thrown into a river (p. 92); the treatment of shepherd and sage as types of those who reach truth by natural reason or by the secrets of philosophy (p. 96) are all reproduced here.

WHAT sudden blaze of song
 Spreads o'er the expanse of Heaven?
 In waves of light it thrills along,
 The angelic signal given—
 "Glory to God!" from yonder' central fire
 Flows out the echoing lay beyond the starry quire;
 Like circles widening round
 Upon a clear blue river,
 Orb after orb, the wondrous sound
 Is echoed on for ever:
 "Glory to God on high, on earth be peace,
 And love towards men of love¹—salvation and release."

¹ I have ventured to adopt the reading of the Vulgate, as being generally known through Pergolesi's beautiful composition, "Gloria in excelsis Deo, et in terra pax hominibus bonæ voluntatis."—J. K.

Yet stay, before thou dare
 To join that festal throng ;
 Listen and mark what gentle air
 First stirred the tide of song ;
 'Tis not, "the Saviour born in David's home,
 To Whom for power and health obedient worlds should come :"—

'Tis not, "the Christ the Lord :"—
 With fixed adoring look
 The choir of Angels caught the word,
 Nor yet their silence broke :
 But when they heard the sign, where Christ should be,
 In sudden light they shone and heavenly harmony.

Wrapped in His swaddling bands,
 And in His manger laid,
 The Hope and Glory of all lands
 Is come to the world's aid :
 No peaceful home upon His cradle smiled,
 Guests rudely went and came, where slept the royal Child.¹

¹ The original MSS. vary in the last two lines and add a whole stanza ; which may be quoted, as it helps to point the contrast in stanza 6 :

"Wrapped in his swaddling bands
 And in his manger laid,
 The Hope and Glory of all lands
 Is come to the world's aid :
 Search out the lowliest mansion, meanest room,
 There shall ye find your King, nor even there at home.

But where Thou dwellest, Lord,
 No other thought should be,
 Once duly welcomed and adored,
 How should I part with Thee ?
 Bethlehem must lose Thee soon, but Thou wilt grace
 The single heart to be Thy sure abiding-place.

Thee, on the bosom laid
 Of a pure virgin mind,
 In quiet ever, and in shade,
 Shepherd and sage may find ;
 They, who have bowed untaught to Nature's sway,
 And they, who follow Truth along her star-paved way.¹

The pastoral spirits first
 Approach Thee, Babe divine,
 For they in lowly thoughts are nursed,
 Meet for Thy lowly shrine :
 Sooner than they should miss where Thou
 dost dwell,
 Angels from heaven will stoop to guide them to Thy cell.

“ The heart imbued with earth
 Is but a place of guests
 Where foul-winged thoughts of lowly birth
 Successive make their nests,
 Each in his twilight gloom with cheerless moan,
 Fluttering a little while and then for ever gone.”

¹ i.e. All who are like the shepherds of Bethlehem or the wise men from the East.

S. STEPHEN'S DAY 23

Still, as the day comes round

For Thee to be revealed,

By wakeful shepherds Thou art found,

Abiding in the field.

All through the wintry heaven and chill night air;

In music and in light Thou dawnest on their prayer.

O faint not ye for fear—

What though your wandering sheep,

Reckless of what they see and hear,

Lie lost in wilful sleep ?

High Heaven in mercy to your sad annoy
Still greets you with glad tidings of immortal joy.

Think on the eternal home,

The Saviour left for you ;

Think on the Lord most holy, come

To dwell with hearts untrue :

So shall ye tread untired His pastoral ways,
And in the darkness sing your carol of high praise.

S. STEPHEN'S DAY

He, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God. Acts vii. 55.

S. STEPHEN'S DAY. 1824, probably early in the year.

Of the triple band of martyrs, who first recognised the glory of the new-born King, S. Stephen is the one who is likest in tone and look to Him, and whose death traces anew the lines of His.

AS rays around the source of light
 Stream upward ere he glow in sight,
 And watching by his future flight
 Set the clear heavens on fire ;
 So on the King of Martyrs wait
 Three chosen bands, in royal state,¹
 And all earth owns, of good and great,
 Is gathered in that choir.

One presses on, and welcomes death :
 One calmly yields his willing breath,
 Nor slow, nor hurrying, but in faith
 Content to die or live :
 And some, the darlings of their Lord,
 Play smiling with the flame and sword,
 And, ere they speak, to His sure word Unconscious witness give.

Foremost and nearest to His throne,
 By perfect robes of triumph known,
 And likest Him in look and tone,
 The holy Stephen kneels,

¹ Wheatly on the Common Prayer, c. v. § iv. 2.
 "As there are three kinds of martyrdom, the first both in will and deed, which is the highest ; the second in will but not in deed ; the third in deed but not in will ; so the Church commemorates these martyrs in the same order : S. Stephen first, who suffered death both in will and deed ; S. John the Evangelist next, who suffered martyrdom in will but not in deed ; the holy Innocents last, who suffered in deed but not in will."—
 J. K.

With stedfast gaze, as when the sky
Flew open to his fainting eye,
Which, like a fading lamp, flashed high,
Seeing what death conceals.

Well might you guess what vision bright
Was present to his raptured sight,
Even as reflected streams of light
Their solar source betray—
The glory which our God surrounds,
The Son of Man, the atoning wounds—
He sees them all; and earth's dull bounds
Are melting fast away.

He sees them all—no other view
Could stamp the Saviour's likeness true,
Or with His love so deep embrue
Man's sullen heart and gross—
“Jesu, do Thou my soul receive:
Jesu, do Thou my foes forgive:”
He who would learn that prayer, must live
Under the holy Cross.

He, though he seem on earth to move,
Must glide in air like gentle dove,
From yon unclouded depths above
Must draw his purer breath;
Till men behold his angel face
All radiant with celestial grace,¹
Martyr all o'er, and meet to trace
The lines of Jesus' death.

¹ And all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel. Acts vi. 15.

S. JOHN'S DAY

Peter seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou me. S. John xxi. 21, 22.

S. JOHN'S DAY. December 27, 1819.

The poem leaves S. John entirely, and is a simple exhortation to trust the Lord for the future of those dear to us, with a prayer for patience at the sight of their suffering and death.

There is a well-authenticated tradition that the poem was suggested to Mr Keble while examiner in the schools, wondering what would be the future of one of the examiners, a friend of his, who was of delicate health, and who afterwards died young, the Rev. J. Lowe. But there seems no doubt that the date of the poem is 1819, and Mr Keble was not examiner in that year.

“LORD, and what shall this man do?”
 Ask'st thou, Christian, for thy friend?
 If his love for Christ be true,
 Christ hath told thee of his end:
 This is he whom God approves,
 This is he whom Jesus loves.

Ask not of him more than this,
 Leave it in his Saviour's breast,
 Whether, early call'd to bliss,
 He in youth shall find his rest,
 Or armèd in his station wait
 Till his Lord be at the gate:

Whether in his lonely course
 (Lonely, not forlorn) he stay,
 Or with Love's supporting force
 Cheat the toil and cheer the way:

Leave it all in His high hand,
Who doth hearts as streams command.¹

Gales from Heaven, if so He will,
Sweeter melodies can wake
On the lonely mountain rill
Than the meeting waters make.
Who hath the Father and the Son,
May be left, but not alone.

Sick or healthful, slave or free,
Wealthy, or despised and poor—
What is that to him or thee,
So his love to Christ endure?
When the shore is won at last,
Who will count the billows past?

Only, since our souls will shrink
At the touch of natural grief,
When our earthly loved ones sink,
Lend us, Lord, Thy sure relief;
Patient hearts, their pain to see,
And Thy grace, to follow Thee.

¹ The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of water: He turneth it whithersoever He will Proverbs xxi. 1.

THE HOLY INNOCENTS

These were redeemed from among men, being the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb.—Revelation xiv. 4.

THE HOLY INNOCENTS' DAY. Jan. 5, 1824.

The presence of the Holy Innocents praising Christ in heaven is a pledge of His tender love for all children, and also a pledge of His comfort to all mothers who lose their children young.

SAY, ye celestial guards, who wait
In Bethlehem, round the Saviour's palace gate,

Say, who are these on golden wings,
That hover o'er the new-born King of kings,
Their palms and garlands telling plain
That they are of the glorious martyr train,
Next to yourselves ordained to praise
His Name, and brighten as on Him they gaze ?

But where their spoils and trophies? where
The glorious dint a martyr's shield should bear?
How chance no cheek among them wears
The deep-worn trace of penitential tears,
But all is bright and smiling love,
As if, fresh-borne from Eden's happy grove,
They had flown here, their King to see,
Nor ever had been heirs of dark mortality ?

Ask, and some angel will reply,
"These, like yourselves, were born to sin and die,

But ere the poison root was grown,
God set His seal, and marked them for His own.

THE HOLY INNOCENTS 29

Baptized in blood for Jesus' sake,
Now underneath the Cross their bed they make,
Not to be scared from that sure rest
By frightened mother's shriek, or warrior's waving crest."¹

Mindful of these, the firstfruits sweet
Borne by the suffering Church her Lord to greet,
Blessed Jesus ever loved to trace
The "innocent brightness" of an infant's face.²
He raised them in His holy arms,
He blessed them from the world and all its harms:
Heirs though they were of sin and shame,
He blessed them in His own and in His Father's Name.

Then, as each fond unconscious child
On the everlasting Parent sweetly smiled,
(Like infants sporting on the shore,³
That tremble not at Ocean's boundless roar),
Were they not present to Thy thought,
All souls, that in their cradles Thou hast bought?

But chiefly these, who died for Thee,
That Thou mightst live for them a sadder death
to see.

¹ Cf. Homer, "Iliad," vi. 469.

"The babe clung crying to his nurse's breast Scared at the dazzling helm and nodding crest."—Pope.

² From Wordsworth's "Ode."

"The innocent brightness of a new-born day
Is lovely yet."

³ Possibly a reminiscence of the same "Ode":

"And see the children sport upon the shore,
And hear the mighty waters rolling evermore."

And next to these, Thy gracious word
 Was as a pledge of benediction, stored
 For Christian mothers, while they moan
 Their treasured hopes, just born, baptized, and gone.

Oh, joy for Rachel's broken heart !
 She and her babes shall meet no more to part ;
 So dear to Christ her pious haste
 To trust them in His arms, for ever safe embraced.

She dares not grudge to leave them there,
 Where to behold them was her heart's first
 prayer,

She dares not grieve—but she must weep,
 As her pale placid martyr sinks to sleep,
 Teaching so well and silently
 How, at the shepherd's call, the lamb should die :

How happier far than life the end
 Of souls that infant-like beneath their burthen bend.

FIRST SUNDAY AFTER CHRISTMAS

So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down. Isaiah xxxviii. 8 ; cf. Joshua x. 13.

THE SUN-DIAL OF AHAZ. Aug. 15, 1825.

God stayed the sun for Joshua, and turned back the degrees on the sun-dial for Hezekiah ; but can He turn back the tide of past evil, the memories of sin and neglect? Yes, Love has even this power, and Penitence inspired by Love can change the tide, can destroy remorse, can outlive folly, and begin the work of Heaven even at the end of life. (For the thought and image, cf. "The Circumcision," St. 6.)

'TIS true, of old the unchanging sun
 His daily course refused to run ;
 The pale moon hurrying to the west
 Paused at a mortal's call, to aid
 The avenging storm of war, that laid
 Seven guilty realms at once on earth's defilèd breast.¹

But can it be, one suppliant tear
 Should stay the ever-moving sphere ?
 A sick man's lowly-breathèd sigh,
 When from the world he turns away,²
 And hides his weary eyes to pray,
 Should change your mystic dance, ye wanderers of the sky ?

We too, O Lord, would fain command,
 As then, Thy wonder-working hand,

¹ "Twice in old time the unchanging Sun
 His daily course refused to run ;
 The pale moon hurrying to the west
 Paused at a mortal's call, to aid
 The avenging storm of war that laid
 Seven guilty realms at once on earth's defilèd breast.

"And can it be one lowly tear
 Should stay the ever-moving sphere.
 The sigh of one sick lonely heart,
 When from the world we turn away,
 And hide our weary eyes to pray,
 Should force the stars of Heaven from their accustomed part."—MSS.

² Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the Lord. Isaiah xxxviii. 2.

32 FIRST SUNDAY AFTER XMAS

And backward force the waves of Time,
That now so swift and silent bear
Our restless bark from year to year ;
Help us to pause and mourn to Thee our tale of crime.

Bright hopes, that erst the bosom warmed,
And vows, too pure to be performed,
And prayers blown wide by gales of care ;—
These, and such faint half-waking dreams,
Like stormy lights on mountain streams,
Wavering and broken all, athwart the conscience
glare.

How shall we escape the o'erwhelming Past ?
Can spirits broken, joys o'er-cast,
And eyes that never more may smile :—
Can these the avenging bolt delay,
Or win us back one little day
The bitterness of death to soften and beguile ?

Father and Lover of our souls !
Though darkly round Thine anger rolls,
Thy sunshine smiles beneath the gloom,
Thou seek'st to warn us, not confound,
Thy showers would pierce the hardened
ground,
And win it to give out its brightness and perfume.

Thou smil'st on us in wrath, and we,
E'en in remorse, would smile on Thee :
The tears that bathe our offered hearts,
We would not have them stained and dim,
But dropped from wings of seraphim,
All glowing with the light accepted love imparts.

CIRCUMCISION OF CHRIST 33

Time's waters will not ebb, nor stay,
Power cannot change them, but Love may ;
 What cannot be, Love counts it done.
Deep in the heart, her searching view
Can read where Faith is fixed and true,
Through shades of setting life can see Heaven's work begun.

O Thou, who keep'st the Key of Love,
Open Thy fount, eternal Dove,
 And overflow this heart of mine,
Enlarging as it fills with Thee,
Till in one blaze of Charity
Care and remorse are lost, like motes, in light divine ;

Till, as each moment wafts us higher,
By every gush of pure desire,
 And high-breathed hope of joys above,
By every secret sigh we heave,
Whole years of folly we outlive,
In His unerring sight, who measures Life by Love.

THE CIRCUMCISION OF CHRIST

In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands. Colossians ii. 11.

THE CIRCUMCISION. Jan. 20, 1824.

Christ's sufferings, which began at His circumcision, form a bond which unites the Saints of all ages by their atoning power. His Love changed the stream of past evil and won forgiveness for the Jewish Church. So, too, it knit Christians in sympathy with them, and was the consecration of all suffering.

34 CIRCUMCISION OF CHRIST

For this sense of brotherhood with the Saints of the O.T., cf. Tracts for the Times No. 89, esp. pp. 97-105. The poem is a companion to the last. In that, Love was described as doing for the individual what here it does for Humanity: it mounts against the stream of past evil.

THE year begins with Thee,
And Thou beginn'st with woe,
To let the world of sinners see
That blood for sin must flow.

Thine infant cries, O Lord,
Thy tears upon the breast,
Are not enough—the legal sword
Must do its stern behest.

Like sacrificial wine
Poured on a victim's head
Are those few precious drops of Thine,
Now first to offering led.

They are the pledge and seal
Of Christ's unswerving faith
Given to His Sire, our souls to heal,
Although it cost His death.

They to His Church of old,
To each true Jewish heart,
In Gospel graces manifold
Communion blest impart.

Now of Thy Love we deem
As of an ocean vast,
Mounting in tides against the stream
Of ages gone and past.¹

¹ Cf. Rom. iii. 25. Hebr. ix. 15.

Both theirs and ours Thou art,
 As we and they are Thine ;
 Kings, Prophets, Patriarchs—all have part
 Along the sacred line.

By blood and water too
 God's mark is set on Thee,
 That in Thee every faithful view
 Both covenants might see.

O bond of union, dear
 And strong as is Thy Grace !
 Saints, parted by a thousand year,
 May thus in heart embrace.

Is there a mourner true,
 Who, fallen on faithless days,
 Sighs for the heart-consoling view
 Of those Heaven deigned to praise ?

In spirit mayst thou meet
 With faithful Abraham here,
 Whom soon in Eden thou shalt greet
 A nursing Father dear.

Wouldst thou a poet be ?
 And would thy dull heart fain
 Borrow of Israel's minstrelsy
 One high enraptured strain ?

Come here thy soul to tune,
 Here set thy feeble chant,
 Here, if at all beneath the moon,
 Is holy David's haunt.

Art thou a child of tears,
 Cradled in care and woe?
 And seems it hard, thy vernal years
 Few vernal joys can shew?

And fall the sounds of mirth
 Sad on thy lonely heart,
 From all the hopes and charms of earth
 Untimely called to part?

Look here, and hold thy peace :
 The Giver of all good
 Even from the womb takes no release
 From suffering, tears, and blood.

If thou wouldst reap in love,
 First sow in holy fear :
 So life a winter's morn may prove
 To a bright endless year.

SECOND SUNDAY AFTER CHRISTMAS

When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them.—Isaiah xli. 17.

THE PILGRIM'S SONG. Nov. 29, 1825.

Life is a weary pilgrimage for the sinner, but God can give comfort to it as He did to Hagar and to the Israelites at Horeb, and Jesus, who Himself knew weariness, can bless our weary hours.

AND wilt Thou hear the fevered heart
 To Thee in silence cry?
 And as the inconstant wildfires dart
 Out of the restless eye,

Wilt Thou forgive the wayward thought,
By kindly woes yet half untaught
A Saviour's right, so dearly bought,
That Hope should never die?

Thou wilt : for many a languid prayer
Has reached Thee from the wild,
Since the lorn mother, wandering there,
Cast down her fainting child,¹
Then stole apart to weep and die,
Nor knew an angel form was nigh
To shew soft waters gushing by
And dewy shadows mild.

Thou wilt—for Thou art Israel's God,
And Thine unwearied arm
Is ready yet with Moses' rod
The hidden rill to charm
Out of the dry unfathomed deep
Of sands, that lie in lifeless sleep,
Save when the scorching whirlwinds heap
Their waves in rude alarm.

These moments of wild wrath are Thine—
Thine too the drearier hour
When o'er the horizon's silent line
Fond hopeless fancies cower,
And on the traveller's listless way
Rises and sets the unchanging day,
No cloud in heaven to slake its ray,
On earth no sheltering bower.

¹ Hagar. See Genesis xxi. 15.

Thou wilt be there, and not forsake,
 To turn the bitter pool
 Into a bright and breezy lake,
 The throbbing brow to cool :
 Till left a while with Thee alone
 The wilful heart be fain to own
 That He, by whom our bright hours shone,
 Our darkness best may rule.

The scent of water far away
 Upon the breeze is flung :
 The desert pelican to-day
 Securely leaves her young,
 Reproving thankless man, who fears
 To journey on a few lone years,
 Where on the sand Thy step appears,
 Thy crown in sight is hung.

Thou, who didst sit on Jacob's well
 The weary hour of noon,¹
 The languid pulses Thou canst tell,
 The nerveless spirit tune.
 Thou from Whose cross in anguish burst
 The cry that owned Thy dying thirst,²
 To Thee we turn, our Last and First,
 Our Sun and soothing Moon.

From darkness, here, and dreariness
 We ask not full repose,
 Only be Thou at hand, to bless
 Our trial hour of woes.

¹ S. John iv. 6.

² S. John xix. 28.

Is not the pilgrim's toil o'erpaid
 By the clear rill and palmy shade?
 And see we not, up Earth's dark glade,
 The gate of Heaven unclose?

THE EPIPHANY

And, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. S. Matthew ii. 9, 10.

THE EPIPHANY. Jan. 20, 1824.

The Gentile Magi—the representatives of heathen religion which once knew God, which then turned aside into self-chosen ways, but at last, ashamed of her idolatries, came back to Christ, is a type of the soul which in childhood is easily drawn by the teaching of parents and of Nature to faith in God, but in the glare of grown-up life has difficulty in finding His Presence, yet at last in old age finds Him once more. Yet their lavish offerings put our poor sacrifices to shame.

This poem should be compared with those for the Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity, and for S. Philip and S. James's day: they all seem influenced by the thought of Wordsworth's Ode: "Intimations of Immortality from recollections of early childhood."

STAR of the East, how sweet art Thou,
 Seen in life's early morning sky,
 Ere yet a cloud has dimmed the brow,
 While yet we gaze with childish eye;

When father, mother, nursing friend,
 Most dearly loved, and loving best,
 First bid us from their arms ascend,
 Pointing to Thee in Thy sure rest.

Too soon the glare of earthly day
 Buries, to us, Thy brightness keen,
 And we are left to find our way
 By faith and hope in Thee unseen.

What matter? if the waymarks sure
 On every side are round us set,
 Soon overleaped, but not obscure?
 'Tis ours to mark them or forget.

What matter? if in calm old age
 Our childhood's star again arise,
 Crowning our lonely pilgrimage
 With all that cheers a wanderer's eyes?

Ne'er may we lose it from our sight,
 Till all our hopes and thoughts are led
 To where it stays its lucid flight
 Over our Saviour's lowly bed.

There, swathed in humblest poverty,
 On Chastity's meek lap enshrined,
 With breathless Reverence waiting by,
 When we our sovereign Master find,

Will not the long-forgotten glow
 Of mingled joy and awe return,
 When stars above or flowers below
 First made our infant spirits burn?

Look on us, Lord, and take our parts
 Even on Thy throne of purity!
 From these our proud yet grovelling hearts
 Hide not Thy mild forgiving eye.

Did not the Gentile Church find grace,
 Our mother dear, this favoured day?
 With gold and myrrh she sought Thy face,
 Nor didst Thou turn Thy face away.

She too,¹ in earlier, purer days,
 Had watched Thee gleaming faint and far—
 But wandering in self-chosen ways
 She lost Thee quite, Thou lovely star.

Yet had her Father's finger turned
 To Thee her first inquiring glance :
 The deeper shame within her burned,
 When wakened from her wilful trance.

Behold, her wisest throng Thy gate,
 Their richest, sweetest, purest store
 (Yet owned too worthless and too late)
 They lavish on Thy cottage-floor.

They give their best—O tenfold shame
 On us their fallen progeny,
 Who sacrifice the blind and lame²—
 Who will not wake or fast with thee !

¹ The Patriarchal Church.—J. K.

² Malachi i. 8. And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil?

FIRST SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY

They shall spring up as among the grass, as willows
 by the water courses.—Isaiah xlv. 4.

THE NIGHTINGALE. May 17, 1824.

The simplest scenes of Nature, the willow bower or the nightingale, are sufficient to tell of God and to teach contentment, trust, and praise.

“The scenery of these verses is taken from the walk to Coln S. Aldwyn’s about three miles from Fairford, on the banks of the river Coln, which is shaded with willow trees.”—Miss Yonge. “Musings on the Christian Year.”

Compare G. J. Cornish, “Come to the Woods, and other Poems,” p. 85, who seems to allude to Keble in the sonnet which begins—

“Even as ye sung elsewhere by Cherwell’s stream,
When from the very mouth of that high sage
Whom God ordains to rouse a laggard age
I learnt that Nature would not have us dream
Our sullen hours away; such here your song,
Sweet Nightingales.”

LESSONS sweet of spring returning,
Welcome to the thoughtful heart!

May I call ye sense or learning,
Instinct pure, or Heaven-taught art?

Be your title what it may,
Sweet the lengthening April day,
While with you the soul is free,
Ranging wild o’er hill and lea.

Soft as Memnon’s harp at morning,¹

To the inward ear devout,

Touched by light, with heavenly warning

Your transporting chords ring out.

¹ Memnon’s harp, i.e. the colossal statue of Amunoph III., which still stands outside Thebes in Egypt. This statue was regarded by the Greeks as that of Memnon, the legendary son of Aurora and Tithonus; and as the statue, when half-shattered by an earthquake, gave out a sound at sunrise “as of a soft note on a harp” (Strabo) or “as of the sudden snapping of a harp-string” (Pausanias), the sound was identified with the voice of Memnon, and pious Pagans made pilgrimages in the hope of hearing it. (Cf. The Quarterly Review, April 1875, pp. 529-540.)

Every leaf in every nook,
Every wave in every brook,
Chanting with a solemn voice,
Minds us of our better choice.

Needs no show of mountain hoary,
Winding shore or deepening glen,
Where the landscape in its glory
Teaches truth to wandering men :
Give true hearts but earth and sky,
And some flowers to bloom and die,—
Homely scenes and simple views
Lowly thoughts may best infuse.

See the soft green willow springing
Where the waters gently pass,
Every way her free arms flinging
O'er the moist and reedy grass.
Long ere winter blasts are fled,
See her tipped with vernal red,
And her kindly flower displayed
Ere her leaf can cast a shade.

Though the rudest hand assail her,
Patiently she droops awhile,
But when showers and breezes hail her,
Wears again her willing smile.

Thus I learn Contentment's power
From the slighted willow bower,
Ready to give thanks and live
On the least that Heaven may give.

If, the quiet brooklet leaving,
Up the stony vale I wind,
Haply half in fancy grieving
For the shades I leave behind.

By the dusty wayside drear,
 Nightingales with joyous cheer
 Sing, my sadness to reprove,
 Gladlier than in cultured grove.

Where the thickest boughs are twining
 Of the greenest darkest tree,
 There they plunge, the light declining—
 All may hear, but none may see.
 Fearless of the passing hoof,
 Hardly will they fleet aloof;
 So they live in modest ways,
 Trust entire, and ceaseless praise.

SECOND SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY

Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now.
 S. John ii. 10.

THE SECRET OF PERPETUAL YOUTH. 1820 or 1821.

The bright joys of childhood fade quickly if we follow the world's guidance, but Christ purifies them all; He keeps hope keen to the end and makes love eternal. Hence the richest, tenderest glow of all is found on old age, and even beyond the grave there is a greater bliss of which we cannot know here.

THE heart of childhood is all mirth:
 We frolic to and fro
 As free and blithe, as if on earth
 Were no such thing as woe.

But if indeed with reckless faith
 We trust the flattering voice,
 Which whispers, "Take thy fill ere death,
 Indulge thee and rejoice ;"

Too surely, every setting day,
 Some lost delight we mourn,
 The flowers all die along our way,
 Till we, too, die forlorn.

Such is the world's gay garish feast,¹
 In her first charming bowl
 Infusing all that fires the breast,
 And cheats the unstable soul.

And still, as loud the revel swells,
 The fevered pulse beats higher,
 Till the seared taste from foulest wells
 Is fain to slake its fire.

Unlike the feast of heavenly Love
 Spread at the Saviour's word
 For souls that hear His call, and prove
 Meet for His bridal board.

Why should we fear, youth's draught of joy,
 If pure, would sparkle less ?
 Why should the cup the sooner cloy,
 Which God hath deigned to bless ?

¹ "Garish," i.e. gaudy, showy. Cf. "Romeo and Juliet : " Act iii. sc. 2 :

"And pay no worship to the garish sun."

"Il Penseroso" : l. 141.

"Hide me from day's garish eye."

For is it Hope, that thrills so keen
 Along each bounding vein,
 Still whispering glorious things unseen?—
 Faith makes the vision plain.

The world would kill her soon: but Faith
 Her daring dreams will cherish,
 Speeding her gaze o'er time and death
 To realms where nought can perish.

Or is it Love, the dear delight
 Of hearts that know no guile,
 That all around see all things bright
 With their own magic smile?

The silent joy, that sinks so deep,
 Of confidence and rest,
 Lulled in a Father's arms to sleep,
 Clasped to a Mother's breast?

Who, but a Christian, through all life
 That blessing may prolong?
 Who, through the world's sad day of strife,
 Still chant his morning song?

Fathers may hate us or forsake,
 God's foundlings then are we:
 Mother on child no pity take,¹
 But we shall still have Thee.

We may look home, and seek in vain
 A fond fraternal heart,
 But Christ hath given His promise plain
 To do a Brother's part.

¹ Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee Isaiah xlix. 15. Cf. Ps. xxvii. 10.

Nor shall dull age, as worldlings say,
 The heavenward flame annoy :
 The Saviour cannot pass away,
 And with Him lives our joy.

Ever the richest tenderest glow
 Sets round the autumnal sun—
 But there sight fails : no heart may know
 The bliss when life is done.

Such is Thy banquet, dearest Lord ;
 O give us grace to cast
 Our lot with Thine, to trust Thy word,
 And keep our best till last.

THIRD SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY

When Jesus heard it, He marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. S. Matthew viii. 10.

THE GOOD CENTURION. 1824.

The story of the Gentile centurion with his humble faith in Christ, with the prayers of the Jews on his behalf in return for his love to them and for his active kindness in building a synagogue, serves as a reminder to the Pastor (i.) of the deep but humble shrinking faith oft to be found where least expected, and which is more cheering than even the sight of a rainbow in a gloomy sky or the song of a lark on a dull plain : (ii.) of the power of the prayers of the poor : (iii.) of the gift of art in Christ's honour, and Christ's willingness to accept all offerings inspired by love.

I MARKED a rainbow in the north,
 What time the wild autumnal sun
 From his dark veil at noon looked forth,
 As glorying in his course half done,

Flinging soft radiance far and wide
Over the dusky heaven and bleak hillside.

It was a gleam to Memory dear,
And as I walk and muse apart,
When all seems faithless round and drear,
I would revive it in my heart,
And watch how light can find its way
To regions farthest from the fount of day.

Light flashes in the gloomiest sky,
And Music in the dullest plain,
For there the lark is soaring high
Over her flat and leafless reign,
And chanting in so blithe a tone,
It shames the weary heart to feel itself alone.

Brighter than rainbow in the north,
More cheery than the matin lark,
Is the soft gleam of Christian worth,
Which on some holy house we mark ;
Dear to the Pastor's aching heart
To think, where'er he looks, such gleam may have a part ;

May dwell, unseen by all but Heaven,
Like diamond blazing in the mine ;
For ever, where such grace is given,
It fears in open day to shine ;¹
Lest the deep stain it owns within Break out, and Faith be shamed by the believer's sin.

¹ Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof. S. Luke vii. 6.

" From the first time that the impression of religion

In silence and afar they wait,
 To find a prayer their Lord may hear :
 Voice of the poor and desolate,
 You best may bring it to His ear.
 Your grateful intercessions rise
 With more than royal pomp, and pierce the skies.

Happy the soul, whose precious cause
 You in the sovereign Presence plead—
 “ This is the lover of Thy laws,¹
 The friend of Thine in fear and need ”—
 For to the poor Thy mercy lends
 That solemn style, “ Thy nation and Thy friends.”

He too is blest, whose outward eye
 The graceful lines of art may trace,
 While his free spirit, soaring high,
 Discerns the glorious from the base ;
 Till out of dust his magic raise²
 A home for Prayer and Love and full harmonious Praise,

settled deeply in his mind, he used great caution to conceal it ; not only in obedience to the rule given by our Saviour, of fasting, praying, and giving alms in secret, but from a particular distrust he had of himself: for he said he was afraid he should at some time or other do some enormous thing, which, if he were looked on as a very religious man, might cast a reproach on the profession of it, and give great advantages to impious men to blaspheme the name of God.” Burnet’s “ Life of Hale ” (Wordsworth’s Eccl. Biog. vi. 73).—J. K.

¹ He loveth our nation. S. Luke vii. 5.

² He hath built us a synagogue. S. Luke vii. 5.

Where far away and high above,
 In maze on maze the trancèd sight
 Strays, mindful of that heavenly Love
 Which knows no end in depth or height,
 While the strong breath of Music seems
 To waft us ever on, soaring in blissful dreams.

What though in poor and humble guise
 Thou here didst sojourn, cottage-born?
 Yet from Thy glory in the skies
 Our earthly gold Thou dost not scorn.
 For Love delights to bring her best,
 And where Love is, that offering evermore is blest.

Love on the Saviour's dying head
 Her spikenard drops unblamed may pour,
 May mount His Cross and wrap Him dead
 In spices from the golden shore;¹
 Risen, may embalm His Sacred Name
 With all a Painter's art, and all a Minstrel's flame.

Worthless and lost our offerings seem,
 Drops in the ocean of His praise;
 But Mercy with her genial beam
 Is ripening them to pearly blaze,²
 To sparkle in His crown above,
 Who welcomes here a child's as there an angel's
 love.

¹ S. John xii. 7; xix. 30.

² The language seems influenced by the Persian fable quoted in The Spectator, No. 293. "A drop of water fell out of a cloud into the sea, and finding itself lost in such an immensity of fluid matter, broke out into the following reflection: 'Alas! What an inconsiderable

FOURTH SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY

When they saw Him, they besought Him that He would depart out of their coasts. S. Matthew viii. 34.

THE WORLD IS FOR EXCITEMENT, THE GOSPEL FOR SOOTHING. Dec. 19, 1825.

God's power and love are shown in His control of the wild forces of Nature, but even more in His control of the passions of the human heart. Yet, strangely, man's wayward heart wishes his deliverer away, and turns back to earthly passions. When this is so, God's love does not desert him, but wins him back to the gospel by the sights of Nature.

Miss Yonge would see in "Souls of highest birth wasting their impassioned might on dreams of earth" an allusion to Byron's poetry, and in the last lines a hope that he might be drawn back to Christ. The poem for Palm Sunday might bear this out, but may not the allusion rather be to Wordsworth's change, when he had been led back from his wild republican dreams and spiritual perplexity into faith and peace by his intercourse with Nature? The last lines read like a fact rather than a hope, and Wordsworth had come to recognise—

"In nature and the language of the sense
The anchor of my purest thoughts, the nurse,
The guide, the guardian of my heart, and soul
Of all my moral being."

THEY know the Almighty's power,
Who, wakened by the rushing midnight shower,

Watch for the fitful breeze

To howl and chafe amid the bending trees, creature am I in this prodigious ocean of waters! My existence is of no concern to the universe; I am reduced to a kind of nothing and am less than the least of the works of God.' It so happened that an oyster, which lay in the neighbourhood of this drop, chanced to gape

Watch for the still white gleam
 To bathe the landscape in a fiery stream, Touching the tremulous eye with sense of light
 Too rapid and too pure for all but angel sight.

They know the Almighty's love,
 Who, when the whirlwinds rock the topmost grove,
 Stand in the shade, and hear
 The tumult with a deep exulting fear,
 How, in their fiercest sway,
 Curbed by some power unseen, they die away,
 Like a bold steed that owns his rider's arm,
 Proud to be checked and soothed by that o'ermastering charm.

But there are storms within
 That heave the struggling heart with wilder din,
 And there is power and love
 The maniac's rushing frenzy to reprove,
 And when he takes his seat,
 Clothed and in calmness, at His Saviour's feet,¹
 Is not the power as strange, the love as blest,
 As when He said, Be still, and ocean sank to rest?

and swallow it up in the midst of this its humble soliloquy. The drop, says the fable, lay a great while hardening in the shell, until by degrees it was ripened into a pearl, which falling into the hands of a diver, after a long series of adventures, is at present that famous pearl which is fixed on the top of the Persian diadem."

¹ S. Mark v. 15; iv 39.

Woe to the wayward heart,
That gladlier turns to eye the shuddering start

Of Passion in her might,
Than marks the silent growth of grace and light ;—

Pleased in the cheerless tomb
To linger, while the morning rays illumine
Green lake, and cedar tuft, and spicy glade,
Shaking their dewy tresses now the storm is laid.

The storm is laid ; and now
In His meek power He climbs the mountain's
brow,

Who bade the waves go sleep,
And lashed the vexed fiends to their yawning deep.

How on a rock they stand,
Who watch His eye, and hold His guiding hand !

Not half so fixed amid her vassal hills,
Rises the holy pile that Kedron's valley fills.

And wilt thou seek again
Thy howling waste, thy charnel-house and chain,

And with the demons be,
Rather than clasp thine own Deliverer's knee ?
Sure 'tis no Heaven-bred awe
That bids thee from His healing touch withdraw.

The world and He are struggling in thine
heart,
And in thy reckless mood thou bidst thy Lord depart.

He, merciful and mild,
 As erst, beholding, loves His wayward child ;
 When souls of highest birth
 Waste their impassioned might on dreams of earth,
 He opens Nature's book,
 And on His glorious Gospel bids them look,
 Till by such chords, as rule the choirs above,
 Their lawless cries are tuned to hymns of perfect
 Love.

FIFTH SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY

Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear: but your iniquities have separated between you and your God. Isaiah lix. 1, 2.

CURE SIN AND YOU CURE SORROW.

May 9, 1826.

Often we cry for God to aid us, when really we are only desiring some lost pleasure; He is really with us in our necessities as surely as He was with S. Philip and the eunuch in the desert, when the eunuch learnt the true peace which the world cannot give, and which springs from the sense of sin forgiven. That peace only sin can destroy, and penitence for sin may win it back and give us power to intercede for others.

"WAKE, arm divine! awake,
 Eye of the only Wise!
 Now for Thy glory's sake,
 Saviour and God, arise,
 And may Thine ear, that sealèd seems,
 In pity mark our mournful themes!"¹

¹ "Arm of the Lord, awake,
 Put on thine ancient strength;
 O for Thy glory's sake
 Arouse thee, Lord, at length."—MSS.

Thus in her lonely hour
 Thy Church is fain to cry,
 As if Thy love and power
 Were vanished from her sky ;
 Yet God is there, and at His side
 He triumphs Who for sinners died.

Ah! 'tis the world enthralls
 The Heaven-betrothèd breast :
 The traitor Sense recalls
 The soaring soul from rest.
 That bitter sigh was all for earth,
 For glories gone, and vanished mirth.

Age would to youth return,
 Farther from Heaven would be,
 To feel the wildfire burn,
 On idolising knee
 Again to fall, and rob Thy shrine
 Of hearts, the right of Love divine.

Lord of this erring flock !¹
 Thou whose soft showers distil
 On ocean waste or rock,
 Free as on Hermon hill,
 Do Thou our craven spirits cheer,
 And shame away the selfish tear.

"I was silent all and dead"²
 Beside the barren sea,
 Where Philip's steps were led—
 Led by a voice from Thee ;

¹ "Lord of this erring flock:" "our wildering flock."—MSS. "This wandering flock."—Ed. 1. Compare p. 84, note.

² See Acts viii. 26-40.

He rose and went, nor asked Thee why,
Nor stayed to heave one faithless sigh ;

Upon his lonely way
The high-born traveller came,
Reading a mournful lay
Of "One Who bore our shame,
Silent Himself, His Name untold,
And yet His glories were of old." ¹

To muse what Heaven might mean
His wondering brow he raised,
And met an eye serene
That on him watchful gazed.
No hermit e'er so welcome crossed
A child's lone path in woodland lost

Now wonder turns to Love ;
The scrolls of sacred lore
No darksome mazes prove ;
The desert tires no more :
They bathe where holy waters flow,
Then on their way rejoicing go.

They part to meet in Heaven :
But of the joy they share,
Absolving and forgiven,
The sweet remembrance bear.
Yes—mark him well, ye cold and proud
Bewildered in a heartless crowd, ²

¹ Isaiah liii. 6-8.

² "Never again that statesman proud
Felt lonely in a heartless crowd."

Starting and turning pale¹

At Rumour's angry din—

No storm can now assail

The charm he wears within,

Rejoicing still and doing good,

And with the thought of God imbued.

No glare of high estate,

No gloom of woe or want,

The radiance can abate

Where Heaven delights to haunt ;

Sin only hides the genial ray,

And, round the Cross, makes night of day.

Then weep it from thy heart ;

So mayst thou duly learn

The intercessor's part,

Thy prayers and tears may earn

For fallen souls some healing breath,

Ere they have died the Apostate's death.²

SIXTH SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHANY

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. 1 S. John iii. 2.

THE BENEFITS OF UNCERTAINTY. 1824.

As in war and love, that gives us most happiness for which we have taken most effort, and about the issue

¹ "Never again turned pale
At Rumour's angry din—
Nor storms nor foes assail
The charm he wears within."—MSS.

² "God's mercy on some erring child
In ways of death now wandering wild."—MSS.

of which we have felt most anxiety, so in religion we need constant effort, never resting on assurance, but pressing on beyond earthly to divine conceptions of heaven.

THERE are, who darkling and alone,
 Would wish the weary night were gone,
 Though dawning morn should only shew
 The secret of their unknown woe :
 Who pray for sharpest throbs of pain
 To ease them of doubt's galling chain :
 "Only disperse the cloud," they cry,
 "And if our fate be death, give light and let us die." ¹

Unwise I deem them, Lord, unmeet
 To profit by Thy chastenings sweet,
 For thou wouldst have us linger still
 Upon the verge of good or ill,
 That on Thy guiding hand unseen
 Our undivided hearts may lean,
 And this our frail and foundering bark
 Glide in the narrow wake of Thy belovèd ark.

'Tis so in war—the champion true
 Loves victory more, when dim in view
 He sees her glories gild afar
 The dusky edge of stubborn war,
 Than if the untrodden bloodless field
 The harvest of her laurels yield ;
 Let not my bark in calm abide,
 But win her fearless way against the chafing tide.

¹ ἐν δὲ φάει καὶ ὄλεσσον. Hom. Il. xvii. 647.
 The prayer of Ajax to Zeus to remove the heavy cloud that hung over the battlefield. The words are quoted again in Keble's "Eucharistical Adoration," v. 2.

'Tis so in love—the faithful heart
From her dim vision would not part,
When first to her fond gaze is given
That purest spot in Fancy's heaven,
For all the gorgeous sky beside,
Though pledged her own and sure to abide :
Dearer than every past noon-day
That twilight gleam to her, though faint and far away.

So have I seen some tender flower
Prized above all the vernal bower,
Sheltered beneath the coolest shade,
Embosomed in the greenest glade,
So frail a gem, it scarce may bear
The playful touch of evening air ;¹
When hardier grown we love it less,
And trust it from our sight, not needing our caress.

And wherefore is the sweet springtide
Worth all the changeful year beside ?
The last-born babe, why lies its part
Deep in the mother's inmost heart ?
But that the Lord and source of love
Would have His weakest ever prove
Our tenderest care—and most of all
Our frail immortal souls, His work and Satan's thrall.

So be it, Lord ; I know it best,
Though not as yet this wayward breast

¹ "The daintiest, frailest, dearest thing
That ever brushed an insect's wing."—K. MS.

Beat quite in answer to Thy voice ;
 Yet surely I have made my choice ;
 I know not yet the promised bliss,
 Know not if I shall win or miss ;
 So doubting, rather let me die,
 Than close with aught beside, to last eternally.

What is the heaven we idly dream ?
 The self-deceiver's dreary theme,
 A cloudless sun that softly shines,
 Bright maidens and unfailing vines,
 The warrior's pride, the hunter's mirth,
 Poor fragments all of this low earth :
 Such as in sleep would hardly soothe
 A soul that once had tasted of immortal Truth.

What is the Heaven our God bestows ?
 No Prophet yet, no Angel knows ;
 Was never yet created eye
 Could see across Eternity ;
 Not seraph's wing for ever soaring
 Can pass the flight of souls adoring,
 That nearer still and nearer grow
 To the unapproachèd Lord, once made for them so low.

Unseen, unfelt their earthly growth,
 And self-accused of sin and sloth
 They live and die ; their names decay,
 Their fragrance passes quite away ;
 Like violets in the freezing blast
 No vernal steam around they cast,—
 But they shall flourish from the tomb,
 The breath of God shall wake them into odorous bloom.

SEPTUAGESIMA SUNDAY 61

Then on the incarnate Saviour's breast,
The fount of sweetness, they shall rest,
Their spirits every hour imbued
More deeply with His precious Blood.
But peace—still voice and closed eye
Suit best with hearts beyond the sky,
Hearts training in their low abode,
Daily to lose themselves in hope to find their God.

SEPTUAGESIMA SUNDAY

The invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made. Romans i. 20.

SEPTUAGESIMA SUNDAY. 1819.

One of the earliest and most beautiful poems, an expression of the truth so dear to Mr Keble that Nature is a type of grace. The principle on which this is based is worked out in Tract for the Times, No. 89; cf. pp. 137-186, and esp. the comment of S. Ambrose on the Creation. "The Church is the true moon which from the never-failing light of her brother borrows for herself the lustre of immortality and grace. For the Church shineth not with her own but with our Saviour's light, and draws to herself splendour from the Sun of Righteousness" (p. 156).

A good summary of the chief analogies between Nature and Grace used by patristic writers will be found in I. Williams, "On the Study of the Gospels," Pt. iv. pp. 268, 269.

Compare also "De Imitatione Christi," ii. 4. Si rectum esset cor tuum, tunc omnis creatura speculum vitæ et liber sanctæ doctrinæ esset. Non est creatura tam parva et vilis, quæ Dei bonitatem non repræsentet. And the saying of S. Antony quoted in Socrates,

62 SEPTUAGESIMA SUNDAY

“Eccl. Hist.” iv. 23. τὸ ἐμὸν βιβλίον, ὦ φιλόσοφε, ἡ φύσις τῶν γεγονότων ἐστὶ καὶ πάρεστιν, ὅτε βούλομαι, τοὺς λόγους ἀναγνώσκειν τοὺς τοῦ θεοῦ.

THERE is a Book, who runs may read,
Which heavenly Truth imparts,
And all the lore its scholars need,
Pure eyes and Christian hearts.

The works of God above, below,
Within us and around,
Are pages in that Book, to shew
How God Himself is found.

The glorious sky embracing all
Is like the Maker's love,
Wherewith encompassed, great and small
In peace and order move.

The Moon above, the Church below,
A wondrous race they run,
But all their radiance, all their glow,
Each borrows of its Sun.

The Saviour lends the light and heat
That crowns His holy hill ;
The saints, like stars, around His seat,
Perform their courses still.¹

The saints above are stars in Heaven—
What are the saints on earth ?
Like trees they stand whom God has given,²
Our Eden's happy birth.

¹ Daniel xii. 3.

² Isaiah ix. 21.

SEPTUAGESIMA SUNDAY 63

Faith is their fixed unswerving root,
Hope their unfading flower,
Fair deeds of Charity their fruit,
The glory of their bower.

The dew of Heaven is like Thy grace,¹
It steals in silence down ;
But where it lights, the favoured place
By richest fruits is known.

One Name above all glorious names
With its ten thousand tongues
The everlasting sea proclaims,
Echoing angelic songs.

The raging Fire,² the roaring Wind,
Thy boundless power display :
But in the gentler breeze we find
Thy Spirit's viewless way.³

Two worlds are ours : 'tis only Sin
Forbids us to descry
The mystic heaven and earth within,
Plain as the sea and sky.

Thou, who hast given me eyes to see
And love this sight so fair,
Give me a heart to find out Thee,
And read Thee everywhere.

¹ Psalm lxviii. 9.

² Hebrews xii. 29.

³ S. John iii. 8.

SEXAGESIMA SUNDAY

So He drove out the man; and He placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life. Genesis iii. 20. Cf. vi.

SEXAGESIMA SUNDAY. Feb. 18, 1824.

The sad consequences of sin are overruled by God to be sources of blessing

FOE of mankind! too bold thy race:
 Thou runn'st at such a reckless pace,
 Thine own dire work thou surely wilt confound:

'Twas but one little drop of sin
 We saw this morning enter in,
 And lo! at eventide the world is drowned.

See here the fruit of wandering eyes,
 Of worldly longings to be wise,
 Of Passion dwelling on forbidden sweets:
 Ye lawless glances, freely rove:
 Ruin below and wrath above
 Are all that now the wildering fancy meets.

Lord, when in some deep garden glade,
 Of Thee and of myself afraid,
 From thoughts like these among the bowers I hide,
 Nearest and loudest then of all
 I seem to hear the Judge's call:—
 "Where art thou, fallen man? come forth, and be thou tried."

SEXAGESIMA SUNDAY 65

Trembling before Thee as I stand,
Where'er I gaze on either hand
The sentence is gone forth, the ground is cursed :
Yet mingled with the penal shower
Some drops of balm in every bower Steal down like April dews, that softest fall and first.

If filial and maternal love ¹
Memorial of our guilt must prove,
If sinful babes in sorrow must be born,
Yet, to assuage her sharpest throes,
The faithful mother surely knows
This was the way Thou camest to save the world forlorn.

If blessèd wedlock may not bless ²
Without some tinge of bitterness
To dash her cup of joy, since Eden lost,
Chaining to earth with strong desire
Hearts that would highest else aspire,
And o'er the tenderer sex usurping ever most ;

Yet by the light of Christian lore
'Tis blind Idolatry no more,
But a sweet help and pattern of true Love,
Shewing how best the soul may cling
To her immortal Spouse and King,
How He should rule, and she with full desire approve.

¹ In sorrow thou shalt bring forth children. Genesis iii. 16.

² Thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. Genesis iii. 16.

66 SEXAGESIMA SUNDAY

If niggard Earth her treasures hide,¹
To all but labouring hands denied,
Lavish of thorns and worthless weeds alone,
The doom is half in mercy given
To train us in our way to Heaven,
And show our lagging souls how glory must be won.

If on the sinner's outward frame²
God hath impressed His mark of blame,
And even our bodies shrink at touch of light,
Yet mercy hath not left us bare :
The very weeds we daily wear³
Are to faith's eye a pledge of God's forgiving might.

And oh ! if yet one arrow more,⁴
The sharpest of the Almighty's store,
Tremble upon the string—a sinner's death—
Art Thou not by to soothe and save,
To lay us gently in the grave,
To close the weary eye and hush the parting breath ?

Therefore in sight of man bereft
The happy garden still was left,
The fiery sword that guarded shewed it too,
Turning all ways, the world to teach,
That though as yet beyond our reach,
Still in its place the tree of life and glory grew.

¹ Cursed is the ground for thy sake. Genesis iii. 17.

² I was afraid, because I was naked. Genesis iii. 10.

³ The Lord God made coats of skins, and clothed them. Genesis iii. 21.

⁴ Thou shalt surely die. Genesis ii. 17.

QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY 67

QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY

I do set My bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between Me and the earth. Genesis ix. 13. (Cf. viii. 11 and I Cor. xiii.—MSS.)

QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY. March 6, 1824.

God's pardoning Love—imaged to Noah after the flood in the dove, the olive leaf, and the rainbow, and to us in the life of Jesus. As the rainbow breaks up and softens the light for eyes which could not bear the full glare of the sun, so the face of the Son of Man attracts those who could not gaze upon the Son of God.

SWEET Dove! the softest, steadiest plume
In all the sunbright sky,
Brightening in ever-changeful bloom
As breezes change on high; ¹—

Sweet Leaf! the pledge of peace and mirth,
“Long sought, and lately won,” ²
Blest increase of reviving Earth,
When first it felt the Sun;—

Sweet Rainbow! pride of summer days,
High set at Heaven's command,
Though into drear and dusky haze
Thou melt on either hand;—

Dear tokens of a pardoning God,
We hail ye, one and all,
As when our fathers walked abroad,
Freed from their twelve months' thrall.

¹ “Each moment as you fly.”—MSS.

² “Long sought and lately won.” Perhaps a reminiscence of “The Bridal of Triermain,” Canto iii. 1: “Long-loved, long-wooded, and lately won.”

68 QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY

How joyful from the imprisoning ark
On the green earth they spring !
Not blither, after showers, the lark
Mounts up with glistening wing.

So home-bound sailors spring to shore,
Two oceans safely past ;
So happy souls, when life is o'er,
Plunge in the empyreal vast.

What wins their first and fondest gaze
In all the blissful field,
And keeps it through a thousand days ?
Love face to face revealed :

Love imaged in that cordial look
Our Lord in Eden bends
On souls that sin and earth forsook
In time to die His friends.

And what most welcome and serene
Dawns on the Patriarch's eye,
In all the emerging hills so green,
In all the brightening sky ?

What but the gentle rainbow's gleam,
Soothing the wearied sight,
That cannot bear the solar beam,
With soft undazzling light ?

Lord, if our fathers turned to Thee
With such adoring gaze,
Wondering frail man Thy light should see
Without Thy scorching blaze ;

Where is our love, and where our hearts—
 We who have seen Thy Son,
 Have tried Thy Spirit's winning arts,
 And yet we are not won ?

The Son of God in radiance beamed
 Too bright for us to scan,
 But we may face the rays that streamed
 From the mild Son of Man.

There, parted into rainbow hues,
 In sweet harmonious strife,
 We see celestial love diffuse
 Its light o'er Jesus' life.

God, by His bow, vouchsafes to write
 This truth in Heaven above ;
 As every lovely hue is Light,
 So every grace is Love.

ASH-WEDNESDAY

When thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face ; that thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret.—S. Matthew vi. 17, 18.

THE BLESSING OF CONFESSION. Jan. 22 or 23,
 1826.—Hursley.

Our own heart bids us to hide our sin and save others the pain of it, but what a comfort it is to tell it to some loving heart and infer God's forgiveness from his. Even if we have no such friend, the angels, nay, even Christ Himself will be present to cheer the sinner who confesses his sin to God.

This should be compared with the Twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity, which dwells even more strongly on the sinner's loneliness, and with the poem in the Lyra Innocentium for Ash-Wednesday, "The Three Absolutions," which speaks more clearly of the Church's power to absolve.

"YES—deep within, and deeper yet
 The rankling shaft of conscience hide,
 Quick let the swelling eye forget
 The tears that in the heart abide.
 Calm be the voice, the aspect bold,
 No shuddering pass o'er lip or brow,
 For why should Innocence be told
 The pangs that guilty spirits bow ?

"The loving eye that watches thine
 Close as the air that wraps thee round—
 Why in thy sorrow should it pine,
 Since never of thy sin it found ?
 And wherefore should the heathen see ¹
 What chains of darkness thee enslave,
 And mocking say, Lo, this is he
 Who owned a God that could not save ?"

Thus oft the mourner's wayward heart
 Tempts him to hide his grief and die,
 Too feeble for Confession's smart,
 Too proud to bear a pitying eye ;
 How sweet, in that dark hour, to fall
 On bosoms waiting to receive
 Our sighs, and gently whisper all !
 They love us—will not God forgive ? ²

¹ Wherefore should they say among the people,
 Where is their God ? Joel ii. 17.

² This stanza is not found in either MS., but was printed in the first edition.

Else let us keep our fast within,
 Till Heaven and we are quite alone,¹
 Then let the grief, the shame, the sin,
 Before the mercy-seat be thrown.
 Between the porch and altar weep,²
 Unworthy of the holiest place,
 Yet hoping near the shrine to keep
 One lowly cell in sight of grace.

Nor fear lest sympathy should fail:—
 Hast thou not seen, in night-hours drear,
 When racking thoughts the heart assail,
 The glimmering stars by turns appear,
 And from the eternal home above
 With silent news of mercy steal?
 So Angels pause on tasks of love,
 To look where sorrowing sinners kneel.

Or if no Angel pass that way,
 He who in secret sees, perchance
 May bid His own heart-warming ray
 Toward thee stream with kindlier glance,
 As when upon His drooping head
 His Father's light was poured from Heaven,
 What time, unsheltered and unfed,³
 Far in the wild His steps were driven.

High thoughts were with him in that hour,
 Untold, unspeakable on earth—
 And who can stay the soaring power
 Of spirits weaned from worldly mirth,

¹ "But keep thy solemn fast within
 When Heaven and thou are quite alone."—MSS.

² Let the priests, the ministers of the Lord weep between the porch and the altar. Joel ii. 17.

³ S. Matthew iv. 1.

72 FIRST SUNDAY IN LENT

While far beyond the sound of praise
With upward eye they float serene,
And learn to bear their Saviour's blaze
When Judgment shall undraw the screen ?

FIRST SUNDAY IN LENT

Haste thee, escape thither ; for I cannot do anything till thou be come thither. Therefore the name of the city was called Zoar. Genesis xix. 22.

THE CITY OF REFUGE. March 9, 1824

The need of pressing onwards towards heaven before God's judgments fall upon the world. As Zoar was a temporary refuge to Lot, so the visible Church and a Christian home are God's temporary blessings to us, yet they are in the world, and we must not limit our hopes even to them.

“ ANGEL of wrath ! why linger in mid air,
While the devoted city's cry
Louder and louder swells ? and canst thou spare
Thy full-charged vial standing by ? ”
Thus, with stern voice, unsparing Justice pleads :
He hears her not—with softened gaze
His eye is following where sweet Mercy leads,
And till she gives the sign, his fury stays.

Guided by her, along the mountain road,
Far through the twilight of the morn,
With hurrying footsteps from the accursed abode
He sees the holy household borne :
Angels, or more, on either hand are nigh,
To speed them o'er the tempting plain,
Lingering in heart, and with frail sidelong eye
Seeking how near they may unharmed remain.

FIRST SUNDAY IN LENT 73

“ Ah ! wherefore gleam those upland slopes so fair ?

And why, through every woodland arch,
Swells yon bright vale, as Eden rich and rare,

Where Jordan winds his stately march ;
If all must be forsaken, ruined all,

If God have planted but to burn ?—
Surely not yet the avenging shower will fall,
Though to my home for one last look I turn.”

Thus while they waver, surely long ago

They had provoked the withering blast,
But that the merciful Avengers know

Their frailty well, and hold them fast.

“ Haste, for thy life escape, nor look behind ! ”

Ever in thrilling sounds like these

They check the wandering eye, severely kind,
Nor let the sinner lose his soul at ease.

And when, o'erwearied with the steep ascent,
We for a nearer refuge crave,

One little spot of ground in mercy lent,
One hour of home before the grave,

Oft in His pity o'er His children weak,
His hand withdraws the penal fire,

And where we fondly cling, forbears to wreak
Full vengeance, till our hearts are weaned entire.

Thus by the merits of one righteous man,¹

The Church, our Zoar, shall abide,
Till she abuse, so sore, her lengthened span
Even Mercy's self her face must hide.

¹ “ Merits ” : prayers.— MSS.

74 SECOND SUNDAY IN LENT

Then, onward yet a step, thou hard-won soul ;
 Though in the Church thou know thy place,
The mountain farther lies—there seek thy goal,
There breathe at large, o'erpast thy dangerous race.

Sweet is the smile of home ; the mutual look
 When hearts are of each other sure ;
Sweet all the joys that crowd the household nook,
 The haunt of all affections pure ;
Yet in the world even these abide, and we
 Above the world our calling boast :
Once gain the mountain-top, and thou art free :
Till then, who rest, presume ; who turn to look,
 are lost.

SECOND SUNDAY IN LENT

And when Esau heard the words of his father, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father. Genesis xxvii. 34.—(Cf. Hebrews xii. 17. He found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.)¹

ESAU'S FORFEIT. ? 1824.

“The sternest and the most awful of all the Christian Year.”—Miss Yonge. The cry of remorse may come

¹ The author earnestly hopes, that nothing in these stanzas will be understood to express any opinion as to the general efficacy of what is called “a death-bed repentance.” Such questions are best left in the merciful obscurity with which Scripture has enveloped them. Esau’s probation, as far as his birthright was concerned, was quite over when he uttered the cry in the text. His despondency, therefore, is not parallel to any thing on this side the grave.—J. K.

SECOND SUNDAY IN LENT 75

too late; the revelation of eternal life goes side by side with that of eternal death; we may not take the one and reject the other.

The poem should be compared with Mr Keble's last published sermon, preached forty years later. Pentecostal Fear: A Sermon preached in the Parish Church of Cuddesdon, on May 24, 1864.

“ AND is there in God's world so drear a place

Where the loud bitter cry is raised in vain?
Where tears of penance come too late for grace,
As on the uprooted flower the genial rain?”

'Tis even so: the sovereign Lord of souls
Stores in the dungeon of His boundless realm
Each bolt, that o'er the sinner vainly rolls,
With gathered wrath the reprobate to whelm.

Will the storm hear the sailor's piteous cry,¹ Taught to mistrust, too late, the tempting wave,

When all around he sees but sea and sky,
A God in anger, a self-chosen grave?

Or will the thorns, that strew intemperance' bed,
Turn with a wish to down? will late remorse
Recall the shaft the murderer's hand has sped,
Or from the guiltless bosom turn its course?

Then may the unbodied soul in safety fleet
Through the dark curtains of the world above,
Fresh from the stain of crime; nor fear to meet
The God, whom here she would not learn to
love:

¹ Cf. Bp. Butler's "Analogy," pp. 54-64, ed. 1736.—
J. K. Cf. also Claudian in "Eutrop." ii. 7: Quid juvat errorem mersâ jam puppe fateri.

76 SECOND SUNDAY IN LENT

Then is there hope for such as die unblest,
That angel wings may waft them to the shore,
Nor need the unready virgin strike her breast,
Nor wait desponding round the bridegroom's door.

But where is then the stay of contrite hearts ?
Of old they leaned on Thy eternal Word,
But with the sinner's fear their hope departs,
Fast linked as Thy great Name to Thee, O
Lord :

That Name, by which Thy faithful oath is past,
That we should endless be, for joy or woe :—
And if the treasures of Thy wrath could waste,
Thy lovers must their promised Heaven forego.

But ask of elder days, earth's vernal hour,
When in familiar talk God's voice was heard,
When at the Patriarch's call the fiery shower
Propitious o'er the turf-built shrine appeared.

Watch by our father Isaac's pastoral door—
The birthright sold, the blessing lost and won,
Tell, Heaven has wrath that can relent no more,
The Grave, dark deeds that cannot be undone.

We barter life for pottage ; sell true bliss
For wealth or power, for pleasure or renown ;
Thus, Esau-like, our Father's blessing miss,
Then wash with fruitless tears our faded crown.

Our faded crown, despised and flung aside,
Shall on some brother's brow immortal bloom.
No partial hand the blessing may misguide ;
No flattering fancy change our Monarch's doom :

THIRD SUNDAY IN LENT 77

His righteous doom, that meek true-hearted Love
The everlasting birthright should receive,
The softest dews drop on her from above,¹
The richest green her mountain garland weave:

Her brethren, mightiest, wisest, eldest born,
Bow to her sway, and move at her behest:
Isaac's fond blessing may not fall on scorn,
Nor Balaam's curse on Love which God hath blest.

THIRD SUNDAY IN LENT

When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace; but when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils. S. Luke xi. 21, 22.

THE SPOILS OF SATAN. Feb. 9, 1827.

The consecration of classical literature to Christ.

As the Israelites at the Exodus spoiled the Egyptians, as at their capture of Canaan they entered upon all the results of the toil of the Canaanites, so Christians can enter into all the treasures of classic literature, for each aspiration there finds its fulfilment in the revelation of Christ.

This thought is a favourite one in Mr Keble's lectures on poetry, cf. especially "Præl. Acad." ii. pp. 799-818. It is illustrated by his use of the story of Hector and Andromache in the poem for Monday before Easter; and may be well compared with the defence of the study of Greek literature in Socrates, "Hist. Eccl." iii. 16, on the ground that τὸ γὰρ καλὸν, ἐνθ' ἂν ᾗ, ἴδιον τῆς ἀληθείας ἐστίν. The application of the spoiling of the Egyptians to the use of pagan literature is found in Origen, "Ep. ad. Greg." and Augustine, "De Doctr. Christ." ii. 40.

¹ Genesis xxvii. 27, 28.

78 THIRD SUNDAY IN LENT

A first draft of the poem was written as early as 1822 in four-line stanzas, the greater part of which are published in Miss Yonge, "Musings," p. 87, but this revised draft of 1827 is far richer in illustration and more poetic in diction.

SEE Lucifer like lightning fall,
Dashed from his throne of pride ;
While, answering Thy victorious call,
The Saints his spoils divide ;¹
This world of Thine, by him usurped too long,
Now opening all her stores to heal Thy servants'
wrong.

So when the first-born of Thy foes
Dead in the darkness lay,
When Thy redeemed at midnight rose
And cast their bonds away,
The orphaned realm threw wide her gates,
and told
Into freed Israel's lap her jewels and her gold.²

And when their wondrous march was o'er,
And they had won their homes,
Where Abraham fed his flock of yore,
Among their fathers' tombs ;—
A land that drinks the rain of Heaven at will,
Whose waters kiss the feet of many a vine-clad hill ;—³

Oft as they watched, at thoughtful eve,
A gale from bowers of balm
Sweep o'er the billowy corn, and heave
The tresses of the palm,

¹ Cf. Isaiah xiv. 12. S. Luke xi. 22.

² Cf. Exodus xii. 35, 36. ³ Cf. Deuteronomy xi. 11.

THIRD SUNDAY IN LENT 79

Just as the lingering Sun had touched with gold,
Far o'er the cedar shade, some tower of giants old ;

It was a fearful joy, I ween,
To trace the Heathen's toil,
The limpid wells, the orchards green
Left ready for the spoil,
The household stores untouched, the roses bright
Wreathed o'er the cottage walls in garlands of delight.¹

And now another Canaan yields
To Thine all-conquering ark ;—
Fly from the "old poetic" fields,²
Ye Paynim shadows dark !
Immortal Greece, dear land of glorious lays,
Lo ! here the "unknown God" of thy unconscious praise !³

The olive wreath, the ivied wand,
"The sword in myrtles drest,"⁴
Each legend of the shadowy strand
Now wakes a vision blest ;
As little children lisp, and tell of Heaven,
So thoughts beyond their thought to those high
Bards were given.

¹ Cf. Deuteronomy vi. 11.

² "Where each old poetic mountain Inspiration breathed around."—Gray. "The Progress of Poesy," 73. 74.

³ Cf. Acts xvii. 23.

⁴ "The sword in myrtles drest." Translated in Collins, "Ode to Liberty," from the hymn of Callistratus in honour of Harmodius and Aristogeiton, who had won immortality by the murder of Hipparchus.

80 FOURTH SUNDAY IN LENT

And these are ours : Thy partial grace
The tempting treasure lends :
These relics of a guilty race
Are forfeit to Thy friends :
What seemed an idol hymn, now breathes of Thee,
Tuned by Faith's ear to some celestial melody.

There's not a strain to Memory dear,¹
Nor flower in classic grove,
There's not a sweet note warbled here,
But minds us of Thy Love.

O Lord, our Lord, and spoiler of our foes,
There is no light but Thine : with Thee all beauty glows.

FOURTH SUNDAY IN LENT

Joseph made haste ; for his bowels did yearn upon his brother : and he sought where to weep ; and he entered into his chamber, and wept there. Genesis xliii. 30.

There stood no man with him, while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren. Genesis xlv. 1.

THE ROSEBUD. May 18, 1824.

The true reserve of religious feeling. Silent and unseen are the great changes of Nature ; so is it with ¹ See Burns' Works, iv. 293. Dr Currie's edition.

"I see her in the dewy flowers,
I see her sweet and fair :
I hear her in the tuneful birds,
I hear her charm the air.

"There's not a bonnie flower that springs
By fountain, shaw, or green,
There's not a bonnie bird that sings
But minds me o' my Jean."

Cf. Keble's "Occasional Papers and Reviews," p. 92, where this same passage of Burns is quoted.

FOURTH SUNDAY IN LENT 81

Love whether of man or of God: it shrinks from display; even the Holy Spirit has not revealed the Love of the meeting of the Risen Lord with His Mother; and Joseph, the type of Christ, would have no one present when he made himself known to his brethren.

This thought—a protest against the unreserved pouring forth of religious experience which was common in the religious world of the time—is very common in Mr Keble, cf. the Review of the Life of Sir W. Scott, "Occasional Papers and Reviews," p. 17. It found its chief expression in the teaching of Isaac Williams, who was his pupil at Southrop at the time when this poem was written, and afterwards the author of Tract No. 87. "Reserve in communicating Religious Knowledge."

WHEN Nature tries her finest touch,
Weaving her vernal wreath,
Mark ye, how close she veils her round,
Not to be traced by sight or sound,
Nor soiled by ruder breath?

Who ever saw the earliest rose
First open her sweet breast?
Or, when the summer sun goes down,
The first soft star in evening's crown
Light up her gleaming crest?

Fondly we seek the dawning bloom
On features wan and fair,—
The gazing eye no change can trace,
But look away a little space,
Then turn, and, lo! 'tis there.

But there's a sweeter flower than e'er
Blushed on the rosy spray—
A brighter star, a richer bloom
Than e'er did western heaven illumine
At close of summer day.

82 FOURTH SUNDAY IN LENT

'Tis Love, the last best gift of Heaven ;
Love gentle, holy, pure :
But tenderer than a dove's soft eye,
The searching sun, the open sky,
She never could endure.

Even human Love will shrink from sight
Here in the coarse rude earth :
How then should rash intruding glance
Break in upon her sacred trance
Who boasts a heavenly birth ?

So still and secret is her growth,
Ever the truest heart,
Where deepest strikes her kindly root
For hope or joy, for flower or fruit,
Least knows its happy part.

God only, and good Angels, look
Behind the blissful screen—
As when, triumphant o'er His woes,
The Son of God by moonlight rose,
By all but Heaven unseen :

As when the holy Maid beheld
Her risen Son and Lord :
Thought has not colours half so fair
That she to paint that hour may dare,
In silence best adored.

The gracious Dove, that brought from Heaven
The earnest of our bliss,
Of many a chosen witness telling,
On many a happy vision dwelling,
Sings not a note of this.

FIFTH SUNDAY IN LENT 83

So, truest image of the Christ,
Old Israel's long-lost son,
What time, with sweet forgiving cheer,
He called his conscious brethren near,
Would weep with them alone.

He could not trust his melting soul
But in his Maker's sight—
Then why should gentle hearts and true
Bare to the rude world's withering view
Their treasure of delight ?

No—let the dainty rose a while
Her bashful fragrance hide—
Rend not her silken veil too soon,
But leave her, in her own soft noon,
To flourish and abide.

FIFTH SUNDAY IN LENT

And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. Exodus iii. 3.

THE BURNING BUSH. April 24, 1824.

The lesson of the history of the Jews.

In all history—which is but a record of "God's way of teaching love and fear"—there is no sight so strange as the permanence of the Jewish race, like the Bush which Moses saw burning yet not consumed. They stand as a warning to the Christian Church: they stand as a type of the undecaying life that may be in store for a lost soul; and yet there is hope for them, not of a national restoration, but of individual redemption to every Jew who will seek for it.

This meditation is based on the thought that the history of the Jewish race as a whole was meant to be a type of God's dealing with the individual Christian, cf. "Occasional Papers and Reviews," p. 435. The particular application may be due to Pascal, "Pensées,"

84 FIFTH SUNDAY IN LENT

ii. 11 (ed. Molinier): "C'est une chose estonnante et digne d'une estrange attention de voir ce peuple Juif subsister depuis tant d'années et de le voir toujours misérable."

THE historic Muse, from age to age,
Through many a waste heart-sickening
page

Hath traced the works of Man :
But a celestial call to-day
Stays her, like Moses, on her way,
The works of God to scan.

Far seen across the sandy wild,
Where, like a solitary child,
He thoughtless roamed and free,
One towering thorn¹ was wrapt in flame—
Bright without blaze it went and came :
Who would not turn and see ?

Along the mountain ledges green
The scattered sheep at will may glean
The Desert's spicy stores :
The while, with undivided heart,
The shepherd talks with God apart,
And, as he talks, adores.

Ye too, who tend Christ's wildering flock,²
Well may ye gather round the rock
That once was Sion's hill,
To watch the fire upon the mount
Still blazing, like the solar fount,
Yet unconsuming still.

¹ "Seneh" : said to be a sort of Acacia.—J. K.

² "Wildering," i.e. wandering. In 1858 Keble wrote: "With respect to the word which gave occasion to our little correspondence, I find that according

FIFTH SUNDAY IN LENT 85

Caught from that blaze by wrath divine,
Lost branches of the once-loved vine,
 Now withered, spent, and sere,
See Israel's sons, like glowing brands,
Tost wildly o'er a thousand lands
 For twice a thousand year.

God will not quench nor slay them quite,
But lifts them like a beacon light
 The apostate Church to scare ;
Or like pale ghosts that darkling roam,
Hovering around their ancient home,
 But find no refuge there.

Ye blessed Angels! if of you
There be, who love the ways to view
 Of Kings and Kingdoms here ;
(And sure, 'tis worth an Angel's gaze,
To see, throughout the dreary maze,
 God teaching love and fear :)

Oh! say, in all the bleak expanse,
Is there a spot to win your glance,
 So bright, so dark as this ?
A hopeless faith, a homeless race,
Yet seeking the most holy place,
 And owning the true bliss !

to Johnson there is or was such a word as 'wilder' or to 'wilder'; only, unluckily for me, it is a verb active—the same as to 'bewilder.' So it must be considered an error, and wandering or some such word must be kindly substituted for it."—Coleridge's "Memoir," p. 162. He never altered it here, or on p. 64, but the MSS. show that he did alter it in some other lines in the "Christian Year" before its publication: e.g. in the Fifth Sunday after Epiphany and Trinity Sunday.

86 FIFTH SUNDAY IN LENT.

Salted with fire they seem,¹ to shew
How spirits lost in endless woe
 May undecaying live.

Oh, sickening thought! yet hold it fast
Long as this glittering world shall last,
 Or sin at heart survive.

And hark! amid the flashing fire,
Mingling with tones of fear and ire,
 Soft Mercy's undersong—
'Tis Abraham's God who speaks so loud,
His people's cries have pierced the cloud,
 He sees, He sees their wrong; ²

He is come down to break their chain;
Though never more on Sion's fane
 His visible ensign wave;
'Tis Sion, wheresoe'er they dwell,
Who with His own true Israel,
 Shall own him strong to save.

He shall redeem them one by one,
Where'er the world-encircling sun
 Shall see them meekly kneel:
All that He asks on Israel's part,
Is only, that the captive heart
 Its woe and burthen feel.

Gentiles! with fixed yet awful eye
Turn ye this page of mystery,
 Nor slight the warning sound:
"Put off thy shoes from off thy feet—
The place where man his God shall meet,
 Be sure, is holy ground."

¹ S. Mark ix. 49.

² Exodus iii. 7, 8.

PALM SUNDAY

And He answered and said unto them, I tell you that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.—S. Luke xix. 40.

THE CHILDREN IN THE TEMPLE. Date uncertain, but not later than 1821.

The ideal of Poetry. An appeal to poets to use their gift for God's glory, probably suggested by the degradation of poetry to the praise of earthly passion in the hands of Byron and Shelley. Cf. "Præl. Acad." i. 222. Compare the poem for the Fourth Sunday after Epiphany, and also George Herbert's "Introit." (Palgrave, "Treasury of Sacred Song," xxxvii.)

YE whose hearts are beating high
 With the pulse of Poesy,
 Heirs of more than royal race,
 Framed by Heaven's peculiar grace,
 God's own work to do on earth,
 (If the word be not too bold,)
 Giving virtue a new birth,
 And a life that ne'er grows old—¹

Sovereign masters of all hearts !
 Know ye, who hath set your parts ?
 He who gave you breath to sing,
 By whose strength ye sweep the string,
 He hath chosen you, to lead
 His Hosannas here below ;—
 Mount, and claim your glorious meed ;
 Linger not with sin and woe.

¹ Cf. Ovid. ex Ponto iv. 8, 47, 48, 55.

Carmine fit vivax virtus ; expersque sepulchri
 Notitiam seræ posteritatis habet,

Di quoque carminibus (si fas est dicere) fiunt.

But if ye should hold your peace,
 Deem not that the song would cease—
 Angels round His glory-throne,
 Stars, His guiding hand that own,
 Flowers that grow beneath our feet,
 Stones in earth's dark womb that rest,
 High and low in choir shall meet,
 Ere His Name shall be unblest.

Lord, by every minstrel tongue
 Be Thy praise so duly sung,
 That Thine angels' harps may ne'er
 Fail to find fit echoing here :
 We the while, of meaner birth,
 Who in that divinest spell
 Dare not hope to join on earth,
 Give us grace to listen well.

But should thankless silence seal
 Lips, that might half Heaven reveal,
 Should bards in idol-hymns profane
 The sacred soul-enthraling strain,
 (As in this bad world below Noblest things find vilest using,)
 Then, Thy power and mercy shew,
 In vile things noble breath infusing ;

Then waken into sound divine
 The very pavement of Thy shrine,
 Till we, like Heaven's star-sprinkled floor,
 Faintly give back what we adore.
 Childlike though the voices be,
 And untunable the parts,
 Thou wilt own the minstrelsy,
 If it flow from childlike hearts.

MONDAY BEFORE EASTER

Doubtless Thou art our Father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not.—Isaiah lxiii. 16.

CHRIST WAITING FOR THE CROSS.

Jan. 15, 1826.

The individual love of the Christian for Christ and of Christ for each Christian.

Christ is to us all that Hector was to Andromache; nay, more, He never forgets us. We may fancy ourselves deserted, but He cared for and thought of each individual soul in the quiet days of Passion week. We fancy this would appeal to us more, if we had seen the actual scene of His prayer; but faith must lay hold of the truth, and can do so by reading the Gospel record.

“FATHER to me Thou art, and Mother
 dear,
 And Brother too, kind Husband of my heart!”

So speaks Andromache¹ in boding fear,
 Ere from her last embrace her hero part—
 So evermore, by Faith's undying glow,
 We own the Crucified in weal or woe.

Strange to our ears the church-bells of our home,
 The fragrance of our old paternal fields
 May be forgotten; and the time may come
 When the babe's kiss no sense of pleasure yields
 Even to the doting mother: but Thine own
 Thou never canst forget, nor leave alone.²

¹ “Iliad,” vi. 429. Cf. note on Holy Innocents' Day and on Third Sunday in Lent.

² Cf. p. 46, supra.

90 MONDAY BEFORE EASTER

There are who sigh that no fond heart is theirs,
None loves them best—O vain and selfish sigh!

Out of the bosom of His love He spares—
The Father spares the Son, for thee to die :
For thee He died—for thee He lives again :
O'er thee He watches in His boundless reign.

Thou art as much His care, as if beside
Nor man nor angel lived in Heaven or earth :
Thus sunbeams pour alike their glorious tide
To light up worlds, or wake an insect's mirth :
They shine and shine with unexhausted store—
Thou art thy Saviour's darling—seek no more.

On thee and thine, thy warfare and thine end,
Even in His hour of agony He thought,
When, ere the final pang His soul should rend,
The ransomed spirits one by one were brought
To His mind's eye: two silent nights and days¹

In calmness for His far-seen hour He stays.

Ye vaulted cells, where martyred seers of old
Far in the rocky walls of Sion sleep,
Green terraces and archèd fountains cold,
Where lies the cypress shade so still and deep,
Dear sacred haunts of glory and of woe,
Help us, one hour, to trace His musings high and low :

¹ In Passion week, from Tuesday evening to Thursday evening: during which time Scripture seems to be nearly silent concerning our Saviour's proceedings.—J. K.

MONDAY BEFORE EASTER 91

One heart-ennobling hour ! It may not be :
The unearthly thoughts have passed from earth away,
And fast as evening sunbeams from the sea
Thy footsteps all in Sion's deep decay
Were blotted from the holy ground : yet dear
Is every stone of hers ; for Thou wast surely here.

There is a spot within this sacred dale
That felt Thee kneeling—touched Thy prostrate
brow :

One Angel knows it. O might prayer avail
To win that knowledge ! sure each holy vow
Less quickly from the unstable soul would fade,
Offered where Christ in agony was laid.

Might tear of ours once mingle with the blood
That from His aching brow by moonlight fell,
Over the mournful joy our thoughts would brood,
Till they had framed within a guardian spell
To chase repining fancies, as they rise,
Like birds of evil wing, to mar our sacrifice.

So dreams the heart self-flattering, fondly dreams ;—

Else wherefore, when the bitter waves o'er-flow,

Miss we the light, Gethsemane, that streams
From Thy dear name, where in His page of woe

It shines, a pale kind star in winter's sky ?
Who vainly reads it there, in vain had seen
Him die.¹

¹ Cf. S. Luke xvi. 31.

TUESDAY BEFORE EASTER

They gave Him to drink wine mingled with myrrh :
but He received it not. S. Mark xv. 23.

CHRIST REFUSING THE WINE AND
MYRRH. March 17, 1827.

The completeness of Christ's self-sacrifice. He refuses the opiate that would dull His senses, in order that by feeling all He may pity all. Thus He has taught us to face sorrow and to seek the only solace in it which He had,—the joy of forgiving the penitent and committing His Spirit to the Father's hands.

“ FILL high the bowl, and spice it well, and pour
The dews oblivious : for the Cross is sharp,
The Cross is sharp, and He
Is tenderer than a lamb.

“ He wept by Lazarus' grave—how will He bear
This bed of anguish ? and His pale weak form
Is worn with many a watch
Of sorrow and unrest.

“ His sweat last night was as great drops of blood,
And the sad burthen pressed Him so to earth,
The very torturers paused
To help Him on His way.

“ Fill high the bowl, benumb His aching sense
With medicined sleep.”—O awful in Thy woe !
The parching thirst of death
Is on Thee, and Thou triest

TUESDAY BEFORE EASTER 93

The slumbrous potion bland, and wilt not drink :

Not sullen, nor in scorn, like haughty man
With suicidal hand
Putting his solace by :

But as at first Thine all-pervading look
Saw from Thy Father's bosom to the abyss,
Measuring in calm presage,
The infinite descent ;

So to the end, though now of mortal pangs
Made heir, and emptied of Thy glory awhile,
With unaverted eye
Thou meetest all the storm.

Thou wilt feel all, that Thou mayst pity all ;
And rather wouldst Thou wrestle with strong pain,
Than overcloud Thy soul,
So clear in agony,

Or lose one glimpse of Heaven before the time.
O most entire and perfect sacrifice,
Renewed in every pulse
That on the tedious Cross

Told the long hours of death, as, one by one,
The life-strings of that tender heart gave way ;
Even sinners, taught by Thee,
Look Sorrow in the face,

And bid her freely welcome, unbeguiled
By false kind solaces, and spells of earth :—
And yet not all unsoothed ;
For when was Joy so dear,

As the deep calm that breathed, "Father, forgive!"

Or, "Be with Me in Paradise to-day"?

And, though the strife be sore,
Yet in His parting breath

Love masters Agony; the soul that seemed Forsaken, feels her present God again,
And in her Father's arms
Contented dies away.

WEDNESDAY BEFORE EASTER

Saying, Father, if Thou be willing, remove this cup from Me: nevertheless not My will, but Thine, be done.
S. Luke xxii. 42.

CHRIST IN THE GARDEN. August 13, 1821.—
(K.) August 18, 1821.—(R.) "The Christian's Lullaby."—(K2.)

Perfect rest can be gained only by self-devotion and resignation to God's will. These find their highest expression in the virgin and the martyr; but the martyr's crown may be won by many whose silent sufferings attract no attention, and the virgin's crown by wedded souls who live in the spirit of detachment and self-surrender.

In 1820 Keble's friend J. T. Coleridge had lost his first child, and his friend John Patteson had lost his wife. These losses may have been in his mind in composing this poem. Compare also a letter written to Coleridge in 1818, on the illness of his wife:—

"After all, these anxieties are the greatest of mercies.
They are, I verily believe, the only effectual means to wean us from our idols. We make good resolutions and do much towards keeping them, but there is something so subtle and insinuating in earthly happiness (and the more so in proportion to its innocence and purity) that one such pang or misgiving, as leaves a lasting impression of insecurity, will do more towards lifting our hearts where they ought to be than all that most of us could, or at least would, do for another."—

 "Memoir," p. 81.

○ LORD my God, do Thou Thy holy will—
 I will lie still ;

I will not stir, lest I forsake Thine arm,
 And break the charm

Which lulls me, clinging to my Father's breast,
 In perfect rest.

Wild fancy, peace ! thou must not me beguile
 With thy false smile :

I know thy flatteries and thy cheating ways ;
 Be silent, Praise,

Blind guide with siren voice, and blinding all
 That hear thy call.

Come, Self-devotion, high and pure,
 Thoughts that in thankfulness endure,
 Though dearest hopes are faithless found,
 And dearest hearts are bursting round.

Come, Resignation, spirit meek,
 And let me kiss thy placid cheek,
 And read in thy pale eye serene
 Their blessing, who by faith can wean
 Their hearts from sense, and learn to love
 God only, and the joys above.

They say, who know the life divine,
 And upward gaze with eagle eyne,
 That by each golden crown on high,¹
 Rich with celestial jewelry,

¹ . . . "that little coronet or special reward which God hath prepared (extraordinary and beside the great Crown of all faithful souls) for those 'who have not defiled themselves with women, but follow the (virgin) Lamb forever.'" Bp. Taylor, "Holy Living," chap ii. sect. 3.—J. K.

Which for our Lord's redeemed is set,
There hangs a radiant coronet,
All gemmed with pure and living light,
Too dazzling for a sinner's sight,
Prepared for virgin souls, and them
Who seek the martyr's diadem.

Nor deem, who to that bliss aspire,
Must win their way through blood and fire ;
The writhings of a wounded heart
Are fiercer than a foeman's dart.
Oft in Life's stillest shade reclining,
In Desolation unrepining,
Without a hope on earth to find
A mirror in an answering mind,
Meek souls there are, who little dream
Their daily strife an Angel's theme,
Or that the rod they take so calm
Shall prove in Heaven a martyr's palm.

And there are souls that seem to dwell
Above this earth¹—so rich a spell
Floats round their steps, where'er they move,
From hopes fulfilled and mutual love.
Such, if on high their thoughts are set,
Nor in the stream the source forget,
If prompt to quit the bliss they know,
Following the Lamb where'er He go,
By purest pleasures unbeguiled
To idolize or wife or child ;
Such wedded souls our God shall own
For faultless virgins round His throne.

¹ "Above this earth" ; "In heaven on earth."—MSS.

Thus everywhere we find our suffering God,
 And where He trod
May set our steps: the Cross on Calvary
 Uplifted high
Beams on the martyr host, a beacon light
 In open fight.

To the still wrestlings of the lonely heart
 He doth impart
The virtue of His midnight agony,
 When none was nigh,
Save God and one good angel, to assuage
 The tempest's rage.

Mortal! if life smile on thee, and thou find
 All to thy mind,
Think Who did once from Heaven to Hell descend
 Thee to befriend;
So shalt thou dare forego, at His dear call,
 Thy best, thine all.

“O Father! not My will, but Thine be done—”
 So spake the Son.
Be this our charm, mellowing Earth's ruder noise
 Of griefs and joys;
That we may cling for ever to Thy breast
 In perfect rest!

THURSDAY BEFORE EASTER

At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth, and I am come to shew thee; for thou art greatly beloved: therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision. Daniel ix. 23.

THE VISION OF THE LATTER DAYS.

June 5, 1823.

The sad state of the Church in which for all its external dignity and world-wide witness for Christ, there is much unreal profession, passion, and pride, should not make us look for a new faith, but humble ourselves and pray more earnestly, as Daniel did.

“ O HOLY mountain of my God,
 How do thy towers in ruin lie,
 How art thou riven and strewn abroad,
 Under the rude and wasteful sky ! ”
 'Twas thus upon his fasting-day
 The “ Man of Loves ” was fain to pray,¹
 His lattice open toward his darling west,
 Mourning the ruined home he still must love
 the best.²

Oh ! for a love like Daniel's now,
 To wing to Heaven but one strong prayer
 For God's new Israel, sunk as low,
 Yet flourishing to sight as fair,
 As Sion in her height of pride,
 With queens for handmaids at her side,
 With kings her nursing-fathers, thronèd high,
 And compassed with the world's too tempting blazonry.

¹ The “ Man of Loves,” i.e. ἀνὴρ ἐπιθυμιῶν (LXX.); “ Vir desideriorum ” (Vulg.); “ A man greatly beloved ” (A.V.), Dan. ix. 23; x. 11, 19.

² Daniel vi. 10.

'Tis true, nor winter stays thy growth,
Nor torrid summer's sickly smile ;
The flashing billows of the south
Break not upon so lone an isle,¹
But thou, rich vine, art grafted there,
The fruit of death or life to bear,
Yielding a surer witness every day,
To thine Almighty Author and His steadfast
sway.

Oh ! grief to think, that grapes of gall
Should cluster round thine healthiest shoot !
God's herald prove a heartless thrall,
Who, if he dared, would fain be mute !
Even such is this bad world we see,
Which, self-condemned in owning Thee,
Yet dares not open farewell of Thee take,
For very pride, and her high-boasted Reason's sake.

What do we then ? if far and wide
Men kneel to Christ, the pure and meek,
Yet rage with passion, swell with pride,
Have we not still our faith to seek ?
Nay—but in steadfast humbleness
Kneel on to Him, Who loves to bless
The prayer that waits for Him ; and trembling strive
To keep the lingering flame in thine own breast alive.

¹ This thought of the universal witness of the Church for Christ was fully developed in "Continual Services" in the "Lyra Innocentium."

Dark frowned the future even on him,
 The loving and belovèd Seer,
 What time he saw, through shadows dim,
 The boundary of the eternal year ;
 He only of the sons of men
 Named to be heir of glory then.¹
 Else had it bruised too sore his tender heart
 To see God's ransomed world in wrath and flame depart.

Then look no more : or closer watch
 Thy course in Earth's bewildering ways,²
 For every glimpse thine eye can catch
 Of what shall be in those dread days :
 So when the Archangel's word is spoken,
 And Death's deep trance for ever broken,
 In mercy thou mayst feel the heavenly hand,
 And in thy lot unharmed before thy Saviour stand.³

GOOD FRIDAY

He is despised and rejected of men. Isaiah liii. 3.

GOOD FRIDAY. 1826 or 1827: but in a first form
 as early as 1825.

The message of Good Friday touches us with more power of comfort than that of the great festivals, for it comes home to us in our own hours of disappointment or rejected love ; then we know how far greater His

¹ Daniel xii. 13. See Bp. Ken's Sermon on the Character of Daniel.—J. K.

² "Then look no more : or see thou watch
 More closely thine own wildered ways."

³ Thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days. Daniel xii. 13.

suffering was than ours: yet even so we shrink from sharing His Cross.

“Mr Keble fell asleep on the 29th of March 1866.

. . . The mournful family repaired from his deathbed to his wife's bed and knelt round her bed and prayed. She besought them to return thanks for her to God that he had been taken first, that she, not he, had to bear the trial of surviving: but she expressed a hope that she might be released so soon as to admit of her being buried at the same time in one grave. Then she requested her maid to fetch her ‘Christian Year,’ and turning to the two last stanzas of the verses on Good Friday, ‘I know,’ said she, ‘these were in his dying thoughts.’”—J. T. Coleridge, “Memoir of the Rev. J. Keble.”

IS it not strange, the darkest hour
 That ever dawned on sinful earth
 Should touch the heart with softer power
 For comfort, than an angel's mirth?
 That to the Cross the mourner's eye should turn
 Sooner than where the stars of Christmas burn?
 Sooner than where the Easter sun
 Shines glorious on yon open grave,
 And to and fro the tidings run,
 “Who died to heal, is risen to save”?
 Sooner than where upon the Saviour's friends
 The very Comforter in light and love descends?

Yet so it is: for duly there
 The bitter herbs of earth are set,
 Till tempered by the Saviour's prayer,
 And with the Saviour's life-blood wet,
 They turn to sweetness, and drop holy balm,
 Soft as imprisoned martyr's deathbed calm.

All turn to sweet—but most of all
 That bitterest to the lip of pride,
 When hopes presumptuous fade and fall,
 Or Friendship scorns us, duly tried,
 Or Love, the flower that closes up for fear
 When rude and selfish spirits breathe too near.

Then like a long-forgotten strain
 Comes sweeping o'er the heart forlorn
 What sunshine hours had taught in vain
 Of Jesus suffering shame and scorn,
 As in all lowly hearts He suffers still,
 While we triumphant ride and have the world at will.

His piercèd hands in vain would hide
 His face from rude reproachful gaze,
 His ears are open to abide
 The wildest storm the tongue can raise,
 He who with one rough word,¹ some early day,
 Their idol world and them shall sweep for aye
 away.

But we by Fancy may assuage
 The festering sore by Fancy made,
 Down in some lonely hermitage
 Like wounded pilgrims safely laid,
 Where gentlest breezes whisper souls distressed,
 That Love yet lives, and Patience shall find rest.

Oh! shame beyond the bitterest thought
 That evil spirit ever framed,
 That sinners know what Jesus wrought,
 Yet feel their haughty hearts untamed :

¹ Wisdom of Solomon xii. 9.

That souls in refuge, holding by the Cross,
Should wince and fret at this world's little loss.¹

Lord of my heart, by Thy last cry,
Let not Thy blood on earth be spent !
Lo, at Thy feet I fainting lie,
Mine eyes upon Thy wounds are bent,
Upon Thy streaming wounds my weary eyes
Wait like the parchèd earth on April skies.

Wash me, and dry these bitter tears,
O let my heart no further roam,
'Tis Thine by vows and hopes and fears
Long since—O call Thy wanderer home ;
To that dear home, safe in Thy wounded side,
Where only broken hearts their sin and shame
may hide.

EASTER EVE

As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water. Zechariah ix. 11.

EASTER EVE. Circ. 1824.

After the burial Christ's Spirit may have been working among the spirits of the dead, and with Him was the Penitent Thief. So we after death may be with Him and hold communion with the Saints of old. Yet first we must share Christ's burial here on earth by dying to the world.

AT length the worst is o'er, and Thou art laid
Deep in Thy darksome bed ;
All still and cold beneath yon dreary stone
Thy sacred form is gone ;

¹ This whole stanza is not in the MSS., but appears in the first edition.

Around those lips where power and mercy hung,
 The dews of death have clung ;
 The dull earth o'er Thee, and Thy foes around,
 Thou sleep'st a silent corse, in funeral fetters wound.

Sleep'st Thou indeed ? or is Thy spirit fled
 At large among the dead ?
 Whether in Eden bowers Thy welcome voice
 Wake Abraham to rejoice,
 Or in some drearier scene Thine eye controls
 The thronging band of souls ;
 That, as Thy blood won earth, Thine agony
 Might set the shadowy realm from sin and sorrow free.¹

Where'er Thou roam'st, one happy soul, we know,
 Seen at Thy side in woe,²
 Waits on Thy triumph—even as all the blest
 With him and Thee shall rest.
 Each on his cross, by Thee we hang a while,
 Watching Thy patient smile,
 Till we have learned to say, "'Tis justly done,
 Only in glory, Lord, Thy sinful servant own."

Soon wilt Thou take us to Thy tranquil bower
 To rest one little hour,
 Till Thine elect are numbered, and the grave
 Call Thee to come and save :
 Then on Thy bosom borne shall we descend,
 Again with earth to blend,

¹ Cf. 1 S. Peter iii. 18, 19.

² S. Luke xxiii. 43.

Earth all refined with bright supernal fires,
Tinctured with holy blood, and winged with pure desires.

Meanwhile with every son and saint of Thine
Along the glorious line,
Sitting by turns beneath Thy sacred feet
We'll hold communion sweet,
Know them by look and voice, and thank them all
For helping us in thrall,
For words of hope, and bright exanples given
To show through moonless skies that there is light in Heaven.

O come that day, when in this restless heart
Earth shall resign her part,
When in the grave with Thee my limbs shall
rest,
My soul with Thee be blest!
But stay, presumptuous—Christ with thee abides
In the rock's dreary sides:
He from the stone will wring celestial dew
If but the prisoner's heart be faithful found and true.

When tears are spent, and thou art left alone
With ghosts of blessings gone,
Think thou art taken from the Cross, and laid
In Jesus' burial shade;
Take Moses' rod, the rod of prayer, and call
Out of the rocky wall
The fount of holy blood; and lift on high
Thy grovelling soul that feels so desolate and dry.

Prisoner of Hope thou art ¹—look up and sing
 In hope of promised spring.
 As in the pit his father's darling lay ²
 Beside the desert way,
 And knew not how, but knew his God would save
 Even from that living grave,
 So, buried with our Lord, we'll close our eyes
 To the decaying world, till angels bid us rise.

EASTER DAY

And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen. S. Luke xxiv. 5, 6.

EASTER DAY. April 18, 1822.

Easter Day sheds its glory on all the year: and on all the universe. It teaches that our hopes are fixed above the earth, and yet it ennobles the earth, as the place which Christ has consecrated: and He is still present to consecrate our lonely and our social hours alike to His service.

O DAY of days! shall hearts set free
 No "minstrel rapture" find for thee? ³
 Thou art the Sun of other days,
 They shine by giving back thy rays:

¹ Turn you to the strong hold, ye prisoners of hope Zechariah ix. 12.

The words "look up and sing" are enclosed in inverted commas in the MSS., as though they were a quotation.

² They took him, and cast him into a pit; and the pit was empty, there was no water in it. Genesis xxxvii. 24.

³ "O day of days, and can my heart
 No votive hymn to thee impart?"—MSS.

"Minstrel rapture" is borrowed from "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," vi. 1:

"For him no minstrel raptures swell."

Enthronèd in thy sovereign sphere
Thou shedd'st thy light on all the year :
Sundays by thee more glorious break,
An Easter Day in every week :

And week-days, following in their train,
The fulness of thy blessing gain,
Till all, both resting and employ,
Be one Lord's day of holy joy.

Then wake, my soul, to high desires,
And earlier light thine altar fires :
The world some hours is on her way,
Nor thinks on thee, thou blessèd day :

Or, if she think, it is in scorn :
The vernal light of Easter morn
To her dark gaze no brighter seems
Than reason's or the law's pale beams.

“Where is your Lord ?” she scornful asks :
“Where is His hire ? we know His tasks ;
Sons of a King ye boast to be ;
Let us your crowns and treasures see.”

We in the words of Truth reply
(An Angel brought them from the sky),¹
“Our crown, our treasure is not here,
'Tis stored above the highest sphere :

“Methinks your wisdom guides amiss,
To seek on earth a Christian's bliss ;
We watch not now the lifeless stone ;
Our only Lord is risen and gone.”

¹ S. Luke xxiv. 5.

Yet even the lifeless stone is dear
 For thoughts of Him who late lay here ;
 And the base world, now Christ hath died,
 Ennobled is and glorified.¹

No more a charnel-house, to fence
 The relics of lost innocence,
 A vault of ruin and decay ;—
 The imprisoning stone is rolled away :

'Tis now a cell, where Angels use
 To come and go with heavenly news,
 And in the ears of mourners say,
 " Come, see the place where Jesus lay ! " ²

'Tis now a fane, where Love can find
 Christ everywhere embalmed and shrined ;
 Aye gathering up memorials sweet,
 Where'er she sets her duteous feet.

Oh ! joy to Mary first allowed,
 When roused from weeping o'er his shroud,
 By His own calm, soul-soothing tone,
 Breathing her name, as still His own ! ³

Joy to the faithful three renewed,
 As their glad errand they pursued ! ⁴
 Happy, who so Christ's word convey,
 That He may meet them on their way !

¹ After this verse the MSS. insert a whole stanza :—

" Who love the world for the world's sake
 Small reckoning of their darling make,
 Who prize it highest, love it best,
 Treat it as Christ's redeemed and blest."

² S. Mark xvi. 6.

³ S. John xx. 16.

⁴ i.e. Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, and Salome ; cf. S. Mark xvi. 1 with S. Matthew xxviii. 9.

MONDAY IN EASTER WEEK 109

So is it still : to holy tears,
In lonely hours, Christ risen appears :
In social hours, who Christ would see,
Must turn all tasks to Charity.

MONDAY IN EASTER WEEK

Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons : but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.—Acts x. 34, 35.

S. PETER AND CORNELIUS. Feb. 12, 1826.

Two streams rising in distant hills but ultimately joining to form one great river are like two prayers going up to God—as from the centurion Cornelius and S. Peter—and forming one great stream of blessing to the Gentile world.

GO up and watch the new-born rill¹
Just trickling from its mossy bed,
Streaking the heath-clad hill
With a bright emerald thread.

Canst thou her bold career foretell,
What rock she shall o'erleap or rend,
How far in ocean's swell
Her freshening billows send ?

Perchance that little brook shall flow
The bulwark of some mighty realm,
Bear navies to and fro
With monarchs at their helm.

¹ "See the source of the Wye on Plinlimmon."—J. K. MS. Note. The statement, then, of Miss Yonge—(which the present editor followed in his "Memoir of John Keble," p. 60)—that the reference is to the source of the Severn and the Thames, must be a mistake. It probably is to the Severn and the Wye.

Or canst thou guess, how far away
 Some sister nymph beside her urn
 Reclining night and day,
 Mid reeds and mountain fern,
 Nurses her store, with thine to blend
 When many a moor and glen are past,
 Then in the wide sea end
 Their spotless lives at last ?

Even so, the course of prayer who knows ?
 It springs in silence where it will,
 Springs out of sight, and flows
 At first a lonely rill :

But streams shall meet it by and by
 From thousand sympathetic hearts,
 Together swelling high
 Their chant of many parts.

Unheard by all but angel ears
 The good Cornelius knelt alone,
 Nor dreamed his prayers and tears
 Would help a world undone,

The while upon his terraced roof
 The loved Apostle to his Lord
 In silent thought aloof
 For heavenly vision soared.

Far o'er the glowing western main
 His wistful brow was upward raised,
 Where, like an Angel's train,
 The burnished water blazed.

The saint beside the ocean prayed,
 The soldier in his chosen bower,
 Where all his eye surveyed
 Seemed sacred in that hour.

To each unknown his brother's prayer ;
 Yet brethren true in dearest love
 Were they—and now they share
 Fraternal joys above.

There daily through Christ's open gate
 They see the Gentile spirits press,
 Brightening their high estate
 With dearer happiness.

What civic wreath for comrades saved
 Shone ever with such deathless gleam,
 Or when did perils braved
 So sweet to veterans seem ?¹

TUESDAY IN EASTER WEEK

And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy ; and did run to bring His disciples word. S. Matthew xxviii. 8.

THE SNOW-DROP. March 7 or 10, 1826.

We trust the witness of the snow-drop to the coming year, and yet mistrust the witness of the angels and the holy women to the fact of the Lord's Resurrection. Such witness has not ceased. The Pastor finds it still in some simple believer suffering patiently in a cottage home.

TO THE SNOW-DROP

THOU first-born of the year's delight,
 Pride of the dewy glade,
 In vernal green and virgin white,
 Thy vestal robes, arrayed :

¹ The allusion is to the "civica corona," the oak-leaf crown for saving a fellow-citizen's life, which was to the Roman centurion what the Victoria Cross would be to an English soldier.

'Tis not because thy drooping form
Sinks graceful on its nest,
When chilly shades from gathering storm
Affright thy tender breast ;

Nor for yon river islet wild
Beneath the willow spray,
Where, like the ringlets of a child,
Thou weavest thy circle gay ;¹

'Tis not for these I love thee dear ;
Thy shy averted smiles
To Fancy bode a joyous year,
One of Life's fairy isles.

They twinkle to the wintry moon,
And cheer the ungenial day,
And tell us, all will glisten soon
As green and bright as they.

Is there a heart that loves the spring
Their witness can refuse ?
Yet mortals doubt when angels bring
From Heaven their Easter news :

When holy maids and matrons speak
Of Christ's forsaken bed,
And voices, that forbid to seek
The living 'mid the dead,

And when they say, " Turn, wandering heart,
Thy Lord is risen indeed,
Let Pleasure go, put Care apart,
And to His presence speed ; " ²

¹ " Yon river islet wild " : probably an island on the Test.—Miss Yonge, " Musings," p 131.

² This stanza is not found in the MSS.

We smile in scorn : and yet we know
They early sought the tomb,
Their hearts, that now so freshly glow,
Lost in desponding gloom.

They who have sought, nor hope to find,
Wear not so bright a glance :
They who have won their earthly mind
Less reverently advance.

But where, in gentle spirits, fear
And joy so duly meet,
These sure have seen the angels near,
And kissed the Saviour's feet.

Nor let the Pastor's thankful eye
Their faltering tale disdain,
As on their lowly couch they lie,
Prisoners of want and pain.

O guide us when our faithless hearts
From Thee would start aloof,¹
Where Patience her sweet skill impart
Beneath some cottage roof :

Revive our dying fires, to burn
High as her anthems soar,
And of our scholars let us learn
Our own forgotten lore.

¹ "Start" : stand.—R.

FIRST SUNDAY AFTER EASTER

Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to Himself? Numbers xvi. 9.

THE RESTLESS PASTOR REPROVED.

June 25, 1825—K., but August 1818.—R.

The pastor tempted by worldly ambition thanks God for winning him back to the pastor's life, which is intrusted with such great privileges, and which finds comfort and protection in its very duties.

The best comment on this poem is to be found in Dean Church, "The Oxford Movement," p. 59. "He (I. Williams) had before him in John Keble a spectacle that was absolutely new to him. Ambitious as a rising and successful scholar at College, he saw a man looked up to and wondered at by every one, absolutely without pride and without ambition. He saw the most distinguished academic of his day, to whom every prospect was open, retiring from Oxford in the height of his fame to busy himself with a few hundreds of Gloucestershire peasants in a miserable curacy. He saw this man caring for and respecting the ignorant and poor as much as others respected the great and learned."

FIRST Father of the holy seed,
 If yet, invoked in hour of need,
 Thou count me for 'Thine own,
 Not quite an outcast if I prove,
 (Thou joy'st in miracles of love,)
 Hear from Thy mercy-throne!

Upon Thine altar's horn of gold
 Help me to lay my trembling hold,
 Though stained with Christian gore; ¹—
 The blood of souls by Thee redeemed,
 But, while I roved or idly dreamed,
 Lost to be found no more.

¹ Cf. Ezekiel xxxiii. 6.

For oft, when summer leaves were bright,
And every flower was bathed in light,
 In sunshine moments past,
My wilful heart would burst away
From where the holy shadow lay,
 Where Heaven my lot had cast.

I thought it scorn with Thee to dwell,
A Hermit in a silent cell,
 While, gaily sweeping by,
Wild Fancy blew his bugle strain,
And marshalled all his gallant train
 In the world's wondering eye.

I would have joined him—but as oft
Thy whispered warnings, kind and soft,
 My better soul confessed.

“My servant, let the world alone—
Safe on the steps of Jesus' throne
 Be tranquil and be blest.

“Seems it to thee a niggard hand
That nearest Heaven has bade thee stand,
 The ark to touch and bear,
With incense of pure heart's desire
To heap the censer's sacred fire,
 The snow-white Ephod wear?”

Why should we crave the worldling's wreath,
On whom the Saviour deigned to breathe,
 To whom His keys were given,
Who lead the choir where angels meet,
With angels' food our brethren greet,
 And pour the drink of Heaven?

When sorrow all our heart would ask,
We need not shun our daily task,

And hide ourselves for calm ;
 The herbs we seek to heal our woe
 Familiar by our pathway grow,
 Our common air is balm.

Around each pure domestic shrine
 Bright flowers of Eden bloom and twine,
 Our hearths are altars all ;
 The prayers of hungry souls and poor,
 Like armèd angels at the door,
 Our unseen foes appal.¹

Alms all around and hymns within—
 What evil eye can entrance win
 Where guards like these abound ?
 If chance some heedless heart should roam,
 Sure, thought of these will lure it home
 Ere lost in Folly's round.

O joys, that, sweetest in decay,
 Fall not, like withered leaves, away,
 But with the silent breath
 Of violets drooping one by one,
 Soon as their fragrant task is done,
 Are wafted high in death !

SECOND SUNDAY AFTER EASTER

He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the Most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open: I shall see Him, but not now: I shall behold Him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab and destroy all the children of Sheth. Numbers xxiv. 16, 17.

¹ Cf. Genesis xix. 11.

BALAAM. March 24, 1826.

The warning of Balaam—whom neither the sight of God's almighty Power, nor the prophetic vision could wean from avarice—leads on to a prayer that Christians who see more than Balaam saw may answer to that knowledge with love.

O FOR a sculptor's hand,
 That thou mightst take thy stand,
 Thy wild hair floating on the eastern breeze,
 Thy tranced yet open gaze
 Fixed on the desert haze,
 As one who deep in heaven some airy pageant sees.

In outline dim and vast
 Their fearful shadows cast
 The giant forms of empires on their way
 To ruin : one by one
 They tower and they are gone,
 Yet in the Prophet's soul the dreams of avarice
 stay.

No sun or star so bright
 In all the world of light
 That they should draw to Heaven his downward eye :
 He hears the Almighty's word,
 He sees the Angel's sword,
 Yet low upon the earth his heart and treasure lie.

Lo, from yon argent field,
 To him and us revealed,
 One gentle Star glides down, on earth to dwell.
 Chained as they are below
 Our eyes may see it glow,
 And as it mounts again, may track its brightness well.

To him it glared afar,
 A token of wild war,
 The banner of his Lord's victorious wrath :
 But close to us it gleams,
 Its soothing lustre streams
 Around our home's green walls and on our churchway path.

We in the tents abide
 Which he at distance eyed
 Like goodly cedars by the waters spread,
 While seven red altar-fires
 Rose up in wavy spires,
 Where on the mount he watched his sorceries dark and dread.

He watched till morning's ray
 On lake and meadow lay
 And willow-shaded streams, that silent sweep
 Around the bannered lines,
 Where by their several signs
 The desert-wearied tribes in sight of Canaan sleep.

He watched till knowledge came
 Upon his soul like flame—
 Not of those magic fires at random caught :
 But true prophetic light
 Flashed o'er him, high and bright,
 Flashed once, and died away, and left his darkened thought.

And can he choose but fear,
 Who feels his God so near,

That when he fain would curse, his powerless tongue
 In blessing only moves?—
 Alas! the world he loves
 Too close around his heart her tangling veil hath flung.

Sceptre and Star divine,
 Who in Thine inmost shrine
 Hast made us worshippers, O claim Thine own;
 More than Thy seers we know—
 O teach our love to grow
 Up to Thy heavenly light, and reap what Thou hast sown.

THIRD SUNDAY AFTER EASTER

A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world. S. John xvi. 21.

LANGUOR AND TRAVAIL. March 15, 1826.

The brightness of spring checks all remorse and despondency; so the thought of the Incarnation should fill us with bright hope such as each mother feels at the birth of a child.

WELL may I guess and feel
 Why Autumn should be sad;
 But vernal airs should sorrow heal,
 Spring should be gay and glad:
 Yet as along this violet bank I rove,
 The languid sweetness seems to choke
 my breath,
 I sit me down beside the hazel grove,
 And sigh, and half could wish my weariness were death.

Like a bright veering cloud
 Grey blossoms twinkle there,
 Warbles around a busy crowd
 Of larks in purest air.
 Shame on the heart that dreams of blessings
 gone,
 Or wakes the spectral forms of woe and
 crime,
 When nature sings of joy and hope alone,
 Reading her cheerful lesson in her own sweet time.

Nor let the proud heart say,
 In her self-torturing hour,
 The travail pangs must have their way,
 The aching brow must lower.
 To us long since the glorious Child is born,
 Our throes should be forgot, or only seem
 Like a sad vision told for joy at morn,
 For joy that we have waked and found it but a dream.

Mysterious to all thought
 A mother's prime of bliss,
 When to her eager lips is brought
 Her infant's thrilling kiss.
 O never shall it set, the sacred light
 Which dawns that moment on her tender gaze,
 In the eternal distance blending bright
 Her darling's hope and hers, for love and joy and praise.

No need for her to weep

Like Thracian wives of yore,¹

Save when in rapture still and deep

Her thankful heart runs o'er.

They mourned to trust their treasure on the main,

Sure of the storm, unknowing of their guide :

Welcome to her the peril and the pain,

For well she knows the home where they may safely hide.

She joys that one is born

Into a world forgiven,

Her Father's household to adorn,

And dwell with her in Heaven.

So have I seen, in Spring's bewitching hour,

When the glad earth is offering all her best,

Some gentle maid bend o'er a cherished flower,

And wish it worthier on a parent's heart to rest.

FOURTH SUNDAY AFTER EASTER

Nevertheless I tell you the truth ; It is expedient for you that I go away : for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you ; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you. S. John xvi. 7.

THE DOVE ON THE CROSS. 1820 or 1821.

The blessings given by the Holy Spirit compensate for the departure of Christ.

¹ Cf. Herodotus v. 4. "When a child is born, its kindred sit round about it in a circle and weep for the woe it will have to undergo now that it is come into the world, making mention of every ill that falls to the lot of humankind."

MY Saviour, can it ever be
 That I should gain by losing Thee ?
 The watchful mother tarries nigh
 Though sleep have closed her infant's eye,
 For should he wake, and find her gone,
 She knows she could not bear his moan.
 But I am weaker than a child,

And Thou art more than mother dear ;
 Without Thee Heaven were but a wild :
 How can I live without Thee here !

“ 'Tis good for you, that I should go,
 You lingering yet a while below ; ”—
 'Tis Thine own gracious promise, Lord !
 Thy saints have proved the faithful word,
 When Heaven's bright boundless avenue
 Far opened on their eager view,
 And homeward to Thy Father's throne,
 Still lessening, brightening on their sight,
 Thy shadowy car went soaring on ;
 They tracked Thee up the abyss of light.

Thou bidst rejoice ; they dare not mourn,
 But to their home in gladness turn,
 Their home and God's, that favoured place,
 Where still He shines on Abraham's race,
 In prayers and blessings there to wait
 Like suppliants at their monarch's gate,
 Who, bent with bounty rare to aid

The splendours of His crowning day,
 Keeps back a while His largess, made
 More welcome for that brief delay : ¹

¹ Cf. S. Gregory (quoted in I. Williams, “The Resurrection,” p. 93): “She sought the body and found it not: she persevered in seeking, and by this perseverance she finds: and so it is brought about that the fulfilment

In doubt they wait, but not unblest ;
 They doubt not of their Master's rest,
 Nor of the gracious will of Heaven—
 Who gave His Son, sure all has given—
 But in ecstatic awe they muse
 What course the genial stream may choose,
 And far and wide their fancies rove,
 And to their height of wonder strain,
 What secret miracle of love
 Should make their Saviour's going gain.

The days of hope and prayer are past,
 The day of comfort dawns at last,
 The everlasting gates again
 Roll back, and lo ! a royal train—
 From the far depth of light once more
 The floods of glory earthward pour :
 They part like shower-drops in mid air,
 But ne'er so soft fell noon-tide shower,
 Nor evening rainbow gleamed so fair
 To weary swains in parchèd bower.

Swiftly and straight each tongue of flame
 Through cloud and breeze unwavering came,
 And darted to its place of rest
 On some meek brow of Jesus blest.
 Nor fades it yet, that living gleam,
 And still those lambent lightnings stream ;
 Where'er the Lord is, there are they ;
 In every heart that gives them room,
 They light His altar every day,
 Zeal to inflame and vice consume.

of her longings being deferred, they are increased thereby and thus capable of receiving what she finds. For holy longings are increased by being deferred." (Homil ; in Evang. xxv. § 2).

Soft as the plumes of Jesus' Dove
 They nurse the soul to heavenly love :
 The struggling spark of good within,
 Just smothered in the strife of sin,
 They quicken to a timely glow,
 The pure flame spreading high and low.
 Said I, that prayer and hope were o'er ?
 Nay, blessèd Spirit ! but by Thee
 The Church's prayer finds wings to soar,
 The Church's hope finds eyes to see.

Then, fainting soul, arise and sing ;
 Mount, but be sober on the wing ;
 Mount up, for Heaven is won by prayer,
 Be sober, for thou art not there ;
 Till Death the weary spirit free,
 Thy God hath said, " 'Tis good for thee
 To walk by faith and not by sight " :
 Take it on trust a little while ;
 Soon shalt thou read the mystery right
 In the full sunshine of His smile.

Or if thou yet more knowledge crave,
 Ask thine own heart, that willing slave
 To all that works thee woe or harm :
 Shouldst thou not need some mighty charm
 To win thee to thy Saviour's side,
 Though He had deigned with thee to bide ?
 The Spirit must stir the darkling deep,
 The Dove must settle on the Cross,
 Else we should all sin on or sleep
 With Christ in sight, turning our gain to loss.

FIFTH SUNDAY AFTER EASTER

ROGATION SUNDAY

And the Lord was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him : and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.—Deuteronomy ix. 20.

THE PRIEST'S INTERCESSOR.—June 3, 1824.

—K. June 25.—R.

Like the clear note of a bird rising on a summer's day before a shower, so should the voice of the Church go up in the Rogation days before the gifts of Ascension Day, praying for more devotion, on the part of all her children, but especially of her priests ; lest the offended Christ should come in wrath to judge her.

NOW is there solemn pause in earth and Heaven :

The Conqueror now
His bonds hath riven,

And Angels wonder why He stays below :
Yet hath not man his lesson learned,
How endless love should be returned.

Deep is the silence as of summer noon,
When a soft shower
Will trickle soon,

A gracious rain, freshening the weary bower—
O sweetly then far off is heard
The clear note of some lonely bird.

So let thy turtle-dove's sad call arise
In doubt and fear

Through darkening skies,
And pierce, O Lord, Thy justly sealèd ear,
Where on the house top,¹ all night long,
She trills her widowed, faltering song.

¹ Psalm cii. 7.

Teach her to know and love her hour of prayer,
 And evermore,
 As faith grows rare,
 Unlock her heart and offer all its store
 In holier love and humbler vows,
 As suits a lost returning spouse.¹

Not as at first,² but with intenser cry,
 Upon the mount
 She now must lie,
 Till Thy dear love to blot the sad account
 Of her rebellious race be won,
 Pitying the mother in the son.³

But chiefly (for she knows Thee angered worst
 By holiest things
 Profaned and curst)
 Chiefly for Aaron's seed she spreads her wings,
 If but one leaf she may from Thee
 Win of the reconciling tree.

For what shall heal, when holy water banes?
 Or who may guide
 O'er desert plains
 Thy loved yet sinful people wandering wide,
 If Aaron's hand unshrinking mould
 An idol form of earthly gold?⁴

¹ Cf. Hosea ii. 7.

² I fell down before the Lord forty days and forty nights, as I fell down at the first. Deuteronomy ix. 25.

³ Pitying the traces of the mother that still remain in her erring son: i.e. pardoning sinners in the strength of His love for the Church.

⁴ Exodus xxxii. 4.

Therefore her tears are bitter, and as deep
Her boding sigh,
As, while men sleep,
Sad-hearted mothers heave, that wakeful lie,
To muse upon some darling child
Roaming in youth's uncertain wild.

Therefore on fearful dreams her inward sight
Is fain to dwell—
What lurid light
Shall the last darkness of the world dispel,
The Mediator in His wrath
Descending down the lightning's path.

Yet, yet awhile, offended Saviour, pause ;
In act to break ¹
Thine outraged laws,
O spare Thy rebels for Thyne own dear sake ;
Withdraw thine hand, nor dash to earth
The covenant of our second birth.

'Tis forfeit like the first—we own it all—
Yet for love's sake,
Let it not fall ;
But at Thy touch let veilèd hearts awake,
That nearest to Thyne altar lie,
Yet least of holy things descry.

Teacher of teachers! Priest of priests! from Thee
The sweet strong prayer
Must rise to free

First Levi, then all Israel, from the snare.
Thou art our Moses out of sight—
Speak for us, or we perish quite.

¹ Exodus xxxii. 19.

ASCENSION DAY

Why stand ye gazing up into Heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven. Acts i. 11.

ASCENSION DAY. June 18, 1825.

As the eye follows the cloud in the morning sky, so the soul follows the Ascended Lord; and it sees him adored by all the hosts of Heaven, and yet listening to each suppliant's prayer. So we turn back from such contemplation to help human sorrow, till the time comes when, after this life, we may contemplate Him with worthier love and praise.

SOFT cloud, that while the breeze of May
 Chants her glad matins in the leafy arch,
 Draw'st thy bright veil across the heavenly
 way,
 Meet pavement for an Angel's glorious march :

My soul is envious of mine eye,
 That it should soar and glide with thee so fast,
 The while my grovelling thoughts half buried lie,
 Or lawless roam around this earthly waste.

Chains of my heart, avaunt I say—
 I will arise, and in the strength of love
 Pursue the bright track ere it fade away,
 My Saviour's pathway to His home above.

Sure, when I reach the point where earth
 Melts into nothing from the uncumbered sight, Heaven will o'ercome the attraction of my birth,
 And I shall sink in yonder sea of light :

Till resting by the incarnate Lord,
 Once bleeding, now triumphant for my sake,
 I mark Him, how by seraph hosts adored
 He to earth's lowest cares is still awake.

The sun and every vassal star,
 All space, beyond the soar of angel wings,
 Wait on His word: and yet He stays His car
 For every sigh a contrite suppliant brings.¹

He listens to the silent tear
 For all the anthems of the boundless sky—
 And shall our dreams of music bar our ear
 To His soul-piercing voice for ever nigh?²

Nay, gracious Saviour—but as now
 Our thoughts have traced Thee to Thy glory-
 throne,

So help us evermore with Thee to bow
 Where human sorrow breathes her lowly moan.

We must not stand to gaze too long,
 Though on unfolding Heaven our gaze we bend,
 Where lost behind the bright angelic throng
 We see Christ's entering triumph slow ascend.

No fear but we shall soon behold,
 Faster than now it fades, that gleam revive,
 When issuing from his cloud of fiery gold
 Our wasted frames feel the true sun, and live.

Then shall we see Thee as Thou art,
 For ever fixed in no unfruitful gaze,

But such as lifts the new-created heart,
 Age after age, in worthier love and praise.

¹ Cf. Isaiah lvii. 15.

² "To His soul-piercing voice": "To duty's wakeful voice."—MSS.

SUNDAY AFTER ASCENSION

As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God. 1 S. Peter iv. 10.

SEED-TIME. June 25, 1824.

Earth renders her due return to God for every seed intrusted to her care, and rebukes our hearts which make so little return. God's gifts are liberal and wise, divided severally to each; and our charity should give with equal liberality and wisdom, pointing each to the unspent treasures of God's love. So was it with the early Church, which waited prayerfully until the gifts of the Spirit came, and then gave back in active service to Him all that He gave to them.

THE earth that in her genial breast
 Makes for the down a kindly nest,
 Where wafted by the warm south-west
 It floats at pleasure,
 Yields, thankful, of her very best,
 To nurse her treasure :

True to her trust, tree, herb, or reed,
 She renders for each scattered seed,
 And to her Lord with duteous heed
 Gives large increase :
 Thus year by year she works unfee'd,
 And will not cease.

Woe worth these barren hearts of ours,
 Where Thou hast set celestial flowers,
 And watered with more balmy showers
 Than e'er distilled
 In Eden on the ambrosial bowers—
 Yet naught we yield.

Largely Thou givest, gracious Lord,
Largely Thy gifts should be restored ;
Freely Thou givest, and Thy word
 Is, " Freely give." ¹

He only who forgets to hoard
 Has learned to live.

Wisely Thou givest ; all around
Thine equal rays are resting found,
Yet varying so on various ground
 They pierce and strike,
That not two roseate cups are crowned
 With dew alike :

Even so, in silence, likest Thee,
Steals on soft-handed Charity,
Tempering her gifts, that seem so free,
 By time and place,
Till not a woe the bleak world see
 But finds her grace :

Eyes to the blind, and to the lame
Feet, and to sinners wholesome blame,
To starving bodies food and flame
 By turns she brings,
To humbled souls, that sink for shame,
 Lends heavenward wings :

Leads them the way our Saviour went,
And shews Love's treasure yet unspent,
As when the unclouded heavens were rent
 Opening His road,
Nor yet His Holy Spirit sent
 To our abode.

¹ S. Matthew x. 8.

Ten days the eternal doors displayed
 Were wondering (so the Almighty bade)
 Whom Love enthroned would send, in aid
 Of souls that mourn,
 Left orphans in earth's dreary shade
 As soon as born.

Open they stand, that prayers in throngs
 May rise on high, and holy songs,
 Such incense as of right belongs
 To the true shrine,
 Where stands the Healer of all wrongs
 In light divine ;

The golden censer in His hand,
 He offers hearts from every land,
 Tied to His own by gentlest band
 Of silent Love :
 About Him wingèd blessings stand
 In act to move.

A little while, and they shall fleet
 From Heaven to earth, attendants meet
 On the life-giving Paraclete,
 Speeding His flight,
 With all that sacred is and sweet,
 On saints to light.

Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, all
 Shall feel the shower of Mercy fall,
 And, starting at the Almighty's call,
 Give what He gave,
 Till their high deeds the world appal,
 And sinners save.

WHITSUNDAY

And suddenly there came a sound from Heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Acts ii. 2, 3, 4.

1819 or 1820.

The first manifestation of God on Sinai in power and wrath is contrasted with the second manifestation in power and love on the day of Pentecost, and leads to a prayer that our ears may listen to the Spirit's harmonies.

WHEN God of old came down from Heaven,

In power and wrath He came ;
Before His feet the clouds were riven,
Half darkness and half flame :

Around the trembling mountain's base
The prostrate people lay,
A day of wrath, and not of grace ;
A dim and dreadful day.

But when He came the second time,
He came in power and love,
Softer than gale at morning prime Hovered His holy Dove.

The fires that rushed on Sinai down
In sudden torrents dread,
Now gently light, a glorious crown,
On every sainted head.

Like arrows went those lightnings forth
 Winged with the sinner's doom,
But these, like tongues, o'er all the earth
 Proclaiming life to come :

And as on Israel's awe-struck ear
 The voice exceeding loud,
The trump, that angels quake to hear,
 Thrilled from the deep, dark cloud ;

So, when the Spirit of our God
 Came down His flock to find,
A voice from Heaven was heard abroad,
 A rushing, mighty wind.

Nor doth the outward ear alone
 At that high warning start ;
Conscience gives back the appalling tone ;
 'Tis echoed in the heart.

It fills the Church of God ; it fills
 The sinful world around ;
Only in stubborn hearts and wills
 No place for it is found.

To other strains our souls are set ;
 A giddy whirl of sin
Fills ear and brain, and will not let Heaven's harmonies come in.

Come, Lord, come Wisdom, Love, and Power,
 Open our ears to hear ;
Let us not miss the accepted hour ;
 Save, Lord, by Love or Fear.

MONDAY IN WHITSUN-WEEK

So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city. Genesis xi. 8.

THE CITY OF CONFUSION. Feb. 25, 1826.—
Hursley.

The ruins of Babylon—not graceful and picturesque, as we should wish for scenes dear to our affections, but forlorn and weary and the home of wild beasts—are a proof of God's complete overthrow of the world's ambitious Empires. Only one Empire is permanent, the Empire of Christ; only one ambition is rewarded, the ambition to overcome self.

SINCE all that is not Heaven must fade,
Light be the hand of Ruin laid
Upon the home I love:
With lulling spell let soft decay
Steal on, and spare the giant sway,¹
The crash of tower and grove.

Far opening down some woodland deep
In their own quiet glade should sleep
The relics dear to thought,
And wild-flower wreaths from side to side
Their waving tracery hang, to hide
What ruthless Time has wrought.

Such are the visions green and sweet
That o'er the wistful fancy fleet
In Asia's sea-like plain,
Where slowly, round his isles of sand,
Euphrates through the lonely land
Winds toward the pearly main.

¹ i.e. "spare the terrific sweep of the blow," cf. Milton Par. Lost, vi. 251: or, "spare the terrible swaying of tower and grove."

Slumber is there, but not of rest ;
 There her forlorn and weary nest
 The famished hawk has found,
 The wild dog howls at fall of night,
 The serpent's rustling coils affright
 The traveller on his round.

What shapeless form, half lost on high,¹
 Half seen against the evening sky,
 Seems like a ghost to glide,
 And watch, from Babel's crumbling heap,
 Where in her shadow, fast asleep,
 Lies fallen imperial Pride ?

With half-closed eye a lion there
 Is basking in his noontide lair,
 Or prowls in twilight gloom.
 The golden city's king he seems,
 Such as in old prophetic dreams²
 Sprang from rough ocean's womb.

But where are now his eagle wings,
 That sheltered erst a thousand kings,
 Hiding the glorious sky
 From half the nations, till they own
 No holier name, no mightier throne ?
 That vision is gone by.

¹ See Sir R. K. Porter's "Travels," ii. 387. "In my second visit to Birs Nimrood, my party suddenly halted, having descried several dark objects moving along the summit of its hill, which they construed into dismounted Arabs on the look-out : I took out my glass to examine, and soon distinguished that the causes of our alarm were two or three majestic lions, taking the air upon the heights of the pyramid."—J. K.

² Daniel vii. 4.

Quenched is the golden statue's ray,¹
The breath of Heaven has blown away
 What toiling earth had piled,
Scattering wise heart and crafty hand,
As breezes strew on ocean's sand
 The fabrics of a child.

Divided thence through every age
Thy rebels, Lord, their warfare wage,
 And hoarse and jarring all
Mount up their heaven-assailing cries
To thy bright watchmen in the skies
 From Babel's shattered wall.

Thrice only since, with blended might
The nations on that haughty height
 Have met to scale the Heaven :
Thrice only might a seraph's look
A moment's shade of sadness brook—
 Such power to guilt was given.

Now the fierce bear and leopard keen²
Are perished as they ne'er had been,
 Oblivion is their home :
Ambition's boldest dream and last
Must melt before the clarion blast
 That sounds the dirge of Rome.

Heroes and kings, obey the charm,
Withdraw the proud high-reaching arm ;

¹ Daniel ii. and iii.

² Dan. vii. 5, 6. This is based on the traditional interpretation of the four beasts, as signifying the Chaldæan, Persian, Greek, and Roman Empires.

There is an oath on high,
That ne'er on brow of mortal birth
Shall blend again the crowns of earth,
Nor in according cry.

Her many voices mingling own
One tyrant lord, one idol throne.
But to His triumph soon
He shall descend who rules above,
And the pure language of His love¹
All tongues of men shall tune.

Nor let Ambition heartless mourn ;
When Babel's very ruins burn,
Her high desires may breathe :—
O'ercome thyself, and thou mayst share
With Christ His Father's throne,² and wear
The world's imperial wreath.

TUESDAY IN WHITSUN-WEEK

When He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them. S. John x. 4.

HOLY ORDERS. 1825.

The Lord's life a pattern to all pastors—to prevent them from despondency.

(ADDRESSED TO CANDIDATES FOR ORDINATION.)

“ LORD, in thy field I work all day,
I read, I teach, I warn, I pray,
And yet these wilful wandering sheep
Within Thy fold I cannot keep.

¹ Then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent. Zephaniah iii. 9.

² To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne. Revelation iii. 21.

“I journey, yet no step is won—
Alas! the weary course I run!
Like sailors shipwrecked in their dreams,
All powerless and benighted seems.”

What? wearied out with half a life?
Scared with this smooth unbloody strife?
Think where thy coward hopes had flown
Had Heaven held out the martyr's crown.

How couldst thou hang upon the Cross,
To whom a weary hour is loss?
Or how the thorns and scourging brook,
Who shrinkest from a scornful look?

Yet, ere thy craven spirit faints,
Hear thine own King—the King of saints;
Though thou wert toiling in the grave,
'Tis He can cheer thee, He can save.

He is the eternal mirror bright,
Where angels view the Father's light,
And yet in Him the simplest swain
May read his homely lesson plain.

Early to quit His home on earth,
And claim His high celestial birth,
Alone with His true Father found
Within the Temple's solemn round:—

Yet in meek duty to abide
For many a year at Mary's side,
Nor heed, though restless spirits ask,
“What? hath the Christ forgot His task?”—

Conscious of Deity within,
 To bow before an heir of sin,
 With folded arms on humble breast,
 By His own servant washed and blest :—

Then full of Heaven, the mystic Dove
 Hovering His gracious brow above,
 To shun the voice and eye of praise,
 And in the wild His trophies raise :—

With hymns of angels in his ears,
 Back to His task of woe and tears,
 Unmurmuring through the world to roam
 With not a wish or thought at home :—¹

All but Himself to heal and save,
 Till, ripened for the Cross and grave,
 He to His Father gently yield
 The breath that our redemption sealed :—

Then to unearthly life arise,
 Yet not at once to seek the skies,
 But glide a while from saint to saint,
 Lest on our lonely way we faint ;

And through the cloud by glimpses shew
 How bright, in Heaven, the marks will glow
 Of the true Cross, imprinted deep
 Both on the Shepherd and the sheep :—

When out of sight, in heart and prayer
 Thy chosen people still to bear,
 And from behind Thy glorious veil
 Shed light that cannot change or fail :—

¹ "At home," i.e. without a thought or wish limited to Himself and His own interests. Compare the taunt, "He saved others: Himself He cannot save."

This is Thy pastoral course, O Lord,
Till we be saved, and Thou adored ;—
Thy course and ours—but who are they
Who follow on the narrow way ?

And yet of Thee from year to year
The Church's solemn chant we hear,
As from Thy cradle to Thy throne
She swells her high heart-cheering tone.

Listen, ye pure white-robèd souls,
Whom in her list¹ she now enrolls,
And gird ye for your high emprize
By these her thrilling minstrelsies.

And wheresoe'er, in earth's wide field,
Ye lift, for Him, the red-cross shield,²
Be this your song, your joy and pride—
“ Our Champion went before and died.”

TRINITY SUNDAY

If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things ?

S. John iii. 12.

March 3, 1826.

The course of the Church's festivals brings us at last to gaze on the mystery of the Trinity ; we are like travellers whose vision is tangled in the woods, but who catch, through the network of the branches, dreamlike glimpses of the bright scene beyond ; or as worshippers who stand outside the choir up to which the three aisles have led them, and listen in adoration to the worship that is going on within. As we worship, we find peace such as the world does not know, for the unfilial or envious or gloomy heart can never delight in the Father, Son, and Spirit. Keep us then at Thy side, O blessed Trinity.

¹ “List” : but “lists.” K.3.

² “Red-cross shield.” The allusion is to the Red-Cross Knight of Spenser's “Faery Queen”

The three-lined metre is evidently adapted to the subject. It is not found elsewhere in the "Christian Year."

CREATOR, Saviour, strengthening Guide,
Now on Thy mercy's ocean wide
Far out of sight we seem to glide.

Help us, each hour, with steadier eye
To search the deepening mystery,
The wonders of Thy sea and sky.

The blessèd angels look and long
To praise Thee with a worthier song,
And yet our silence does Thee wrong.¹

Along the Church's central space
The sacred weeks with unfelt pace
Have borne us on from grace to grace.

As travellers on some woodland height,
When wintry suns are gleaming bright,
Lose in arched glades their tangled sight:

By glimpses such as dreamers love
Through her grey veil the leafless grove
Shews where the distant shadows rove;

Such trembling joy the soul o'erawes
As nearer to Thy shrine she draws:
And now before the choir we pause.

¹ Cf. S. Augustine, "Confess." i. c. 4. Et vix tacentibus de te, quoniam loquaces muti sunt.

The door is closed—but soft and deep
Around the awful arches sweep
Such airs as soothe a hermit's sleep.

From each carved nook and fretted bend
Cornice and gallery seem to send Tones that with seraph hymns might blend

Three solemn parts together twine
In harmony's mysterious line ;
Three solemn aisles approach the shrine :

Yet all are One—together all,
In thoughts that awe but not appal,
Teach the adoring heart to fall.

Within these walls each fluttering guest
Is gently lured to one safe nest—
Without, 'tis moaning¹ and unrest.

The busy world a thousand ways
Is hurrying by, nor ever stays
To catch a note of Thy dear praise.

Why tarries not her chariot wheel,
That o'er her with no vain appeal
One gust of heavenly song might steal ?

Alas ! for her Thy opening flowers
Unheeded breathe to summer showers,
Unheard the music of Thy bowers.

What echoes from the sacred dome
The selfish spirit may o'ercome
That will not hear of love or home ?

¹ "Moaning": "wilderling."—MSS.

The heart that scorned a father's care,
 How can it rise in filial prayer?
 How an all-seeing Guardian bear?

Or how shall envious brethren own
 A Brother¹ on the eternal throne,
 Their Father's joy, their hope alone?

How shall Thy Spirit's gracious wile
 The sullen brow of gloom beguile,
 That frowns on sweet affection's smile?

Eternal One, Almighty Trine!
 (Since thou art ours, and we are Thine)
 By all Thy love did once resign,

By all the grace Thy heavens still hide,
 We pray Thee, keep us at Thy side,
 Creator, Saviour, strengthening Guide!

FIRST SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

So Joshua smote all the country . . . and all their kings: he left none remaining. Joshua x. 40.

ISRAEL AMONG THE RUINS OF CANAAN.

Jan. 27, 1826.—Hursley.

A prayer against sadness. As the Israelite found the Promised Land of milk and honey to be full of ruins and decay, so the Christian has entered into the promised Kingdom of Heaven, in which the whole Trinity unites to bless him, yet still finds clouds, disappointment, and fading joys. May God then open

¹ "Brother": "a child upon the eternal throne."—
 MSS. There is doubtless an allusion to Joseph's brethren. Cf. Genesis xxxvii. 3-11.

our eyes to see the blessings around us and to press on to the eternal bourne.

WHERE is the land with milk and honey flowing,

The promise of our God, our fancy's theme?
Here over shattered walls dank weeds are growing,
And blood and fire have run in mingled stream;
Like oaks and cedars all around
The giant corpses strew the ground,
And haughty Jericho's cloud-piercing wall
Lies where it sank at Joshua's trumpet call.

These are not scenes for pastoral dance at even,
For moonlight roving in the fragrant glades,
Soft slumbers in the open eye of Heaven,
And all the listless joy of summer shades.

We in the midst of ruins live,
Which every hour dread warning give,
Nor may our household vine or fig-tree hide
The broken arches of old Canaan's pride.

Where is the sweet repose of hearts repenting,
The deep calm sky, the sunshine of the soul,
Now Heaven and earth are to our bliss consenting
And all the Godhead joins to make us whole?

The triple crown of mercy now
Is ready for the suppliant's brow,
By the Almighty Three for ever planned,
And from behind the cloud held out by Jesus'
hand.

"Now, Christians, hold your own—the land before ye

Is open—win your way, and take your rest."
So sounds our war-note; but our path of glory
By many a cloud is darkened and unblest:

And daily as we downward glide,
 Life's ebbing stream on either side
 Shows at each turn some mouldering hope or joy,
 The man seems following still the funeral of the boy.

Open our eyes, Thou Sun of life and gladness,
 That we may see that glorious world of Thine !
 It shines for us in vain, while drooping sadness
 Enfolds us here like mist: come, Power benign,
 Touch our chilled hearts with vernal smile,
 Our wintry course do Thou beguile,
 Nor by the wayside ruins let us mourn,
 Who have the eternal towers for our appointed bourne.

SECOND SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.
 We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. 1 S. John iii. 13, 14.

CHARITY THE LIFE OF FAITH. Aug. 7, 1822.

Love is the secret of all life, the life of nature and the life of man. The common love of Christ makes every human life precious in our sight, even the sinner's, and it will make us draw closer to each other in spite of temptation and persecution.

THE clouds that wrap the setting sun
 When Autumn's softest gleams are ending,
 Where all bright hues together run
 In sweet confusion blending:—
 Why, as we watch their floating wreath,
 Seem they the breath of life to breathe?
 To Fancy's eye their motions prove
 They mantle round¹ the Sun for love.

¹ i.e. they enfold as with a mantle.

When up some woodland dale¹ we catch

The many-twinkling smile of ocean,²
Or with pleased ear bewildered watch

His chime of restless motion ;³

Still as the surging waves retire

They seem to gasp with strong desire,

Such signs of love old Ocean gives,

We cannot choose but think he lives.

Wouldst thou the life of souls discern ?

Nor human wisdom nor divine

Helps thee by aught beside to learn ;

Love is life's only sign.

The spring of the regenerate heart,

The pulse, the glow of every part,

Is the true love of Christ our Lord,

As man embraced, as God adored.

But he whose heart will bound to mark

The full bright burst of summer morn,

Loves too each little dewy spark

By leaf or floweret worn :

Cheap forms and common hues, 'tis true,

Through the bright shower-drop meet his view :

The colouring may be of this earth ;

The lustre comes of heavenly birth.

Even so, who loves the Lord aright,

No soul of man can worthless find ;

All will be precious in his sight,

Since Christ on all hath shined :

¹ "Some of the woods round Sidmouth may be taken to have suggested this description."—Miss Yonge, "Musings," p. 178.

² ποντίων τε κυμάτων

ἀνήριθμον γέλασμα. Æschyl. P. V. 89.—J. K.

³ "Chime," "tones."—MSS.

But chiefly Christian souls ; for they,
 Though worn and soiled with sinful clay,
 Are yet, to eyes that see them true,
 All glistening with baptismal dew.

Then marvel not, if such as bask
 In purest light of innocence,
 Hope against hope, in love's dear task,
 Spite of all dark offence.

If they who hate the trespass most,
 Yet, when all other love is lost,
 Love the poor sinner, marvel not ;
 Christ's mark outwears the rankest blot.

No distance breaks the tie of blood ;
 Brothers are brothers evermore ;
 Nor wrong, nor wrath of deadliest mood,
 That magic may o'erpower ;
 Oft, ere the common source be known,
 The kindred drops will claim their own,
 And throbbing pulses silently
 Move heart towards heart by sympathy.¹

So is it with true Christian hearts ;
 Their mutual share in Jesus' blood
 An everlasting bond imparts
 Of holiest brotherhood :

¹ Possibly an allusion to "Cymbeline," Act iii. sc. 6. (The interview between Imogen and her brothers.)
 Cf. Act v. sc. 5.

Imog. O my gentle brothers,
 Have we thus met ? O, never say hereafter
 But I am truest speaker : you called me brother,
 When I was but your sister ; I you brothers,
 When ye were so indeed.

Cymb. Did you e'er meet ?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Gui. And at first meeting loved.

Oh ! might we all our lineage prove,
 Give and forgive, do good and love,
 By soft endearments in kind strife
 Lightening the load of daily life !

There is much need : for not as yet
 Are we in shelter or repose ;
 The holy house is still beset
 With leaguer of stern foes ;
 Wild thoughts within, bad men without,
 All evil spirits round about,
 Are banded in unblest device
 To spoil Love's earthly paradise.

Then draw we nearer day by day,
 Each to his brethren, all to God ;
 Let the world take us as she may,
 We must not change our road ;
 Not wondering, though in grief, to find
 The martyr's foe still keep her mind ;
 But fixed to hold Love's banner fast,
 And by submission win at last.

THIRD SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth. S. Luke xv. 10.

COMFORT FOR SINNERS IN THE PRESENCE OF THE GOOD. April 7, 1826.

Remorse purified into penitence.

The reproach of conscience drives us from home into the solitudes of Nature, and even there prevents our enjoyment of its beauty, so that we grieve the angels that we cannot join in their praise: but such remorse may be lifted from mere selfish fear of consequences into true penitence, and thus, welcomed by gentle forgiving Christians and by the angels, the penitent will no longer shudder at the Presence of God

This poem should be compared with those for Ash Wednesday and the Twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity. The picture of the murderer of Laius flying into solitude in Sophocles, "Æd. Tyr." 471, may have coloured the language.

○ HATEFUL spell of sin! when friends are nigh,

To make stern Memory tell her tale unsought,
And raise accusing shades of hours gone by,
To come between us and all kindly thought!

Chilled at her touch, the self-reproaching soul
Flies from the heart and home she dearest loves
To where lone mountains tower, or billows roll,
Or to your endless depth, ye solemn groves!

In vain: the averted cheek in loneliest dell
Is conscious of a gaze it cannot bear,
The leaves that rustle near us seem to tell
Our heart's sad secret to the silent air.

Nor is the dream untrue: for all around
The heavens are watching with their thousand eyes,
We cannot pass our guardian angel's bound,
Resigned or sullen, he will hear our sighs.

He in the mazes of the budding wood
Is near, and mourns to see our thankless glance Dwell coldly, where the fresh green earth is strewn
With the first flowers that lead the vernal dance.

In wasteful bounty showered, they smile unseen,
Unseen by man—but what if purer sprights
By moonlight o'er their dewy bosoms lean,
To adore the Father of all gentle lights?¹

If such there be, O grief and shame to think
That sight of thee should overcloud their joy,
A newborn soul, just waiting on the brink
Of endless life, yet wrapt in earth's annoy!

O turn, and be thou turned! the selfish tear,
In bitter thoughts of low-born care begun,
Let it flow on, but flow refined and clear,
The turbid waters brightening as they run.

Let it flow on, till all thine earthly heart
In penitential drops have ebbed away,
Then fearless turn where Heaven hath set thy part,
Nor shudder at the Eye that saw thee stray.²

O lost and found! all gentle souls below
Their dearest welcome shall prepare, and prove
Such joy o'er thee, as raptured seraphs know,
Who learn their lesson at the Throne of Love.

¹ Cf. S. James i. 17.

² Cf. 2 Cor. vii. 10. Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death.

FOURTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope, because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. Romans viii. 19-22.

THE GROANS OF NATURE. August 20, 1820.

The whole of creation witnesses to the goodness of God; it is only man's sin that prevents his hearing the witness; yet from time to time in some quiet starlit night the thought comes home to him, as it did to Pagan Poets. They caught glimpses of a deeper meaning in Nature, though they could not anticipate the message of Redemption, which was to ennoble the meanest things below. We have heard this message, yet even to us there is a note of sadness in Nature because of the presence of sin.

Compare the poems on Septuagesima Sunday and Easter Day, and for the reference to Pagan poetry that for the Third Sunday in Lent, and the lectures on Lucretius and Virgil in Keble's "Prælectiones Academicæ."

IT was not then a poet's dream,
 An idle vaunt of song,
 Such as beneath the moon's soft gleam
 On vacant fancies throng;

Which bids us see in heaven and earth,
 In all fair things around,
 Strong yearnings for a blest new birth
 With sinless glories crowned;

Which bids us hear, at each sweet pause
 From care and want and toil,
 When dewy eve her curtain draws
 Over the day's turmoil,

In the low chant of wakeful birds,
 In the deep weltering flood,
 In whispering leaves, these solemn words---
 "God made us all for good."

All true, all faultless, all in tune,
 Creation's wondrous choir
 Opened in mystic unison
 To last till time expire.

And still it lasts: by day and night,
 With one consenting voice,
 All hymn Thy glory, Lord, aright,
 All worship and rejoice.

Man only mars the sweet accord,
 O'erpowering with "harsh din"¹
 The music of Thy works and word,
 Ill matched with grief and sin.

¹ "Harsh din," from Milton's Ode, "At a Solemn Music":

"That we on earth, with undiscording voice
 May rightly answer that melodious noise;
 As once we did, till disproportioned sin
 Jarred against Nature's chime, and with harsh din
 Broke the fair music that all creatures made
 To their great Lord."

Compare also Sir W. Scott, "Rokeby," Canto iii. 1:

"Man only mars kind Nature's plan."

Sin is with man at morning break,
 And through the live-long day
 Deafens the ear that fain would wake
 To Nature's simple lay.

But when eve's silent foot-fall steals
 Along the eastern sky,
 And one by one to earth reveals
 Those purer fires on high,

When one by one each human sound
 Dies on the awful ear,
 Then Nature's voice no more is drowned,
 She speaks and we must hear.

Then pours she on the Christian heart
 That warning still and deep,
 At which high spirits of old would start
 E'en from their Pagan sleep,

Just guessing, through their murky blind,¹
 Few, faint, and baffling sight,
 Streaks of a brighter Heaven behind,
 A cloudless depth of light.

Such thoughts, the wreck of Paradise,
 'Through many a dreary age,
 Upbore whate'er of good and wise
 Yet lived in bard or sage :

They marked what agonising throes
 Shook the great mother's womb ;
 But Reason's spells might not disclose
 The gracious birth to come ;

¹ "Blind," i.e. a veil, anything which shuts out the light. Cf. "Gunpowder Treason": St. 7:
 "Error's soothing blind."

Nor could the enchantress Hope forecast
God's secret love and power ;
The travail pangs of Earth must last
Till her appointed hour ;

The hour that saw from opening Heaven
Redeeming glory stream,
Beyond the summer hues of even,
Beyond the mid-day beam.

Thenceforth, to eyes of high desire,
The meanest things below,
As with a Seraph's robe of fire
Invested, burn and glow :

The rod of Heaven has touched them all,
The word from Heaven is spoken ;
" Rise, shine, and sing, thou captive thrall ;
Are not thy fetters broken ?

" The God Who hallowed thee and blessed,
Pronouncing thee all good—
Hath He not all thy wrongs redressed,
And all thy bliss renewed ?

" Why mourn'st thou still as one bereft,
Now that the eternal Son
His blessèd home in Heaven hath left
To make thee all His own ? "

Thou mourn'st because Sin lingers still
In Christ's new Heaven and earth ;
Because our rebel works and will
Stain our immortal birth :

Because, as love and prayer grow cold,
 The Saviour hides His face,
 And worldlings blot the temple's gold
 With uses vile and base.

Hence all thy groans and travail pains,
 Hence, till thy God return,
 In wisdom's ear thy blithest strains,
 O Nature, seem to mourn.

FIFTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night and have taken nothing: nevertheless at Thy word I will let down the net. And when they had this done, they enclosed a great multitude of fishes: and their net brake. S. Luke v. 5, 6.

THE FISHERMEN OF BETHSAIDA. 1821.

Christ's Presence has power to cheer the Christian Pastor in his hour of weariness and despondency. If he succeeds, that Presence saves him from self-satisfied conceit: if he fails, it yet brings the assurance that Christ blesses even in disappointment those who work for love.

“THE live-long night we've toiled in vain,
 But at Thy gracious word,
 I will let down the net again:—
 Do Thou Thy will, O Lord!”

So spake the weary fisher, spent
 With bootless darkling toil,
 Yet on his Master's bidding bent
 For love and not for spoil.

So day by day and week by week,
In sad and weary thought,
They muse, whom God hath set to seek
The souls His Christ hath bought.

For not upon a tranquil lake
Our pleasant task we ply,
Where all along our glistening wake
The softest moonbeams lie ;

Where rippling wave and dashing oar
Our midnight chant attend,
Or whispering palm-leaves from the shore
With midnight silence blend.

Sweet thoughts of peace, ye may not last :
Too soon some ruder sound
Calls us from where ye soar so fast
Back to our earthly round.

For wildest storms our ocean sweep :—
No anchor but the Cross
Might hold : and oft the thankless deep
Turns all our toil to loss.

Full many a dreary anxious hour
We watch our nets alone
In drenching spray and driving shower,
And hear the night-bird's moan :

At morn we look, and nought is there ;
Sad dawn of cheerless day !¹
Who then from pining and despair
The sickening heart can stay ?

¹ "Sad night brings cheerless day."—MSS.

There is a stay—and we are strong ;
 Our Master is at hand,
 To cheer our solitary song,
 And guide us to the strand,

In His own time : but yet a while
 Our bark at sea must ride ;
 Cast after cast, by force or guile,
 All waters must be tried :

By blameless guile or gentle force,
 As when He deigned to teach
 (The lode-star of our Christian course)
 Upon this sacred beach.

Should e'er thy wonder-working grace
 Triumph by our weak arm,
 Let not our sinful fancy trace
 Aught human in the charm :

To our own nets¹ ne'er bow we down,
 Lest on the eternal shore
 The angels, while our draught they own,²
 Reject us evermore :

Or, if for our unworthiness
 Toil, prayer, and watching fail,
 In disappointment Thou canst bless,
 So love at heart prevail.

¹ They sacrifice unto their net, and burn incense unto their drag. Habakkuk i. 16.

² S. Matthew xiii. 49.

SIXTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

David said unto Nathan, I have sinned against the Lord. And Nathan said unto David, The Lord also hath put away thy sin ; thou shalt not die. 2 Samuel xii. 13.

THE PSALMIST REPENTING. April 15, 1826.

The thought of God's forgiving Presence is the cure for remorse and melancholy ; as the poet-king heard Nathan's message, and then poured forth his peaceful penitence in the Fifty-first Psalm, pray for the present minstrel that he too may know the blessing of forgiveness.

Compare the "Dedication" prefixed to the later editions of the "Christian Year."

WHEN bitter thoughts, of conscience born,
 With sinners wake at morn,
 When from our restless couch we start,
 With fevered lips and withered heart,
 Where is the spell to charm those mists away,
 And make new morning in that darksome day?
 One draught of spring's delicious air,
 One steadfast thought that God is there.

These are Thy wonders, hourly wrought,¹
 Thou Lord of time and thought,
 Lifting and lowering souls at will,
 Crowding a world of good or ill

¹ There seems a reminiscence of G. Herbert, "The Flower," st. 3 :

"These are Thy wonders, Lord of power,
 Killing and quickening, bringing down to hell
 And up to heaven in an hour ;
 Making a chiming of a passing-bell.

We say amisse,
 This or that is ;
 Thy word is all, if we could spell."

Into a moment's vision : even as light
Mounts o'er a cloudy ridge, and all is bright,
From west to east one thrilling ray
Turning a wintry world to May.

Wouldst thou the pangs of guilt assuage?
Lo ! here an open page,
Where heavenly mercy shines as free,
Written in balm, sad heart, for thee.
Never so fast, in silent April shower,
Flushed into green the dry and leafless bower,¹
As Israel's crownèd mourner felt
The dull hard stone within him melt.

The absolver saw the mighty grief,
And hastened with relief ;—
“ The Lord forgives ; thou shalt not die ! ”—
'Twas gently spoke, yet heard on high,
And all the band of angels, used to sing
In Heaven, accordant to his raptured string,
Who many a month had turned away
With veilèd eyes, nor owned his lay,

Now spread their wings and throng around
To the glad mournful sound,
And welcome, with bright open face,
The broken heart to love's embrace.
The rock is smitten, and to future years
Springs ever fresh the tide of holy tears²
And holy music, whispering peace
Till time and sin together cease.

¹ “ And all this leafless and uncoloured scene
Shall flush into variety again.”

Cowper, “ The Task,” vi. 178-180.—J. K.

² The fifty-first Psalm.

There drink : and when ye are at rest,
 With that free Spirit blest,¹
 Who to the contrite can dispense
 The princely heart of innocence,
 If ever, floating from faint earthly lyre,
 Was wafted to your soul one high desire,
 By all the trembling hope ye feel,
 Think on the minstrel as ye kneel :

Think on the shame, that dreadful hour
 When tears shall have no power,
 Should his own lay the accuser prove,
 Cold while he kindled others' love :
 And let your prayer for charity arise,
 That his own heart may hear his melodies,
 And a true voice to him may cry,
 " Thy God forgives—thou shalt not die."

SEVENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness? S. Mark viii. 4.

THE FEAST IN THE WILDERNESS.

November 4, 1825.

The Four Thousand in the desert—wearing, faint, in a landscape of fear, with the lonely hills on the North and the memories of the Dead Sea in the South—yet found their needs supplied by the Saviour even there, and that though He used only a poor fisher's rude and scanty store; and they went away with a new brightness for all their life. So it is for us now. As travellers are more conscious of God's Presence in the night, so we, when the rapture of life passes away and we feel our loneliness, are then drawn nearer to Heaven. The sounds of Nature, the flowers, the stars, the lives of simple men, nay, even earth's worst and least, are like the loaves and fishes with which Christ can satisfy us.

¹ Psalm li. 12. "Uphold me with thy free spirit." The original word seems to mean "ingenuous, princely, noble." Read Bishop Horne's Paraphrase on the verse.—J. K.

The connection is rather obscure, but the whole thought is steeped in Wordsworth's "Ode," and should be compared with his account of his own transition from the rapture of boyhood, through the dreariness of manhood when the vision fades into the light of common day, into

"The soothing thoughts that spring
Out of human suffering."

(Compare infra p. 203 and p. 236.)

G O not away, thou weary soul :
Heaven has in store a precious dole
Here on Bethsaida's cold and darksome height,
Where over rocks and sands arise
Proud Sirion in the northern skies,
And Tabor's lonely peak, 'twixt thee and noon-
day light.

And far below, Gennesaret's main
Spreads many a mile of liquid plain,
(Though all seem gathered in one eager bound),¹

¹ Mr Keble is reported to have said late in life that he supposed he meant something of this sort: "That when you stand on a height such as that referred to, you feel an almost irresistible impulse to leap over."* With all due deference, it seems more probable that he meant either "the lake looks from a distance as though it had gathered itself up in one quick leap over its channel" (bound=leap), or "all seem contained within the limit of one eager gaze" (bound=boundary, cf. p. 204, st. 1, and also p. 200, st. 2).

* The "Guardian," March 11, 1874.

Then narrowing cleaves yon palmy lea,¹
 Towards that deep sulphureous sea,
 Where five proud cities lie, by one dire sentence drowned.²

Landscape of fear! yet, weary heart,
 Thou need'st not in thy gloom depart,
 Nor fainting turn to seek thy distant home:
 Sweetly thy sickening throbs are eyed
 By the kind Saviour at thy side;
 For healing and for balm even now thine hour
 is come.

No fiery wing is seen to glide,
 No cates ambrosial are supplied,
 But one poor fisher's rude and scanty store
 Is all He asks (and more than needs)
 Who men and angels daily feeds,
 And stills the wailing sea-bird on the hungry shore.

The feast is o'er, the guests are gone,
 And over all that upland lone
 The breeze of eve sweeps wildly as of old;
 But far unlike the former dreams,
 The heart's sweet moonlight softly gleams
 Upon life's varied view, so joyless erst and cold.

As mountain travellers in the night,
 When heaven by fits is dark and bright,
 Pause listening on the silent heath, and hear
 Nor trampling hoof nor tinkling bell,
 Then bolder scale the rugged fell,
 Conscious the more of One, ne'er seen, yet ever near:

¹ "Then narrowing cleaves yon palm-crowned lea."
 —MSS.

² Gen. xiv. 2; xix. 29.

So when the tones of rapture gay
 On the lorn ear die quite away,
 The lonely world seems lifted nearer Heaven ;
 Seen daily, yet unmarked before,
 Earth's common paths are strewn all o'er
 With flowers of pensive hope, the wreath of man forgiven.

The low sweet tones of Nature's lyre
 No more on listless ears expire,
 Nor vainly smiles along the shady way
 The primrose in her vernal nest,
 Nor unlamented sink to rest
 Sweet roses one by one, nor autumn leaves decay.

There's not a star the heaven can shew,
 There's not a cottage hearth below,
 But feeds with solace kind the willing soul—
 Men love us, or they need our love ;
 Freely they own, or heedless prove
 The curse of lawless hearts, the joy of self-control.¹

Then rouse thee from desponding sleep,
 Nor by the wayside lingering weep,
 Nor fear to seek Him farther in the wild,
 Whose Love can turn earth's worst and least
 Into a conqueror's royal feast :
 Thou wilt not be untrue, thou shalt not be beguiled.

¹ Men either by free obedience own, without experiencing it, the curse of lawlessness, and, by experiencing it, the joy of self-control ; or by disobedience they prove in experience the curse of lawlessness, and by contrast the joy of self-control. In either case they bring solace to us as proving the truth and justice of God's rule.

EIGHTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the Lord. 1 Kings xiii. 26.

THE DISOBEDIENT PROPHET. April 13, 1826.

The death of the disobedient Prophet is a warning to the Christian Pastor that he himself may prove a cast-away.

PROPHET of God, arise and take
 With thee the words of wrath divine,
 The scourge of Heaven, to shake
 O'er yon apostate shrine.

Where angels down the lucid stair
 Came hovering to our sainted sires,
 Now, in the twilight, glare
 The heathen's wizard fires.¹

Go, with thy voice the altar rend,
 Scatter the ashes, be the arm,
 That idols would befriend,
 Shrunk at thy withering charm.

Then turn thee, for thy time is short,
 But trace not o'er the former way,
 Lest idol pleasures court
 Thy heedless soul astray.

'Thou know'st how hard to hurry by,
 Where on the lonely woodland road
 Beneath the moonlight sky
 The festal warblings flowed;

¹ i.e. at Bethel. Cf. Genesis xxviii. 12.

Where maidens to the Queen of Heaven
 Wove the gay dance round oak or palm,
 Or breathed their vows at even
 In hymns as soft as balm.

Or thee perchance a darker spell
 Enthralls : the smooth stones of the flood,¹
 By mountain grot or fell,
 Pollute with infant's blood ;

The giant altar on the rock,
 The cavern whence the timbrel's call
 Affrights the wandering flock :—
 Thou long'st to search them all.

Trust not the dangerous path again—
 O forward step and lingering will !
 O loved and warned in vain !
 And wilt thou perish still ?

Thy message given, thine home in sight,
 To the forbidden feast return ?
 Yield to the false delight
 Thy better soul could spurn ?

Alas, my brother ! round thy tomb
 In sorrow kneeling, and in fear,
 We read the Pastor's doom
 Who speaks and will not hear.

The grey-haired saint may fail at last,
 The surest guide a wanderer prove ;
 Death only binds us fast
 To the bright shore of love.

¹ Among the smooth stones of the stream is thy portion ; they, they are thy lot. Isaiah lvii. 6.

NINTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

And after the earthquake a fire; but the Lord was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice.
1 Kings xix. 12.

ELIJAH IN HOREB. August 13, 1822

In moments of despondency for the state of the Church the story of Elijah on Horeb reminds the Christian Pastor that God's chief method is to use soft, meek, and tender ways to draw sinners to Him, that there are others whom he himself knows not praying for God's cause, and that his task is to work on in faith, not hastily looking for results.

Miss Yonge rightly illustrates this poem by that on "The Gathering of the Church," in the "Lyra Apostolica": ("Miscellaneous Poems," p. 92):

"Israel yet hath thousands sealed
Who to Baal never kneeled:
Seize the banner, spread its fold;
Seize it with no faltering hold;
Spread its foldings high and fair,
Let all see the Cross is there.

"What if to the trumpet's sound
Voices few come answering round?
Scarce a votary swell the burst
When the anthem peals at first?
God hath sown and He will reap;
Growth is slow when roots are deep."

IN troublous days of anguish and rebuke,
While sadly round them Israel's children look,

And their eyes fail for waiting on their
Lord:

While underneath each awful arch of green,
On every mountain top, God's chosen scene
Of pure heart-worship, Baal is adored:

'Tis well true hearts should for a time retire
 To holy ground, in quiet to aspire
 Towards promised regions of serener grace ;
 On Horeb, with Elijah, let us lie,
 Where all around on mountain, sand, and sky,
 God's chariot-wheels have left distinctest
 trace :

There, if in jealousy and strong disdain
 We to the sinner's God of sin complain,
 Untimely seeking here the peace of Heaven—

“ It is enough, O Lord ! now let me die
 E'en as my fathers did : for what am I
 That I should stand, where they have vainly striven ? ” —

Perhaps our God may of our conscience ask, “ What doest thou here, frail wanderer from thy task ?

Where hast thou left those few sheep in the wild ? ” ¹

Then should we plead our heart's consuming pain,
 At sight of ruined altars, prophets slain,
 And God's own ark with blood of souls
 defiled,

He on the rock may bid us stand, and see
 The outskirts of His march of mystery,
 His endless warfare with man's wilful heart ;
 First, His great Power He to the sinner shews,
 Lo ! at His angry blast the rocks unclose,
 And to their base the trembling mountains
 part :

¹ 1 Samuel xvii. 28.

Yet the Lord is not here : 'tis not by Power
He will be known ; but darker tempests lower—
Still, sullen heavings vex the labouring
ground :

Perhaps His Presence through all depth and height,
Best of all gems that deck His crown of light,
The haughty eye may dazzle and confound.

God is not in the earthquake ; but behold
From Sinai's caves are bursting, as of old,
The flames of His consuming jealous ire.
Woe to the sinner, should stern Justice prove
His chosen attribute ;—but He in love
Hastes to proclaim, “ God is not in the fire.”

The storm is o'er—and hark ! a still small voice
Steals on the ear, to say, Jehovah's choice
Is ever with the soft, meek, tender soul :
By soft, meek, tender ways He loves to draw
The sinner, startled by His ways of awe :
Here is our Lord, and not where thunders roll.

Back then, complainer ; loath thy life no more,
Nor deem thyself upon a desert shore,
Because the rocks the nearer prospect close.
Yet in fallen Israel are there hearts and eyes
That day by day in prayer like thine arise :
Thou know'st them not, but their Creator knows.

Go, to the world return, nor fear to cast
Thy bread upon the waters, sure at last¹
In joy to find it after many days.

¹ Ecclesiastes xi. 1.

The work be thine, the fruit thy children's part :
 Choose to believe, not see : sight tempts the heart
 From sober walking in true Gospel ways.

TENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it. S. Luke xix. 41.

CHRIST WEEPING OVER JERUSALEM. 1819.

The Saviour's tears over Jerusalem are not drawn out by the thought of the death of the crowds, nor by the sorrows in store for Himself, but by the thought of their sin and its consequences. His grief is that not of a conqueror, nor of a martyr, but of a Saviour.

A sermon on this text preached in 1818 ("Sermons Occasional and Parochial," No. x.) is the best commentary on this poem.

Miss Yonge ("Musings," p. 210) compares the similar thought in the "Child's Christian Year" for Palm Sunday :

"Why weeps He? For his people's sin,
 And for thy follies all ;
 For each bad dream thine heart within,
 Those tears the bitterer fall."

WHY doth my Saviour weep
 At sight of Sion's bowers ?
 Shews¹ it not fair from yonder steep,
 Her gorgeous crown of towers ?
 Mark well His holy pains :
 'Tis not in pride or scorn,
 That Israel's King with sorrow stains
 His own triumphal morn.

¹ "Shews," i.e. looks, appears (a neuter verb). Cf. All Saints' Day, st. 2 (p. 268). The MSS. read "looks."

It is not that His soul
Is wandering sadly on,
In thought how soon at death's dark goal
Their course will all be run,
Who now are shouting round
Hosanna to their chief;
No thought like this in Him is found,
This were a Conqueror's grief.¹

Or doth He feel the Cross
Already in His heart,
The pain, the shame, the scorn, the loss?
Feel even His God depart?
No: though He knew full well
The grief that then shall be—
The grief that angels cannot tell—
Our God in agony.

It is not thus He mourns;
Such might be martyr's tears,
When his last lingering look he turns
On human hopes and fears;
But hero ne'er or saint
The secret load might know
With which His spirit waxeth faint;
His is a Saviour's woe.

¹ Cf. Herod. vii. 46. Xerxes, while watching the Persian army at Abydos, prepared for the expedition against Greece, "congratulated himself on his good fortune, but after a little while he wept," for "there came upon me," he replied, when asked the reason, "a sudden pity when I thought of the shortness of man's life, and considered that of all this host, so numerous as it is, not one will be alive when a hundred years are gone by."

“If thou hadst known, even thou,
 At least in this thy day,
 The message of thy peace! but now
 ’Tis passed for aye away:
 Now foes shall trench thee round,
 And lay thee even with earth,
 And dash thy children to the ground,
 Thy glory and thy mirth.”

And doth the Saviour weep
 Over his people’s sin,
 Because we will not let Him keep
 The souls He died to win?
 Ye hearts, that love the Lord,
 If at this sight ye burn,
 See that in thought, in deed, in word,¹
 Ye hate what made Him mourn.

ELEVENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

Is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and oliveyards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and maid-servants? 2 Kings v. 26.

GEHAZI REPROVED. September 28, 1823.—K.
 September 8.—R.

The signs of coming Judgment make us grateful for all disappointments that wean us from the world.

It is interesting to read side by side with this poem Keble’s sermon on “The Endurance of Church Imperfections,” written in 1841, upon the text, Jer. xlv. 4, 5, ¹ Cf. Ps. xcvii. 10. O ye that love the Lord, see that ye hate the thing that is evil.

quoted in the notes here. ("Sermons Occasional and Academical," xii.)

IS this a time to plant and build,
 Add house to house and field to field,
 When round our walls the battle lowers,
 When mines are hid beneath our towers,
 And watchful foes are stealing round
 To search and spoil the holy ground ?

Is this a time for moonlight dreams
 Of love and home by mazy streams,
 For Fancy with her shadowy toys,¹
 Aërial hopes and pensive joys,
 While souls are wandering far and wide
 And curses swarm on every side ?

No,—rather steel thy melting heart
 To act the martyr's sternest part,
 To watch with firm unshrinking eye
 Thy darling visions as they die,
 Till all bright hopes and hues of day
 Have faded into twilight grey.

Yes,—let them pass without a sigh,
 And if the world seem dull and dry,
 If long and sad thy lonely hours,
 And winds have rent thy sheltering bowers,
 Bethink thee what thou art, and where,
 A sinner in a life of care.

The fire of God is soon to fall
 (Thou know'st it) on this earthly ball ;
 Full many a soul, the price of blood,
 Marked by the Almighty's hand for good,

¹ "For soft endearments, pastoral joys,
 For memory's shadows, fancy's toys."—MSS.

To utter death that hour shall sweep—¹
And will the Saints in Heaven dare weep?

Then in His wrath shall God uproot
The trees He set, for lack of fruit,
And drown in rude tempestuous blaze
The towers His hand had deigned to raise ;
In silence, ere that storm begin,
Count o'er His mercies and thy sin.

Pray only that thine aching heart,
From visions vain content to part,
Strong for Love's sake its woe to hide,
May cheerful wait the Cross beside,
Too happy if, that dreadful day,
Thy life be given thee for a prey.²

Snatched sudden from the avenging rod,
Safe in the bosom of thy God,
How wilt thou then look back, and smile
On thoughts that bitterest seemed erewhile,
And bless the pangs that made thee see
This was no world of rest for thee.

¹ " Shall with the Apostate Church be swept
To utter darkness all unwept."—MSS.

² The Lord saith thus : Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land. And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the Lord: but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.—Jeremiah xlv. 4, 5.

TWELFTH SUNDAY AFTER
TRINITY

And looking up to Heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened. S. Mark vii. 34.

THE DEAF AND DUMB.—August 23, 1822.—K.
August 22.—R.

Christ even in doing deeds of blessing sighed as He thought of man's rebel will and of those who would refuse His blessings. He only who knew God's face could look upon the face of sin; what will be the lot of those who refuse to see God and have to face only the consequences of sin? May Christ, who has already touched our ears and opened our mouths, keep us from everything that would draw us back to the world.

THE Son of God in doing good
Was fain to look to Heaven and sigh :

And shall the heirs of sinful blood

Seek joy unmixed in charity ?

God will not let Love's work impart

Full solace, lest it steal the heart ;

Be thou content in tears to sow,

Blessing, like Jesus, in Thy woe.

He looked to Heaven, and sadly sighed—

What saw my gracious Saviour there,

With fear and anguish to divide

The joy of Heaven-accepted prayer ?

So o'er the bed where Lazarus slept

He to his Father groaned and wept :

What saw He mournful in that grave,

Knowing Himself so strong to save ?

O'erwhelming thoughts of pain and grief

Over His sinking spirit sweep ;—

“ What boots it gathering one lost leaf

Out of yon sere and withered heap,

Where souls and bodies, hopes and joys,
 All that earth owns or sin destroys,
 Under the spurning hoof are cast,
 Or tossing in the autumnal blast ?”

The deaf may hear the Saviour's voice,
 The fettered tongue its chain may break ;
 But the deaf heart, the dumb by choice,
 The laggard soul, that will not wake,
 The guilt that scorns to be forgiven ;—
 These baffle e'en the spells of Heaven ;
 In thought of these, His brows benign
 Not even in healing cloudless shine.

No eye but His might ever bear
 To gaze all down that drear abyss,
 Because none ever saw so clear
 The shore beyond of endless bliss :
 The giddy waves so restless hurled,
 The vexed pulse of this feverish world,
 He views and counts with steady sight,
 Used to behold the Infinite.

But that in such communion high
 He hath a fount of strength within,
 Sure His meek heart would break and die,
 O'erburthened by His brethren's sin ;
 Weak eyes on darkness dare not gaze,
 It dazzles like the noon-day blaze ;
 But He who sees God's face may brook
 On the true face of Sin to look.

What then shall wretched sinners do,
 When in their last, their hopeless day,
 Sin, as it is, shall meet their view,
 God turn His face for aye away ?

Lord, by Thy sad and earnest eye,
 When Thou didst look to Heaven and sigh ;
 Thy voice, that with a word could chase
 The dumb, deaf spirit from his place ;

As Thou hast touched our ears, and taught
 Our tongues to speak Thy praises plain,
 Quell Thou each thankless, godless thought
 That would make fast our bonds again.
 From worldly strife, from mirth unblest,
 Drowning Thy music in the breast,
 From foul reproach, from thrilling fears,
 Preserve, good Lord, Thy servants' ears.

From idle words, that restless throng
 And haunt our hearts when we would pray,
 From pride's false chime, and jarring wrong,
 Seal Thou my lips and guard the way :
 For Thou hast sworn, that every ear,
 Willing or loth, Thy trump shall hear,
 And every tongue unchainèd be
 To own no hope, no God, but Thee.

THIRTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see: for I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see,
 and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them. S. Luke x.
 23, 24.

MOSES ON THE MOUNT. Sept. 16, 1821.

The greatness of the Christian's privilege and therefore of his peril.

178 THIRTEENTH SUNDAY

Nothing but God can satisfy the soul of man: this truth is witnessed to by Moses on the Mount; by the restlessness of those who try to be satisfied with the things of earth; by the dissatisfied longings of the kings and prophets of the Old Testament. But to us it is given to see God in the face of Jesus Christ: we have this privilege; how terrible must be our fall, if we abuse it!

ON Sinai's top, in prayer and trance,
 Full forty nights and forty days
 The Prophet watched for one dear glance
 Of Thee and of Thy ways:

Fasting he watched and all alone,
 Wrapt in a still, dark, solid cloud,
 The curtain of the Holy One
 Drawn round him like a shroud:

So, separate from the world, his breast
 Might duly take and strongly keep
 The print of Heaven, to be expressed
 Ere long on Sion's steep.¹

There, one by one, his spirit saw
 Of things divine the shadows bright,
 The pageant of God's perfect law;
 Yet felt not full delight.

Through gold and gems, a dazzling maze,
 From veil to veil the vision led,
 And ended, where unearthly rays
 From o'er the ark were shed.

Yet not that gorgeous place, nor aught
 Of human or angelic frame,
 Could half appease his craving thought;
 The void was still the same.

¹ Hebrews viii. 5. See that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

“Show me Thy glory, gracious Lord!
 ’Tis Thee,” he cries, “not Thine, I seek.”¹
 Nay, start not at so bold a word
 From man, frail worm and weak :

The spark of his first deathless fire
 Yet buoys him up, and high above
 The holiest creature, dares aspire
 To the Creator’s love.²

The eye in smiles may wander round,
 Caught by earth’s shadows as they fleet ;
 But for the soul no help is found,
 Save Him who made it, meet.

Spite of yourselves, ye witness this,³
 Who blindly self or sense adore ;
 Else wherefore leaving your own bliss
 Still restless ask ye more ?

This witness bore the saints of old
 When highest rapt and favoured most,
 Still seeking precious things untold,
 Not in fruition lost.

Canaan was theirs, and in it all
 The proudest hope of kings dare claim :
 Sion was theirs ; and at their call
 Fire from Jehovah came.⁴

¹ Exodus xxxiii. 18.

² Cf. Gen. i. 26. Let us make man in our image, after our likeness.

³ Pensées de Pascal i. viii.—J. K. (This should probably be i. vii. Misère de l’homme, Art xxi. in modern editions. Cf. S. Aug. “Conf.” i. 1., Fecisti nos ad te et inquietum est cor nostrum donec requiescat in te.)

⁴ 1 Kings xviii. 38. 2 Kings i. 10.

Yet monarchs walked as pilgrims still
 In their own land, earth's pride and grace ;
 And seers would mourn on Sion's hill
 Their Lord's averted face.

Vainly they tried the deeps to sound
 E'en of their own prophetic thought,
 When of Christ crucified and crowned
 His Spirit in them taught : ¹

But He their aching gaze repressed
 Which sought behind the veil to see,
 For not without us fully blest ²
 Or perfect might they be.

The rays of the Almighty's face
 No sinner's eye might then receive ;
 Only the meekest man found grace ³
 To see His skirts and live.

But we as in a glass espy
 The glory of His countenance, ⁴
 Not in a whirlwind hurrying by
 The too presumptuous glance,

But with mild radiance every hour,
 From our dear Saviour's face benign
 Bent on us with transforming power,
 Till we, too, faintly shine.

Sprinkled with His atoning blood
 Safely before our God we stand,
 As on the rock the Prophet stood,
 Beneath His shadowing hand.—

¹ 1 S. Peter i. 11.

² That they without us should not be made perfect.
 Hebrews xi. 40.

³ Exodus xxxiii. 20-23.

⁴ 2 Cor. iii. 18

Bless'd eyes, which see the things we see !
 And yet this tree of life hath proved
 To many a soul a poison tree,
 Beheld, and not beloved.

So like an angel's is our bliss
 (Oh ! thought to comfort and appal !)
 It needs must bring, if used amiss,
 An angel's hopeless fall.

FOURTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER
 TRINITY

And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger. S. Luke xvii. 17, 18.

THE TEN LEPERS. Circ. 1821.

The sadness of man's ingratitude—who often turns to God only when he has exhausted the blessings of earth, and then, when God has answered prayer, forgets to pay his vows—is contrasted with the blessing that waits on thankfulness.

TEN cleansed, and only one remain !
 Who would have thought our nature's stain
 Was dyed so foul, so deep in grain?
 Even He who reads the heart,—
 Knows what He gave and what we lost,
 Sin's forfeit, and redemption's cost,—
 By a short pang¹ of wonder crossed
 Seems at the sight to start :

Yet 'twas not wonder, but His love
 Our wavering spirits would reprove,
 That heavenward seem so free to move
 When earth can yield no more :

¹ "Pang,"—"flush," MSS.

Then from afar on God we cry,
 But should the mist of woe roll by,
 Not showers across an April sky
 Drift, when the storm is o'er,

Faster than those false drops and few
 Fleet from the heart, a worthless dew.
 What sadder scene can angels view
 Than self-deceiving tears,
 Poured idly over some dark page
 Of earlier life, though pride or rage
 The record of to-day engage,
 A woe for future years? ¹

Spirits, that round the sick man's bed
 Watched, noting down each prayer he made,
 Were your unerring roll ² displayed,
 His pride of health to abase ;

¹ This stanza is a condensation of two stanzas in the MSS. :

“ So fast as from the mourner's heart
 Those few false drops unblest depart ;
 For tears from loveless eyes that start
 Never drew blessing down :
 They who on earth have lingered long
 And dived into their own hearts' wrong
 The fearful import of the song
 Will self-accusing own.

“ But youth in all her vernal hues,
 Fresh-sprinkled as with Eden's dews
 Will not be bade go darkly muse
 Nor fear herself so sore.
 So o'er Elisha's fateful glass
 Young Hazael saw a murderer pass,
 Nor would believe the averted face
 His own dark features wore.”

² “ Roll,” “ scroll,” MSS.

Or, when soft showers in season fall
 Answering a famished nation's call,¹
 Should unseen fingers on the wall
 Our vows forgotten trace ;

How should we gaze in trance of fear !
 Yet shines the light as thrilling clear
 From Heaven upon that scroll severe,
 "Ten cleansed and one remain !"

Nor surer would the blessing prove
 Of humbled hearts, that own Thy love,
 Should choral welcome from above
 Visit our senses plain :

Than by Thy placid voice and brow,
 With healing first, with comfort now,
 Turned upon him, who hastes to bow
 Before Thee, heart and knee ;
 "Oh ! thou, who only wouldst be blest,
 On thee alone My blessing rest !
 Rise, go thy way in peace, possessed
 "For evermore of Me."

FIFTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow.

S. Matthew vi. 28.

THE FLOWERS OF THE FIELD. Feb. 3, 1826.

The soothing power that flowers wield over men from childhood to old age and the secret of their calm loveliness lies in their simple trust in the Father's care.

SWEET nurslings of the vernal skies,
 Bathed in soft airs and fed with dew,
 What more than magic in you lies,
 To fill the heart's fond view ?

¹ Cf. J. K. "Sermons, Occasional and Parochial," p. 105.

In childhood's sports, companions gay,
 In sorrow, on life's downward way,
 How soothing!—in our last decay
 Memorials prompt and true.

Relics ye are of Eden's bowers,
 As pure, as fragrant, and as fair,
 As when ye crowned the sunshine hours
 Of happy wanderers there.
 Fallen all beside—the world of life,
 How is it stained with fear and strife!
 In Reason's world what storms are rife,
 What passions range and glare!

But cheerful and unchanged the while
 Your first and perfect form ye show,
 The same that won Eve's matron smile
 In the world's opening glow.
 The stars of heaven a course are taught
 Too high above our human thought;
 Ye may be found if ye are sought,
 And as we gaze, we know.

Ye dwell beside our paths and homes,
 Our paths of sin, our homes of sorrow,
 And guilty man, where'er he roams,
 Your innocent mirth may borrow.
 The birds of air before us fleet,
 They cannot brook our shame to meet,
 But we may taste your solace sweet
 And come again to-morrow.

Ye fearless in your nests abide—
 Nor may we scorn, too proudly wise,
 Your silent lessons, undescried
 By all but lowly eyes:

For ye could draw the admiring gaze
 Of Him who worlds and hearts surveys :
 Your order wild, your fragrant maze,
 He taught us how to prize.

Ye felt your Maker's smile that hour,
 As when He paused and owned you good ;
 His blessing on earth's primal bower,
 Ye felt it all renewed.

What care ye now, if winter's storm
 Sweep ruthless o'er each silken form ?
 Christ's blessing at your heart is warm,
 Ye fear no vexing mood.

Alas ! of thousand bosoms kind,
 That daily court you and caress,¹
 How few the happy secret find
 Of your calm loveliness ;
 " Live for to-day ! to-morrow's light
 To-morrow's cares shall bring to sight ;
 Go sleep like closing flowers at night,
 And Heaven thy morn will bless."

SIXTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

I desire that ye faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory. Ephesians iii. 13.

HOPE IS BETTER THAN EASE. 1824.

This poem was written originally for Tuesday before Easter, with the text, Isa. l. 5. The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back.

The Cross is the best cure for sorrow, as it teaches Resignation and makes us ashamed of the love of praise or comfort.

¹ Cf. Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel,"—Introd.
 "No longer courted and caressed."

For Commentary on the Poem cf. "Sermons, Occasional and Parochial," No. xvii., preached in 1825. "The Great Lord of Heaven and earth, for whom and by whom are all things, was content, when He became man, to give up His own will, and to do and suffer the Father's will, in all those respects wherein men in general think it most natural and reasonable for them to expect to have their own way. Men desire to grow rich: Jesus Christ, on purpose, continued all His life in poverty. Men desire to be honoured and esteemed: Jesus Christ willingly came to be despised and rejected of men. Men desire to pass their time in quiet and ease, if not in positive enjoyment: Jesus Christ came to be a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief."

WISH not, dear friends, my pain away—
 Wish me a wise and thankful heart,
 With God, in all my griefs, to stay,
 Nor from His loved correction start.

The dearest offering He can crave
 His portion in our souls to prove,
 What is it to the gift He gave,
 The only Son of His dear love?

But we, like vexed unquiet sprights,
 Will still be hovering o'er the tomb,
 Where buried lie our vain delights,
 Nor sweetly take a sinner's doom.

In life's long sickness evermore
 Our thoughts are tossing to and fro:
 We change our posture o'er and o'er,
 But cannot rest, nor cheat our woe.¹

¹ Professor Palgrave ("Treasury of Sacred Song") compares with this verse Dante's description of Florence in her sick state: "Thou wilt behold thyself in semblance of that sick one who cannot find repose upon the bed, but with turning over keeps off her pain." "Purg." vi. 149. Comp. also "Rokeby," Canto i. 2.

Were it not better to lie still,
 Let Him strike home and bless the rod,
 Never so safe as when our will
 Yields undiscerned by all but God ?

Thy precious things, whate'er they be
 That haunt and vex thee, heart and brain,
 Look to the Cross, and thou shalt see
 How thou mayst turn them all to gain.

Lovest thou praise ? the Cross is shame :
 Or ease ? the Cross is bitter grief :
 More pangs than tongue or heart can frame
 Were suffered there without relief.

We of that Altar would partake,
 But cannot quit the cost—no throne
 Is ours, to leave for Thy dear sake—
 We cannot do as Thou hast done.

We cannot part with Heaven for Thee—
 Yet guide us in Thy track of love :
 Let us gaze on where light should be,
 Though not a beam the clouds remove.

So wanderers ever fond and true
 Look homeward through the evening sky,
 Without a streak of heaven's soft blue
 To aid affection's dreaming eye.

The wanderer seeks his native bower,
 And we will look and long for Thee,
 And thank Thee for each trying hour,
 Wishing, not struggling, to be free.

SEVENTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER
TRINITY

Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet; I the Lord will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols. Ezekiel xiv. 4.

EZEKIEL'S VISION IN THE TEMPLE.

Oct. 11, 1822. To the Church of England.—MSS.

The vision of Ezekiel, seeing the Temple at Jerusalem given over to idolatrous worship, is a warning to the Christian Church and to each of us lest in our hearts—the Temples of the Holy Ghost—we should really worship pleasure or praise or some lost earthly love; if so, may God not answer us according to our idols. Rather may He help us to a single-hearted worship of Himself.

STATELY thy walls, and holy are the prayers

Which day and night before thine altars rise;
Not statelier, towering o'er her marble stairs,

Flashed Sion's gilded dome to summer skies,
Not holier, while around him angels bowed,
From Aaron's censer streamed the spicy cloud

Before the mercy-seat. O Mother dear,

Wilt thou forgive thy son one boding sigh?
Forgive, if round thy towers he walk in fear,

And tell thy jewels o'er with jealous eye?¹
Mindful of that sad vision, which in thought
From Chebar's plains the captive prophet brought

To see lost Sion's shame.² 'Twas morning prime,

And like a Queen new seated on her throne,
God's crownèd mountain, as in happier time,

Seemed to rejoice in sunshine all her own:

¹ Cf. Ps. xlviii. 11.

² Ezekiel viii. 3.

So bright, while all in shade around her lay,
Her northern pinnacles had caught the emerging ray.

The dazzling lines of her majestic roof
Crossed with as free a span the vault of heaven,
As when twelve tribes knelt silently aloof
Ere God His answer to their king had given,¹
Ere yet upon the new-built altar fell
The glory of the Lord, the Lord of Israel.

All seems the same : but enter in and see
What idol shapes are on the wall portrayed :²
And watch their shameless and unholy glee,
Who worship there in Aaron's robes arrayed :
Hear Judah's maids the dirge to Thammuz pour,³
And mark her chiefs yon orient sun adore.⁴

Yet turn thee, son of man—for worse than these Thou must behold : thy loathing were but lost
On dead men's crimes and Jews' idolatries ;
Come, learn to tell aright thine own sins' cost,—⁵
And sure their sin as far from equals thine,
As earthly hopes abused are less than hopes divine.

What if within His world, His Church, our Lord
Have entered thee,⁶ as in some temple gate,
Where, looking round, each glance might thee afford

Some glorious earnest of thine high estate,
And thou, false heart and frail, hast turned from all

To worship pleasure's shadow on the wall?

¹ 1 Kings viii. 5.

² Ezekiel viii. 10.

³ Ezekiel viii. 14.

⁴ Ezekiel viii. 16.

⁵ "Sins'": perhaps "sin's."

⁶ i.e. Have given thee entrance.

If, when the Lord of Glory was in sight,
 Thou turn thy back upon that fountain clear,
 To bow before the "little drop of light,"¹
 Which dim-eyed men call praise and glory here;
 What dost thou but adore the sun, and scorn
 Him at whose only word both sun and stars were born?

If, while around thee gales from Eden breathe,
 Thou hide thine eyes, to make thy peevish moan
 Over some broken reed of earth beneath,
 Some darling of blind fancy dead and gone,
 As wisely mightst thou in Jehovah's fane
 Offer thy love and tears to Thammuz slain.

Turn thee from these, or dare not to inquire
 Of Him whose name is Jealous, lest in wrath
 He hear and answer thine unblest desire :
 Far better we should cross his lightning's path

¹ "Little drop of Light." Probably from E. Waller's Poem, "An Apology for having Loved before." There, man's admiration for the stars is contrasted with that for the sun.

"To man that was in the evening made
 Stars gave the first delight,
 Admiring, in the gloomy shade,
 Those little drops of light ;
 Then at Aurora, whose fair hand
 Removed them from the skies,
 He gazing towards the East did stand,
 She entertained his eyes.

"But when the bright sun did appear,
 All those he 'gan despise ;
 His wonder was determined there
 And could no higher rise.
 He neither might nor wished to know
 A more refulgent light ;
 For that (as mine your beauties now)
 Employed his utmost sight."

Than be according to our idols heard,
And God should take us at our own vain word.

Thou who hast deigned the Christian's heart to call

Thy Church and Shrine ; whene'er our rebel will

Would in that chosen home of Thine instal

Belial or Mammon, grant us not the ill

We blindly ask ; in very love refuse

Whate'er Thou knowest our weakness would abuse.

Or rather help us, Lord, to choose the good,

To pray for nought, to seek to none, but Thee,

Nor by "our daily bread" mean common food,

Nor say, "From this world's evil set us free" :

Teach us to love, with Christ, our sole true bliss,

Else, though in Christ's own words, we surely pray amiss.

EIGHTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord
God. Ezekiel xx. 35, 36.

THE CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS.

October 6, 1823.

The Christian Church is like the children of Israel in the wilderness, compelled to journey wearily through the desert of the world because it has not pressed on into the Holy Land: its privileges are greater, its scope catholic; yet few are full of love: and that,

192 EIGHTEENTH SUNDAY

though the greatness of the privileges makes the peril greater. Do Thou, then, O Lord, make our hearts completely and evermore Thine own.

Compare for the whole the similar analogy in 1 Cor. x. 1-13. The thought that greater privilege implies greater peril is very common in Mr Keble's writing. It will be found in the famous sermon on National Apostasy, from which Newman dated the rise of the Tractarian Movement ("Sermons, Occasional and Academical," p. 134), and in the "Sermons on the Baptismal Office," p. 136.

[T is so! ope thine eyes, and see—
 What view'st thou all around?
 A desert, where iniquity
 And knowledge both abound.

In the waste howling wilderness
 The Church is wandering still,¹
 Because we would not onward press
 When close to Zion's hill.²

Back to the world we faithless turned,
 And far along the wild,
 With labour lost and sorrow earned,
 Our steps have been beguiled.

Yet full before us, all the while,
 The shadowy pillar stays,
 The living waters brightly smile,
 The eternal turrets blaze.

Yet Heaven is raining angels' bread
 To be our daily food,
 And fresh, as when it first was shed,
 Springs forth the Saviour's blood.

¹ Revelation xii. 14.

² Cf. Numbers xiv. 34.

From every region, race, and speech,
Believing myriads throng,
Till, far as sin and sorrow reach,
Thy grace is spread along ;

Till sweetest nature, brightest art,
Their votive incense bring,
And every voice and every heart
Own Thee their God and King.

All own ; but few, alas ! will love ;
Too like the recreant band
That with Thy patient Spirit strove
Upon the Red Sea strand.

O Father of long-suffering grace,
Thou who hast sworn to stay
Pleading with sinners face to face
Through all their devious way,

How shall we speak to Thee, O Lord,
Or how in silence lie ?
Look on us, and we are abhorred,
Turn from us, and we die.

Thy guardian fire, Thy guiding cloud,
Still let them gild our wall,
Nor be our foes and Thine allowed
To see us faint and fall.

Too oft, within this camp of Thine,
Rebellious murmurs rise ;
Sin cannot bear to see Thee shine
So awful to her eyes.

Fain would our lawless hearts escape,
 And with the heathen be,
 To worship every monstrous shape
 In fancied darkness free.¹

Vain thought, that shall not be at all! ²
 Refuse we or obey,
 Our ears have heard the Almighty's call,
 We cannot be as they.

We cannot hope the heathen's doom
 To whom God's Son is given,
 Whose eyes have seen beyond the tomb,
 Who have the key of Heaven.

Weak tremblers on the edge of woe,
 Yet shrinking from true bliss,
 Our rest must be "no rest below,"
 And let our prayer be this:

"Lord, wave again Thy chastening rod,
 Till every idol throne
 Crumble to dust, and Thou, O God,
 Reign in our hearts alone.

"Bring all our wandering fancies home,
 For thou hast every spell,
 And 'mid the heathen where they roam,
 Thou knowest, Lord, too well.

¹ Cf. Ezekiel viii. 12. Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery?

² Cf. Ezekiel xx. 32. That which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, that ye say, We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.

“Thou knowest our service sad and hard,
Thou knowest us fond and frail;—
Win us to be beloved and spared
When all the world shall fail.

“So when at last our weary days
Are well-nigh wasted here,
And we can trace Thy wondrous ways
In distance calm and clear.

“When in Thy love and Israel’s sin
We read our story true,
We may not, all too late, begin
To wish our hopes were new :

“Long loved, long tried, long spared as they,
Unlike in this alone,
That, by Thy grace, our hearts shall stay
For evermore Thine own.”

NINETEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O King. He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God. Daniel iii. 24, 25

SHADRACH, MESHACH, AND ABEDNEGO.
1819 or 1820.

The Saviour, who was present to save Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the fire, is still present.

196 NINETEENTH SUNDAY

supporting the widow in her first hour of widowhood,
the father watching by the son whose reason has gone,
and the Pastor in his thankless toil.

WHEN Persecution's torrent blaze
Wraps the unshrinking Martyr's head ;
When fade all earthly flowers and bays,
When summer friends are gone and fled,
Is he alone in that dark hour,
Who owns the Lord of love and power ?

Or waves there not around his brow
A wand no human arm may wield,
Fraught with a spell no angels know,
His steps to guide, his soul to shield ?
Thou, Saviour, art his Charmèd Bower,
His Magic Ring, his Rock, his Tower.

And when the wicked ones behold
Thy favourites walking in Thy light,
Just as, in fancied triumph bold,
They deemed them lost in deadly night,
Amazed they cry, " What spell is this,
" Which turns their sufferings all to bliss ?

" How are they free whom we had bound ?
Upright, whom in the gulf we cast ?
What wondrous helper have they found
To screen them from the scorching blast ?
Three were they—who hath made them four ?
And sure a form divine He wore.

" Even like the Son of God." So cried
The Tyrant, when in one fierce flame
The Martyrs lived, the murderers died :
Yet knew he not what angel came

To make the rushing fire-flood seem
Like summer breeze by woodland stream.¹

He knew not, but there are who know :

The Matron, who alone hath stood,²
When not a prop seemed left below,
The first lorn hour of widowhood,
Yet cheered and cheering all the while,
With sad but unaffected smile ;—

The Father, who his vigil keeps³

By the sad couch whence hope hath flown,
Watching the eye where reason sleeps,
Yet in his heart can mercy own,
Still sweetly yielding to the rod,
Still loving man, still thanking God ;—

The Christian Pastor, bowed to earth

With thankless toil, and vile esteemed,
Still travailing in second birth
Of souls that will not be redeemed,
Yet steadfast set to do his part,
And fearing most his own vain heart ;—

These know : on these look long and well,

Cleansing thy sight by prayer and faith,
And thou shalt know what secret spell

Preserves them in their living death :
Through sevenfold flames thine eye shall see
The Saviour walking with His faithful Three.

¹ "As it had been a moist whistling wind" "Song of the Three Children," ver. 27.

² "The Christian Matron who hath stood."—MSS.

³ "The Christian father keeping watch
By the sad couch whence hope hath flown,
Striving in vain one gleam to catch
Of reason in his maniac son."—MSS.

198 TWENTIETH SUNDAY

TWENTIETH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

Hear ye, O mountains, the Lord's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth. Micah vi. 2.

MOUNTAIN SCENERY. October 7, 1823.

God's voice is heard most clearly in the loneliness of some mountain scene, and it pleads with us by the memory of all that He has done for us to take up our Cross and to trust that He is working for our good.

Two passages of Wordsworth may have been in Keble's mind.

"Two voices are there: one is of the sea,
One of the mountain, each a mighty voice."

Poems dedicated to National Independence, xii

"Early had he learned
To reverence the volume that displays
The mystery, the life that cannot die;
But in the mountains did he feel his faith."

The Excursion, Book I.

The circumstances by which this poem was probably suggested are explained in the following extract from the Autobiography of Isaac Williams: "This summer, 1822, John Keble came to see his old friend Mr Richards at Aberystwith: I was introduced to him and rode with him on his returning home the chief part of the way to the Devil's Bridge, amidst that scenery which suggested, I believe, at that time, the hymn for the Twentieth Sunday after Trinity." (p. 12.)

WHERE is thy favoured haunt, eternal Voice,
The region of Thy choice,
Where, undisturbed by sin and earth, the soul
Owns Thy entire control?—
'Tis on the mountain's summit dark and high,
When storms are hurrying by:

'Tis 'mid the strong foundations of the earth,
Where torrents have their birth.

No sounds of worldly toil ascending there
Mar the full burst of prayer ;
Lone Nature feels that she may freely breathe,
And round us and beneath
Are heard her sacred tones : the fitful sweep
Of winds across the steep,
Through withered bents¹—romantic note and clear,
Meet for a hermit's ear,—

'The wheeling kite's wild solitary cry,
And, scarcely heard so high,
The dashing waters when the air is still
From many a torrent rill
That winds unseen beneath the shaggy fell,
Tracked by the blue mist well :
Such sounds as make deep silence in the heart
For Thought to do her part.

'Tis then we hear the voice of God within,
Pleading with care and sin :
"Child of My love ! how have I wearied thee ?
Why wilt thou err from Me ?
Have I not brought thee from the house of slaves,
Parted the drowning waves,
And set My saints before thee in the way,
Lest thou should faint or stray ?

¹ "Bents," cf. "What a delightful feeling it is to sit under the shelter of one of the rocks here (Malvern) and hear the wind sweeping with that peculiar kind of strong moaning sigh which it practises on the bent grass." J. K. to G. J. Cornish, on July 8, 1822. Quoted in Coleridge's "Memoir," p. 101.

200 TWENTY-FIRST SUNDAY

“What! was the promise made to thee alone?
Art thou the excepted one?
An heir of glory without grief or pain?
O vision false and vain!
There lies thy cross; beneath it meekly bow;
It fits thy stature now:
Who scornful pass it with averted eye,
'Twill crush them by and bye.

“Raise thy repining eyes, and take true measure
Of thine eternal treasure;
The Father of thy Lord can grudge thee nought,
The world for thee was bought,
And as this landscape broad—earth, sea, and sky,—
All centres in thine eye,
So all God does, if rightly understood,
Shall work thy final good.”¹

TWENTY-FIRST SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

The vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.
Habakkuk ii. 3.

THE RED-BREAST IN SEPTEMBER.

September 25, 1823.

The red-breast warbling in autumn teaches the lesson of resignation, both to the individual Christian in hours of sorrow, and to the Churchman in moments of anxiety about the Church.

Cf. J. K. to J. T. Coleridge. “You know the † Cf. Rom. viii. 28, 32.

'Christian Year' (as far as I remember it) everywhere supposes the Church to be in a state of decay." "Memoir," p. 161.

THE morning mist is cleared away,
 Yet still the face of Heaven is grey,
 Nor yet the autumnal breeze has stirred the grove,
 Faded yet full, a paler green¹
 Skirts soberly the tranquil scene,
 The red-breast warbles round this leafy cove.

Sweet messenger of "calm decay,"²
 Saluting sorrow as you may,
 As one still bent to find or make the best,
 In thee, and in this quiet mead,
 The lesson of sweet peace I read,
 Rather in all to be resigned than blest.

¹ "A paler green." "September green."—MSS.

² The expression, "calm decay," is borrowed from a friend: by whose kind permission the following stanzas are here inserted:

TO THE RED-BREAST

Unheard in summer's flaring ray,
 Pour forth thy notes, sweet singer,
 Wooing the stillness of the autumn day:
 Bid it a moment linger,
 Nor fly
 Too soon from winter's scowling eye
 The blackbird's song at eventide,
 And hers, who gay ascends,
 Filling the heavens far and wide,
 Are sweet. But none so blends,
 As thine,
 With calm decay and peace divine.—J. K

These stanzas will be found in "Come to the Woods" (p. 21), by G. J. Cornish. The phrase "calm decay" is also to be found in Wordsworth's "Address to Kilchurn Castle."

202 TWENTY-FIRST SUNDAY

'Tis a low chant, according well
 With the soft solitary knell,
 As homeward from some grave beloved we turn,
 Or by some holy death-bed dear,
 Most welcome to the chastened ear
 Of her whom Heaven is teaching how to mourn.

O cheerful tender strain! the heart
 That duly bears with you its part,
 Singing so thankful to the dreary blast,
 Though gone and spent its joyous prime,
 And on the world's autumnal time,
 Mid withered hues and sere, its lot be cast :

That is the heart for thoughtful seer,
 Watching, in trance nor dark nor clear,¹
 The appalling Future as it nearer draws :
 His spirit calmed the storm to meet,
 Feeling the rock beneath his feet,
 And tracing through the cloud the eternal Cause.

That is the heart for watchmen true
 Waiting to see what God will do,
 As o'er the Church the gathering twilight falls :
 No more he strains his wistful eye,
 If chance the golden hours be nigh,
 By youthful Hope seen beaming round her walls.

Forced from his shadowy paradise,
 His thoughts to Heaven the steadier rise :
 There seek his answer when the world reproves :
 Contented in his darkling round,
 If only he be faithful found,
 When from the east the eternal morning moves.

¹ It shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark. Zechariah xiv. 6.

TWENTY-SECOND SUNDAY AFTER
TRINITY

Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? S. Matthew xviii. 21.

THE RULE OF CHRISTIAN FORGIVENESS.

February 7, 1826.

As the mountain boy passing from his simple home into the world with all its pleasures loses his joy and liberty: so we can measure the distance we have travelled from heaven and from the mind of God by our loss of the willingness to forgive; for Christ resigned everything to win the bliss of forgiving.

In this poem, too (cf. p. 198), there seem to be reminiscences of two passages of Wordsworth. For the description of the mountain boy, cf. "The Excursion," Book I. ad in., "Such was the boy, but for the growing youth": and for the narrowing heart cf. "The Ode on Intimations of Immortality," st. 5:

"Heaven lies about us in our infancy!
Shades of the prison-house begin to close
Upon the growing boy,
But he beholds the light and whence it flows,
He sees it in his joy;
The youth who daily farther from the east
Must travel, still is Nature's priest,
And by the vision splendid
Is on his way attended;
At length the man perceives it die away
And fade into the light of common day."

WHAT liberty so glad and gay,
As where the mountain boy,
Reckless of regions far away,
A prisoner lives in joy?

The dreary sounds of crowded earth,
The cries of camp or town,
Never untuned his lonely mirth,
Nor drew his visions down.

The snow-clad peaks of rosy light
 That meet his morning view,
 The thwarting cliffs that bound his sight,
 They bound his fancy too.

Two ways alone his roving eye
 For aye may onward go,
 Or in the azure deep on high,
 Or darksome mere below.

O blest restraint ! more blessed range !
 Too soon the happy child
 His nook of homely thought will change
 For life's seducing wild :

Too soon his altered day-dreams show
 This earth a boundless space,
 With sun-bright pleasures to and fro
 Sporting in joyous race :

While of his narrowing heart each year
 Heaven less and less will fill,
 Less keenly, through his grosser ear,
 The tones of mercy thrill.¹

It must be so : ² else wherefore falls
 The Saviour's voice unheard,
 While from His pard'ning Cross He calls,
 " O spare as I have spared " ?

By our own niggard rule we try
 The hope to suppliants given !
 We mete our love, as if our eye
 Saw to the end of Heaven.

¹ " Mercy " : " pardon." R.

² This stanza is a later addition, not found in either MS. copy, nor in the first edition.

SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY 205

Yes, ransomed sinner! wouldst thou know
How often to forgive,
How dearly to embrace thy foe,
Look where thou hop'st to live ;—
When thou hast told those isles of light,
And fancied all beyond,
Whatever owns, in depth or height,
Creation's wondrous bond ;
Then in their solemn pageant learn
Sweet mercy's praise to see :
Their Lord resigned them all to earn
The bliss of pardoning thee.

TWENTY-THIRD SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY

Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Philippians iii. 21.

FOREST LEAVES IN AUTUMN.

November 12, 1825.

The leaves fall uncomplaining, though there is no new life for them, and man complains of death, though there is a life in store for him, and that a life not, as the heathen fancied, a mere repetition of this life, but one in which we shall break through the limitations of earth. But if we are to share that life, trial and woe must teach us to make the body obedient to the soul.

The rhythm recalls Gray's Elegy.

RED o'er the forest peers the setting sun,
The line of yellow light dies fast away
That crowned the eastern copse : and chill and dun
Falls on the moor the brief November day.

206 TWENTY-THIRD SUNDAY

Now the tired hunter winds a parting note,
And Echo bids good-night from every glade ;
Yet wait a while, and see the calm leaves float
Each to his rest beneath their parent shade.

How like decaying life they seem to glide !
And yet no second spring have they in store,
But where they fall forgotten to abide
Is all their portion, and they ask no more.

Soon o'er their heads blithe April airs shall sing,
A thousand wild-flowers round them shall unfold,
The green buds glisten in the dews of Spring,
And all be vernal rapture as of old.

Unconscious they in waste oblivion lie,
In all the world of busy life around
No thought of them ; in all the bounteous sky
No drop, for them, of kindly influence found.

Man's portion is to die and rise again—
Yet he complains, while these unmurmuring
part
With their sweet lives, as pure from sin and stain,
As his when Eden held his virgin heart.

And haply half unblamed his murmuring voice
Might sound in Heaven, were all his second life
Only the first renewed—the heathen's choice,
A round of listless joy and weary strife.¹

¹ Cf. the Sixth Sunday after Epiphany, st. 8 (p. 60).

For dreary were this earth, if earth were all,
Though brightened oft by dear affection's kiss ;—

Who for the spangles wears the funeral pall ?
But catch a gleam beyond it, and 'tis bliss.

Heavy and dull this frame of limbs and heart,
Whether slow creeping on cold earth, or borne
On lofty steed, or loftier prow, we dart
O'er wave or field : yet breezes laugh to scorn

Our puny speed, and birds, and clouds in heaven,
And fish, like living shafts that pierce the main,
And stars that shoot through freezing air at even—
Who but would follow, might he break his chain ?

And thou shalt break it soon ; the grovelling worm
Shall find his wings, and soar as fast and free
As his transfigured Lord with lightning form
And snowy vest ; such grace He won for thee,

When from the grave He sprung at dawn of morn,
And led through boundless air thy conquering road,

Leaving a glorious track, where saints new-born
Might fearless follow to their blest abode.

But first, by many a stern and fiery blast
The world's rude furnace must thy blood refine,
And many a gale of keenest woe be passed,
Till every pulse beat true to airs divine ;

Till every limb obey the mounting soul,
The mounting soul, the call by Jesus given.
He who the stormy heart can so control,
The laggard body soon will waft to Heaven.

TWENTY-FOURTH SUNDAY
AFTER TRINITY

The heart knoweth his own bitterness; and a stranger doth not intermeddle with his joy. Proverbs xiv. 10.

THE IMPERFECTION OF HUMAN
SYMPATHY. June 7, 1825.

There is a loneliness which we must feel on earth: no human friend can know all the secrets of our hearts: and this is well, for, if there were perfect sympathy here, our affection would rest on earth and not pass up to Heaven: it is well, too, for another reason; for if others knew all that is in our hearts they would cease to love us. Hence a veil hangs between man and man: but hope can picture absent friends unchanged, and innocent children and loving old age can imagine us better than we are. Meanwhile the sinner who knows his own sin, knows that the Saviour has entered into his sinful nature and knowing all yet loves him.

Compare the poem for Ash Wednesday. The following lines from Young's "Night Thoughts" (iii. 26) may have been in Mr Keble's mind:

"Heaven's Sovereign saves all beings but Himself
That hideous sight, a naked human heart."

WHY should we faint and fear to live alone,
Since all alone, so Heaven has willed,
we die,¹

Nor even the tenderest heart, and next our own,
Knows half the reasons why we smile and sigh?

Each in his hidden sphere of joy or woe
Our hermit spirits dwell, and range apart,
Our eyes see all around in gloom or glow—
Hues of their own, fresh borrowed from the heart.²

¹ Je mourrai seul.—Pascal, ii. § vii.

² Cf. Crabbe's Tales. Tale x. "The Lover's Journey."

And well it is for us our God should feel
 Alone our secret throbbings: so our prayer
 May readier spring to Heaven, nor spend its zeal
 On cloud-born idols of this lower air.

For if one heart in perfect sympathy
 Beat with another, answering love for love,
 Weak mortals, all entranced, on earth would lie,
 Nor listen for those purer strains above.

Or what if Heaven for once its searching light
 Lent to some partial eye, disclosing all
 The rude bad thoughts that in our bosom's night
 Wander at large, nor heed Love's gentle thrall? ¹

Who would not shun the dreary uncouth place?
 As if, fond leaning where her infant slept,
 A mother's arm a serpent should embrace: ²
 So might we friendless live, and die unwept.

Then keep the softening veil in mercy drawn,
 Thou who canst love us, though thou read us
 true;

As on the bosom of the aërial lawn
 Melts in dim haze each coarse ungentle hue.

So too may soothing Hope Thy leave enjoy
 Sweet visions of long severed hearts to frame:
 Though absence may impair or cares annoy,
 Some constant mind may draw³ us still the same.

¹ "Many times when I consider what my friend would think of me, if I were to print the other nine-tenths of my thoughts, I really feel quite ashamed of having printed the book (the 'Christian Year') at all."—J. K. to Mr Pruen. Coleridge's "Memoir," p.

121.

² Probably an allusion to Æschylus, "Choephoræ," 520.

³ "Draw," i.e. picture

We in dark dreams are tossing to and fro,
 Pine with regret, or sicken with despair,
 The while she bathes us in her own chaste glow,
 And with our memory wings her own fond prayer.

O bliss of child-like innocence, and love
 Tried to old age! creative power to win
 And raise new worlds, where happy fancies rove,
 Forgetting quite this grosser world of sin.

Bright are their dreams, because their thoughts are clear,
 Their memory cheering: but the earth-stained spright,

Whose wakeful musings are of guilt and fear,
 Must hover nearer earth and less in light.

Farewell, for her, the ideal scenes so fair—
 Yet not farewell her hope, since Thou hast deigned,
 Creator of all hearts! to own and share
 The woe of what Thou mad'st and we have stained.

Thou know'st our bitterness¹—our joys are Thine;
 No stranger Thou to all our wanderings wild:
 Nor could we bear to think how every line
 Of us, Thy darkened likeness and defiled,

Stands in full sunshine of Thy piercing eye,
 But that Thou call'st us Brethren:² sweet repose

Is in that word! the Lord who dwells on high
 Knows all, yet loves us better than He knows.

¹ Thou hast known my soul in adversities.—Psalm xxxi. 7.

² Heb. ii. 11.

TWENTY-FIFTH SUNDAY AFTER
TRINITY

The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness. Proverbs xvi. 31.

THE TWO RAINBOWS. July 15, 1823.

As the experienced shepherd distrusts a rainbow in the morning, so the Christian pastor distrusts quick forwardness and love of praise in children, and loves rather the shyness and dependence and desire to do right which will make the evening of life bright with the promise of a brighter morning in Heaven.

This poem contains the germ of many of the poems in the Lyra Innocentium.

THE bright-haired morn is glowing
O'er emerald meadows gay,
With many a clear gem strowing
The early shepherd's way.
Ye gentle elves, by fancy seen
Stealing away with night
To slumber in your leafy screen,
Tread more than airy light.

And see what joyous greeting
The sun through heaven has shed,
Though fast yon shower be fleeting,
His beams have faster sped.
For lo! above the western haze
High towers the rainbow arch
In solid span of purest rays:
How stately is its march!

Pride of the dewy morning!
The swain's experienced eye
From thee takes timely warning,
Nor trusts the gorgeous sky.

For well he knows, such dawns gay
 Bring noons of storm and shower,
 And travellers linger on the way
 Beside the sheltering bower.¹

Even so, in hope and trembling
 Should watchful shepherd view
 His little lambs assembling
 With glance both kind and true ;
 'Tis not the eye of keenest blaze,
 Nor the quick-swelling breast,
 That soonest thrills at touch of praise—
 These do not please him best.

But voices low and gentle,
 And timid glances shy,
 That seem for aid parental
 To sue all wistfully,
 Still pressing, longing to be right,
 Yet fearing to be wrong—
 In these the Pastor dares delight,
 A lamb-like, Christ-like throng.

These in Life's distant even
 Shall shine serenely bright,
 As in the autumnal heaven
 Mild rainbow tints at night,
 When the last shower is stealing down,
 And, ere they sink to rest,
 The sunbeams weave a parting crown
 For some sweet woodland nest.

¹ In the first part of the above, allusion is made to a Cotswold proverb :

“A rainbow at night is the shepherd's delight,
 A rainbow in the morning gives the shepherd warning.”
 —MSS.

The promise of the morrow
 Is glorious on that eve,
 Dear as the holy sorrow
 When good men cease to live ;
 When brightening ere it die away
 Mounts up their altar flame,
 Still tending with intenser ray
 To Heaven whence first it came.

Say not it dies—that glory ;
 'Tis caught unquenched on high,
 Those saintlike brows so hoary
 Shall wear it in the sky.
 No smile is like the smile of death,
 When all good musings past
 Rise wafted with the parting breath,
 The sweetest thought the last.

SUNDAY NEXT BEFORE ADVENT

Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost. S. John vi. 12.

SELF-EXAMINATION BEFORE ADVENT.

July 14, 1825.

The Christian Year with all its festivals, with all its religious rites, has passed over us, and we have not yet found our peace. We may not plead that Christ's standard is impossible for us, for the Saints' Days have reminded us that other men have lived up to it. What if life were as near its end as the year is! Needs must we watch and pray, for Christ's love can gather up and purify the fragments still left.

WILL God indeed with fragments bear,
 Snatched late from the decaying year?
 Or can the Saviour's blood endear
 The dregs of a polluted life?

When down the o'erwhelming current tossed
 Just ere he sink for ever lost,
 The sailor's untried arms are crossed
 In agonizing prayer, will ocean cease her strife? ¹

Sighs that exhaust but not relieve,
 Heart-rending sighs, O spare to heave
 A bosom freshly taught to grieve
 For lavished hours and love misspent!
 Now through her round of holy thought
 The Church our annual steps has brought,
 But we no holy fire have caught—
 Back on the gaudy world our wistful eyes were bent.

Too soon the ennobling carols, poured
 To hymn the birth-night of the Lord,
 Which duteous Memory should have stored
 For thankful echoing all the year—
 Too soon those airs have passed away;
 Nor long within the heart would stay
 The silence of Christ's dying day,
 Profaned by worldly mirth or scared by worldly fear.

Some strain of hope and victory
 On Easter wings might lift us high;
 A little while we sought the sky:
 And when the Spirit's beacon fires
 On every hill began to blaze,
 Lightening the world with glad amaze,
 Who but must kindle while they gaze?
 But faster than she soars our earth-bound Fancy tires.

¹ Cf. Second Sunday in Lent, st. 3, note (p. 75).

Nor yet for these, nor all the rites
 By which our Mother's voice invites
 Our God to bless our home delights,
 And sweeten every secret tear :—
 The funeral dirge, the marriage vow,
 The hallowed font where parents bow,
 And now elate, and trembling now,
 To the Redeemer's feet their new-found treasures
 bear :—

Not for the Pastor's gracious arm
 Stretched out to bless—a Christian charm
 To dull the shafts of worldly harm :—
 Nor, sweetest, holiest, best of all,
 For the dear feast of Jesus dying,
 Upon that altar ever lying,
 Where souls with sacred hunger sighing
 Are called to sit and eat, while angels prostrate fall :—

No, not for each and all of these
 Have our frail spirits found their ease.
 The gale that stirs the autumnal trees
 Seems tuned as truly to our hearts
 As when, twelve weary months ago,
 'Twas moaning bleak, so high and low,
 You would have thought Remorse and Woe
 Had taught the innocent air their sadly thrilling parts.

Is it Christ's light is too divine,
 We dare not hope like Him to shine?
 But see, around His dazzling shrine
 Earth's gems the fire of Heaven have caught ;

Martyrs and saints—each glorious day
 Dawning in order on our way—
 Remind us how our darksome clay
 May keep the ethereal warmth our new Creator brought.

These we have scorned, O false and frail!
 And now once more the appalling tale,
 How love divine may woo and fail,
 Of our lost year in Heaven is told:
 What if as far our life were past,
 Our weeks all numbered to the last,
 With time and hope behind us cast,
 And all our work to do with palsied hands and cold?

O watch and pray e'er Advent dawn!
 For thinner than the subtlest lawn
 'Twixt thee and death the veil is drawn.
 But love too late can never glow:
 The scattered fragments Love can glean,
 Refine the dregs, and yield us clean
 To regions where one thought serene
 Breathes sweeter than whole years of sacrifice below.

S. ANDREW'S DAY

He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messiah. . . . And he brought him to Jesus. S. John i. 41, 42.

S. ANDREW'S DAY. January 27, 1822

The tie of brotherhood can only be made eternal by a religious bond, by helping one another in the spiritual life and by common religious acts.

“This poem was originally addressed to his own brother." Miss Yonge, "Musings," p. 280. Side by side with it should be read Keble's Sermon preached on S. Andrew's Day 1841. ("Sermons Occasional and Academical," xi.)

WHEN brothers part for manhood's race,
 What gift may most endearing prove
 To keep fond memory in her place,
 And certify a brother's love?

'Tis true, bright hours together told,
 And blissful dreams in secret shared,
 Serene or solemn, gay or bold,
 Shall last in fancy unimpaired.¹

Even round the death-bed of the good
 Such dear remembrances will hover,
 And haunt us with no vexing mood,
 When all the cares of earth are over.

But yet our craving spirits feel
 We shall live on, though Fancy die.
 And seek a surer pledge—a seal
 Of love to last eternally.

Who art thou, that wouldst grave thy name
 Thus deeply in a brother's heart?
 Look on this Saint, and learn to frame
 Thy love-charm with true Christian art.

First seek thy Saviour out, and dwell
 Beneath the shadow of His roof,
 Till thou have scanned His features well,
 And known Him for the Christ by proof;

¹ " 'Tis true bright hours together spent,
 And blissful dreams in secret shared,
 Grave talk and fearless merriment
 Shall last in fancy unimpaired."—MSS.

Such proof as they are sure to find
 Who spend with Him their happy days,
 Clean hands and a self-ruling mind
 Ever in tune for love and praise.

Then, potent with the spell of Heaven,
 Go, and thine erring brother gain,
 Entice him home to be forgiven,
 Till he, too, see his Saviour plain.

Or, if before thee in the race,
 Urge him with thine advancing tread,
 Till, like twin stars, with even pace,
 Each lucid course be duly sped.¹

No fading frail memorial give
 To soothe his soul when thou art gone,
 But wreaths of hope for aye to live,
 And thoughts of good together done.

That so before the judgment-seat,
 Though changed and glorified each face,
 Not unremembered ye may meet,
 For endless ages to embrace.

S. THOMAS' DAY

Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. S. John xx. 29.

S. THOMAS' DAY. Feb. 9, 1824.

Our time on earth is an expectation time like the first week after the Resurrection, and the Risen Lord reveals Himself to the same qualities as He did then: to Love as to Mary Magdalene; to Reason as to S.

¹ "To holy rivalry in grace:

Rest not till all thy course be sped."—K. 2.

Peter; to Faith as to S. John; to those who meditate and talk of His Passion, as to the disciples on the way to Emmaus: to all who wait for Redemption, as to the Apostles on the evening of Easter Day: and even to those who doubt—as to S. Thomas—if, like him, they keep their love to their Master true.

WE were not by when Jesus came,¹
 But round us, far and near,
 We see His trophies, and His name
 In choral echoes hear.
 In a fair ground our lot is cast,
 As in the solemn week that past,
 While some might doubt, but all adored,²
 Ere the whole widowed Church had seen her risen Lord.

Slowly, as then, His bounteous hand
 The golden chain unwinds,
 Drawing to Heaven with gentlest band
 Wise hearts and loving minds.
 Love sought Him first: at dawn of morn³
 From her sad couch she sprang forlorn,
 She sought to weep with Thee alone,
 And saw Thine open grave, and knew that Thou wert gone.

Reason and Faith at once set out⁴
 To search the Saviour's tomb;
 Faith faster runs, but waits without,
 As fearing to presume,

¹ Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. S. John xx. 24.

² When they saw him, they worshipped him: but some doubted. S. Matthew xxviii. 17.

³ S. Mary Magdalene's visit to the sepulchre.

⁴ S. Peter and S. John.

Till Reason enter in and trace
 Christ's relics round the holy place—
 "Here lay His limbs, and here His sacred head,
 And who was by, to make his new-forsaken bed?"

Both wonder, one believes—but while
 They muse on all at home,
 No thought can tender Love beguile
 From Jesus' grave to roam.
 Weeping she stays till He appear—
 Her witness first the Church must hear—
 All joy to souls that can rejoice
 With her at earliest call of His dear gracious voice.

Joy too to those who love to talk
 In secret how He died,
 Though with sealed eyes awhile they walk,
 Nor see Him at their side ;
 Most like the faithful pair are they,
 Who once to Emmaus took their way,
 Half darkling, till their Master shed
 His glory on their souls, made known in breaking bread.

Thus, ever brighter and more bright,
 On those He came to save
 The Lord of new-created light
 Dawned gradual from the grave :
 Till passed the inquiring daylight hour,
 And with closed door in silent bower
 The Church in anxious musing sate,
 As one who for redemption still had long to wait.

Then, gliding through the unopening door,
Smooth without step or sound,
"Peace to your souls!" He said—no more;
They own Him, kneeling round.
Eye, ear, and hand, and loving heart,
Body and soul in every part,
Successive made His witnesses that hour,
Cease not in all the world to shew His saving power.

Is there, on earth, a spirit frail,
Who fears to take their word,
Scarce daring, through the twilight pale,
To think he sees the Lord?
With eyes too tremblingly awake
To bear with dimness for His sake?
Read and confess the hand divine
That drew thy likeness here so true in every line.

For all thy rankling doubts so sore,
Love thou thy Saviour still,
Him for thy Lord and God adore,
And ever do His will.

Though vexing thoughts may seem to last,
Let not thy soul be quite o'ercast;—
Soon will he shew thee all His wounds, and say,

"Long have I known thy name¹—know thou
My face always."

¹ In Exodus xxxiii. 17, God says to Moses, "I know thee by name"; meaning, "I bear especial favour towards thee." Thus our Saviour speaks to S. Thomas by name in the place here referred to.—J. K.

THE CONVERSION OF S. PAUL

And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. Acts ix. 4, 5.

CHRIST'S PRESENCE IN CHRISTIANS.

March 2, 1822.

The Lord's words spoken to Saul on the way to Damascus taught him the great truth of His Presence in each Christian, and filled him with zeal and love. May that Presence control our thoughts, make our zeal greater, our love tenderer.

THE midday sun, with fiercest glare,
 Broods o'er the hazy, twinkling air ;
 Along the level sand
 The palm-tree's shade unwavering lies,
 Just as thy towers, Damascus, rise
 To greet yon wearied band.

The leader of that martial crew
 Seems bent some mighty deed to do,
 So steadily he speeds,
 With lips firm closed and fixèd eye,
 Like warrior when the fight is nigh,
 Nor talk nor landscape heeds.

What sudden blaze is round him poured,
 As though all Heaven's refulgent hoard
 In one rich glory shone?
 One moment—and to earth he falls :
 What voice his inmost heart appals?—
 Voice heard by him alone.

CONVERSION OF S. PAUL 223

For to the rest both words and form
Seem lost in lightning and in storm,
 While Saul, in wakeful trance,
Sees deep within that dazzling field
His persecuted Lord revealed
 With keen yet pitying glance :

And hears the meek upbraiding call
As gently on his spirit fall,
 As if the Almighty Son
Were prisoner yet in this dark earth,
Nor had proclaimed His royal birth,
 Nor His great power begun.

“ Ah ! wherefore persecut'st thou Me ? ”
He heard and saw, and sought to free
 His strained eye from the sight :
But Heaven's high magic bound it there,
Still gazing, though untaught to bear
 The insufferable light.

“ Who art Thou, Lord ? ” he falters forth :—
So shall Sin ask of Heaven and earth
 At the last awful day.

“ When did we see Thee suffering nigh,¹
And passed Thee with unheeding eye ?
 Great God of judgment, say ! ”

Ah ! little dream our listless eyes
What glorious presence they despise,
 While, in our noon of life,
To power or fame we rudely press :—
Christ is at hand, to scorn or bless,
 Christ suffers in our strife.

¹ S. Matthew xxv. 44.

And though Heaven gate long since have closed,
 And our dear Lord in bliss reposed
 High above mortal ken,
 To every ear in every land
 (Though meek ears only understand)
 He speaks as He did then.

“ Ah ! wherefore persecute ye Me ?
 ’Tis hard, ye so in love should be
 With your own endless woe.
 Know, though at God’s right hand I live,
 I feel each wound ye reckless give
 To the least saint below.

“ I in your care My brethren left,
 Not willing ye should be bereft
 Of waiting on your Lord.
 The meanest offering ye can make—
 A drop of water—for love’s sake,¹
 In Heaven, be sure, is stored.”

O by those gentle tones and dear,
 When Thou hast stayed our wild career,
 Thou only hope of souls,
 Ne’er let us cast one look behind,
 But in the thought of Jesus find
 What every thought controls.

As to Thy last Apostle’s heart
 Thy lightning glance did then impart
 Zeal’s never-dying fire,
 So teach us on Thy shrine to lay
 Our hearts, and let them day by day
 Intenser blaze and higher.

¹ S. Matthew x. 42.

And as each mild and winning note ¹
 (Like pulses that round harp-strings float
 When the full strain is o'er)
 Left lingering on his inward ear
 Music, that taught, as death drew near,
 Love's lesson more and more : ²

So, as we walk our earthly round,
 Still may the echo of that sound
 Be in our memory stored :
 "Christians ! behold your happy state :
 Christ is in these who round you wait ;
 Make much of your dear Lord !"

THE PURIFICATION

Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.
 S. Matthew v. 8.

THE PURIFICATION. October 10, 1819.

This is probably the earliest poem in the volume : its date is 1819, and it is written first in Mr Keble's own MS. of 1820. It is also one of the clearest and simplest : the thought being that now, as at the time of the Purification, purity and lowliness are the qualities which enable man to see God. There was no earthly pomp when, as on this day, the Prince entered His Temple, but the angels were there, and the mother undefiled and the guileless Joseph and the prayerful Simeon and the meek, devout Anna.

¹ "And as Thy soft meek words of Love,
 Like pulses that round harp-strings move."

—MSS.

² Perhaps there is a reference to S. Paul's own account of his conversion as given late in life, 1 Tim. i. 12-16.

BLESS'D are the pure in heart,
 For they shall see our God,
 The secret of the Lord is theirs,
 Their soul is Christ's abode.

Might mortal thought presume
 To guess an angel's lay,
 Such are the notes that echo through
 The courts of Heaven to-day.

Such the triumphal hymns
 On Sion's Prince that wait,
 In high procession passing on
 Towards His temple-gate.

Give ear, ye kings—bow down,
 Ye rulers of the earth—
 This, this is He! your Priest by grace,
 Your God and King by birth.

No pomp of earthly guards
 Attends with sword and spear,
 And all-defying, dauntless look,
 Their monarch's way to clear;

Yet are there more with Him
 Than all that are with you—
 The armies of the highest Heaven,
 All righteous, good, and true.¹

Spotless their robes and pure,
 Dipped in the sea of light
 That hides the unapproachèd shrine
 From men's and angels' sight.

¹ Cf. 2 Kings vi. 16.

His throne, thy bosom blest,
 O Mother undefiled !
 'That throne, if aught beneath the skies,
 Beseems the sinless Child.

Lost in high thoughts, " whose son
 The wondrous Babe might prove,"
 Her guileless husband walks beside,
 Bearing the hallowed dove ;

Meet emblem of His vow,
 Who, on this happy day,
 His dove-like soul—best sacrifice—
 Did on God's altar lay.

But who is he, by years
 Bowed, but erect in heart,
 Whose prayers are struggling with his tears ?
 " Lord, let me now depart ;

" Now hath Thy servant seen
 Thy saving health, O Lord ;
 'Tis time that I depart in peace,
 According to Thy word."

Yet swells the pomp : one more
 Comes forth to bless her God :
 Full fourscore years, meek widow, she
 Her heavenward way hath trod.

She who to earthly joys
 So long had given¹ farewell,
 Now sees, unlooked for, Heaven on earth,
 Christ in His Israel.

¹ "Given": "bid" or "bidden."—MSS.

Wide open from that hour
 The temple-gates are set,
 And still the saints rejoicing¹ there
 The holy Child have met.

Now count His train to-day,
 And who may meet Him, learn :
 Him child-like sires, meek maidens find,
 Where pride can nought discern.

Still to the lowly soul
 He doth Himself impart,
 And for His cradle and His throne
 Chooseth the pure in heart.

S. MATTHIAS' DAY

Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection. Acts i. 21, 22.

THE QUALIFICATION FOR THE PRIESTHOOD. 1820. (?)

God's Priest must be one who has followed Christ from His Cradle to His Ascension, and learnt the lesson of His agony and glory. Yet no mortal could undertake the task had not Christ promised to be with His Church, as Husband to support, as Guide to direct her: therefore only those whom she commissions may act for her. We dread our own unworthiness, and need Christ's help to teach us.

¹ "Rejoicing": "resorting."—MSS.

S. MATTHIAS' DAY 229

With the whole poem, cf. Mr Keble's "Tract for the Times," No. 4, "Adherence to the Apostolical Succession the Safest Course."

WHO is God's chosen priest ?

He who on Christ stands waiting day
and night,

Who traced His holy steps, nor ever ceased,
From Jordan banks to Bethphage height :

Who hath learned lowliness
From his Lord's cradle, patience from His Cross ; Whom poor men's eyes and hearts consent to bless ;

To whom, for Christ, the world is loss ;

Who both in agony
Hath seen Him and in glory ; and in both
Owned him divine, and yielded, nothing loth,
Body and soul, to live and die,

In witness of his Lord,
In humble following of his Saviour dear :
This is the man to wield the unearthly sword,
Warring unharmed with sin and fear.

But who can e'er suffice¹—
What mortal—for this more than angels' task,
Winning or losing souls, Thy life-blood's price ?
The gift were too divine to ask,

But Thou hast made it sure
By Thy dear promise to Thy Church and Bride,
That Thou, on earth, wouldst aye with her endure,
Till earth to Heaven be purified.

¹ Cf. 2 Cor. ii. 16.

Thou art her only Spouse,
 Whose arm supports her, on Whose faithful breast
 Her persecuted head she meekly bows,
 Sure pledge of her eternal rest.

Thou, her unerring Guide,
 Stayest her fainting steps along the wild ;
 Thy mark is on the bowers of lust and pride,
 That she may pass them undefiled.

Who then, uncalled by Thee,
 Dare touch Thy spouse, Thy very self below ?
 Or who dare count him summoned worthily,
 Except Thine hand and seal he shew ?

Where can Thy seal be found,
 But on the chosen seed, from age to age
 By Thine anointed heralds duly crowned,
 As kings and priests Thy war to wage ?

Then fearless walk we forth,
 Yet full of trembling, Messengers of God :
 Our warrant sure, but doubting of our worth,¹
 By our own shame alike and glory awed.

Dread Searcher of the hearts,
 Thou who didst seal by Thy descending Dove
 Thy servants' choice, O help us in our parts,²
 Else helpless found, to learn and teach Thy
 love.

¹ "Not doubting our commission but our worth."
 —MSS.

² "But Thou who know'st all hearts
 As by Thy Spirit, Thou didst the choice approve
 Of Thine Apostles, help us in our parts."—MSS.

The original form seems conclusive evidence that we should read "Thy servants' choice," not "Thy servant's choice" as in nearly all previous editions.

THE ANNUNCIATION OF THE
BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee, blessed art thou among women. S. Luke i. 28.

CHRIST'S CONSECRATION OF THE LOVE OF
MOTHER AND SON. June 1, 1823. March 9, 1826.

The one earthly tie which Christ sanctified by His own example was that between Son and mother: He being the true Son, She the true mother prepared by God's love for such a task, and therefore worthy of all but adoring love from us. And the blessing that was hers, Christ has promised to all who do His Father's will.

The first six stanzas were written soon after his own mother's death in May 1823. They were followed then by four stanzas, in which he confessed his own shortcomings as a son, and prayed for true penitence and love for her who was gone. These were felt too sacred for publication when the volume first appeared, and the last four, written in 1826, were substituted for them. The original four, which have since been published in the "Miscellaneous Poems," are appended here:

"Alas, when those we love are gone,
Of all sad thoughts, 'tis only one
 Brings bitterness indeed:
The thought what poor, cold, heartless aid
We lent to cheer them while they stayed,
 This makes the conscience bleed.

"Lord, by Thy love and by Thy power,
And by the sorrows of that hour,
 Let me not weep too late.
Help me in anguish meet and true
My thankless words and ways to rue,
 Now justly desolate.

“ By Thine own mother’s first caress,
 Whom Thou with smiles so sweet didst bless,
 ’Twas heaven on earth to see :
 Help me though late to love aright
 Her who has glided from my sight
 To rest—dear Saint—with Thee.

“ Thou knowest if her gentle glance
 Look on us, as of old, to enhance
 Our evening calm so sweet :
 But, Son of Mary, Thou art there :
 Oh make us (’tis a mourner’s prayer)
 For such dear visits meet.”

O ! Thou who deign’st to sympathise
 With all our frail and fleshly ties,
 Maker yet Brother dear,
 Forgive the too presumptuous thought,
 If, calming wayward grief, I sought
 To gaze on Thee too near.

Yet sure ’twas not presumption, Lord,
 ’Twas Thine own comfortable word
 That made the lesson known :
 Of all the dearest bonds we prove,
 Thou countest sons’ and mothers’ love
 Most sacred, most Thine own.

When wandering here a little span,
 Thou took’st on Thee to rescue man,
 Thou hadst no earthly sire :
 That wedded love we prize so dear,
 As if our heaven and home were here,
 It lit in Thee no fire.

On no sweet sister’s faithful breast
 Wouldst Thou Thine aching forehead rest,
 On no kind brother lean :

OF THE VIRGIN MARY 233

But who, O perfect filial heart,
E'er did like Thee a true son's part,
 Endearing, firm, serene ?

Thou weptst, meek Maiden, Mother mild,
Thou weptst upon thy sinless Child,
 Thy very heart was riven :
And yet, what mourning matron here
Would deem thy sorrows bought too dear
 By all on this side Heaven ?

A Son that never did amiss,
That never shamed His Mother's kiss,
 Nor crossed her fondest prayer :
Even from the Tree He deigned to bow
For her His agonisèd brow,
 Her, His sole earthly care.

Ave Maria ! blessèd Maid !
Lily of Eden's fragrant shade,
 Who can express the love
That nurtured thee so pure and sweet,
Making thy heart a shelter meet
 For Jesus' holy Dove ?

Ave Maria ! Mother blest,
To whom, caressing and caressed,
 Clings the Eternal Child ;
Favoured beyond archangels' dream,
When first on thee with tenderest gleam
 Thy new-born Saviour smiled :—

Ave Maria ! thou whose name
All but adoring love may claim,
 Yet may we reach thy shrine ;

For He, thy Son and Saviour, vows
 To crown all lowly lofty brows
 With love and joy like thine.

Bless'd is the womb that bare Him—bless'd¹
 The bosom where His lips were pressed!—
 But rather bless'd are they
 Who hear His word and keep it well,
 The living homes where Christ shall dwell
 And never pass away.

S. MARK'S DAY

And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other. Acts xv. 39. Cf. 2 Timothy iv. 11. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.

THE RECONCILIATION OF CHRISTIANS. 1820.

How little can we rest on earthly ties, when change and dispute can separate even Apostles as they did S. Paul from S. Barnabas and S. Mark! Yet even on earth the reconciliation may come, as it did between S. Paul and S. Mark, and, if not, yet though their path on earth be divided, faithful Christians shall meet in the Saviour's Presence, with all mists cleared away.

What a new force this poem must have gained to its writer after 1845, when Newman left the Church of England! Miss Yonge rightly quotes, as an illustration of the fourth stanza, the meeting of Keble, Newman, and Pusey at Hursley in 1865. "Musings on the Christian Year," p. 302: cf. Coleridge's "Memoir," p. 517.

OH! who shall dare in this frail scene
 On holiest, happiest thoughts² to lean,
 On Friendship, Kindred, or on Love?

¹ S. Luke xi. 27, 28.

² "Thoughts:" "things."—MSS.

Since not Apostles' hands can clasp
Each other in so firm a grasp,
 But they shall change and variance prove.

Yet deem not, on such parting sad
Shall dawn no welcome dear and glad :
 Divided in their earthly race,
Together at the glorious goal,
Each leading many a rescued soul,
 The faithful champions shall embrace.

For even as those mysterious Four,
Who the bright whirling wheels upbore
 By Chebar in the fiery blast,¹
So, on their tasks of love and praise
The Saints of God their several ways
 Right onward speed, yet join at last.

And sometimes even beneath the moon
The Saviour gives a gracious boon,
 When reconcilèd Christians meet,
And face to face and heart to heart,
High thoughts of holy love impart
 In silence meek or converse sweet.

Companion of the Saints ! 'twas thine
To taste that drop of peace² divine,
 When the great soldier of thy Lord
Called thee to take his last farewell,
Teaching the Church with joy to tell
 The story of your love restored.

¹ They turned not when they went ; they went every one straight forward. Ezekiel i. 9.

² "That drop of peace" : "that cup of joy."—K. 2.

O then the glory and the bliss,
 When all that pained or seemed amiss
 Shall melt with earth and sin away !
 When Saints beneath their Saviour's eye,
 Filled with each other's company,
 Shall spend in love the eternal day !¹

S. PHILIP AND S. JAMES

Let the brother of low degree rejoice in that he is exalted; but the rich, in that he is made low. S. James i. 9, 10.

THE STRAIN OF MIDDLE AGE LIGHTENED
 BY THE EXAMPLE OF CHRIST. August
 3, 1825.

As summer has little in it to inspire the poet's fancy, so middle age has little that is inspiring, and is forced to surrender the pleasing dreams of youth. Yet the Saviour knew the loneliness and sadness of life: He never was misled by youthful fancies of perfect happiness on earth, but has shown us how to pass through sadness to a deeper joy; hence the most sensitive soul in its deepest suffering can find soothing and contentment in His Church.

Compare the Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity, and, as there, Wordsworth's ode "On the Intimations of Immortality," especially the last stanza of that ode.

DEAR is the morning gale of spring,
 And dear the autumnal eve;
 But few delights can summer bring
 A poet's crown to weave.

Her bowers are mute, her fountains dry,
 And ever Fancy's wing
 Speeds from beneath her cloudless sky
 To autumn or to spring.

¹ "Shall live and love in endless day."—MSS.

Sweet is the infant's waking smile,
 And sweet the old man's rest—
 But middle age by no fond wile,
 No soothing calm is blest.

Still in the world's hot restless gleam
 She plies her weary task,
 While vainly for some pleasant dream
 Her wandering glances ask.—

O shame upon thee, listless heart,
 So sad a sigh to heave,
 As if thy Saviour had no part
 In thoughts that make thee grieve.

As if along His lonesome way
 He had not borne for thee
 Sad languors through the summer day,
 Storms on the wintry sea.

Youth's lightning-flash of joy secure
 Passed seldom o'er His spright,—
 A well of serious thought and pure,
 Too deep for earthly light.

No spring was His—no fairy gleam—
 For He by trial knew
 How cold and bare what mortals dream,
 To worlds where all is true.¹

¹ "To worlds": i.e. in comparison to worlds where all is true. One early form of the lines was:

"How far unlike the joys we dream
 To joys where all is true."

Then grudge not thou the anguish keen
 Which makes thee like thy Lord,
 And learn to quit with eye serene
 Thy youth's ideal hoard.

Thy treasured hopes and raptures high—
 Unmurmuring let them go,
 Nor grieve the bliss should quickly fly
 Which Christ disdained to know.

Thou shalt have joy in sadness soon ;
 The pure, calm hope be thine,
 Which brightens, like the eastern moon,
 As day's wild lights decline.

Thus souls, by nature pitched too high,
 By sufferings plunged too low,
 Meet in the Church's middle sky,
 Half way 'twixt joy and woe,

To practise there the soothing lay
 That sorrow best relieves :
 Thankful for all God takes away,
 Humbled by all He gives.

S. BARNABAS

The son of consolation, a Levite. Acts iv. 36.

THE CONSOLING POWER OF THE CHRISTIAN
 MINISTER BOTH IN THIS LIFE AND AFTER
 IT. July 4, 1825.

In this world of sickness and unrest he helps most who can comfort and console: such power had the first Apostles: such, above all, S. Barnabas, the son of consolation, who, by entire surrender of his own goods,

won the power to draw others to Christ, to clear away distrust between Christians, and to carry the Church's alms to those in need. Such saints even when departed may still sympathize with our griefs, and may delight to think that while they love and praise in Heaven, they still help Christ's work on earth, as their memory kindles the Christian Pastor to like deeds of consolation.

Perhaps there is no poem which expresses so beautifully the influence of the saints after death, and none which so truly is a picture of Mr Keble's own character and work. (Cf. W. Lock, "Memoir of Keble," chapter x.)

THE world's a room of sickness, where each
heart

Knows its own anguish and unrest ;
The truest wisdom there and noblest art,
Is his who skills of comfort best ;¹
Whom by the softest step and gentlest tone
Enfeebled spirits own,
And love to raise the languid eye,
When, like an angel's wing, they feel him fleeting
by :—

Feel only—for in silence gently gliding
Fain would he shun both ear and sight,
'Twixt prayer and watchful love his heart
dividing,
A nursing-father day and night.
Such were the tender arms where cradled lay,
In her sweet natal day,
The Church of Jesus ; such the love
He to His chosen taught for his dear widowed
Dove.

¹ Compare the Twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity, written a month before.

Warmed underneath the Comforter's¹ safe wing
 They spread the endearing warmth around :
 Mourners, speed here your broken hearts to bring,
 Here healing dew and balms abound :
 Here are soft hands that cannot bless in vain,
 By trial taught your pain :
 Here loving hearts, that daily know
 The heavenly consolations they on you bestow.

Sweet thoughts are theirs, that breathe serenest
 calms,
 Of holy offerings timely paid,²
 Of fire from Heaven to bless their votive alms
 And passions on God's altar laid.
 The world to them is closed, and now they shine
 With rays of love divine,
 Through darkest nooks of this dull earth
 Pouring, in showery times, their glow of "quiet mirth."

New hearts before their Saviour's feet to lay,
 This is their first, their dearest joy :
 Their next, from heart to heart to clear the way³
 For mutual love without alloy :

¹ "The Comforter." There is probably a connection drawn between the comforter (ὁ παρακλητὴς) and the son of comfort (υἱὸς παρακλήσεως). Compare also 2 Cor. i. 3-7.

² Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet. Acts iv. 37.

³ Barnabas took him, and brought him (Saul) to the apostles. Acts ix. 27.

Never so blest as when in Jesus' roll
 They write some hero-soul,
 More pleased upon his brightening road
 To wait, than if their own with all his radiance glowed.¹

O happy spirits, marked by God and man
 Their messages of love to bear,²
 What though long since in Heaven your brows began
 The genial amarant wreath to wear,
 And in the eternal leisure of calm love
 Ye banquet there above,
 Yet in your sympathetic heart
 We and our earthly griefs may ask and hope a part.

Comfort's true sons ! amid the thoughts of down
 That strew your pillow of repose,
 Sure 'tis one joy to muse how ye, unknown,
 By sweet remembrance soothe our woes,
 And how the spark ye lit of heavenly cheer
 Lives in our embers here,³
 Where'er the Cross is borne with smiles,
 Or lightened secretly by Love's endearing wiles :

Where'er one Levite in the temple keeps
 The watch-fire of his midnight prayer,
 Or issuing thence, the eyes of mourners steeps
 In heavenly balm, fresh gathered there ;

¹ So Keble himself watched with delight the growing brightness of his pupil Hurrell Froude and of Newman.

² Acts xi. 22 ; xiii. 2.

³ Cf. Wordsworth's ode "On Intimations of Immortality" :

" O joy that in our embers
 Is something that doth live."

BLESS'D are the pure in heart,
 For they shall see our God,
 The secret of the Lord is theirs,
 Their soul is Christ's abode.

Might mortal thought presume
 To guess an angel's lay,
 Such are the notes that echo through
 The courts of Heaven to-day.

Such the triumphal hymns
 On Sion's Prince that wait,
 In high procession passing on
 Towards His temple-gate.

Give ear, ye kings—bow down,
 Ye rulers of the earth—
 This, this is He! your Priest by grace,
 Your God and King by birth.

No pomp of earthly guards
 Attends with sword and spear,
 And all-defying, dauntless look,
 Their monarch's way to clear;

Yet are there more with Him
 Than all that are with you—
 The armies of the highest Heaven,
 All righteous, good, and true.¹

Spotless their robes and pure,
 Dipped in the sea of light
 That hides the unapproachèd shrine
 From men's and angels' sight.

¹ Cf. 2 Kings vi. 16.

THE PURIFICATION 227

His throne, thy bosom blest,
O Mother undefiled !
That throne, if aught beneath the skies,
Beseems the sinless Child.

Lost in high thoughts, " whose son
The wondrous Babe might prove,"
Her guileless husband walks beside,
Bearing the hallowed dove ;

Meet emblem of His vow,
Who, on this happy day,
His dove-like soul—best sacrifice—
Did on God's altar lay.

But who is he, by years
Bowed, but erect in heart,
Whose prayers are struggling with his tears ?
" Lord, let me now depart ;

" Now hath Thy servant seen
Thy saving health, O Lord ;
'Tis time that I depart in peace,
According to Thy word."

Yet swells the pomp : one more
Comes forth to bless her God :
Full fourscore years, meek widow, she
Her heavenward way hath trod.

She who to earthly joys
So long had given¹ farewell,
Now sees, unlooked for, Heaven on earth,
Christ in His Israel.

¹ "Given": "bid" or "bidden."—MSS.

244 S. JOHN BAPTIST'S DAY

And since we see, and not afar,
 The twilight of the great and dreadful day,
 Why linger till Elijah's car
 Stoop from the clouds? Why sleep ye? rise and pray,
 Ye heralds sealed
 In camp or field
 Your Saviour's banner to display!

Where is the lore the Baptist taught,
 The soul unswerving and the fearless tongue?
 The much-enduring wisdom, sought
 By lonely prayer the haunted rocks among?
 Who counts it gain¹
 His light should wane,
 So the whole world to Jesus throng?

Thou Spirit who the Church didst lend
 Her eagle wings, to shelter in the wild,²
 We pray Thee, ere the Judge descend,
 With flames like these, all bright and undefiled,
 Her watchfires light,
 To guide aright
 Our weary souls, by earth beguiled.

So glorious let Thy Pastors shine,
 That by their speaking lives the world may learn
 First filial duty, then divine,³

¹ He must increase, but I must decrease. S. John iii. 30.

² Revelation xii. 14.

³ He shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers. Malachi iv. 6.

To turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. S. Luke i. 17. Compare Trinity Sunday, st. 17 (p. 144).

That sons to parents, all to Thee may turn ;
And ready prove
In fires of love,
At sight of Thee, for aye to burn.

S. PETER'S DAY

When Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping. Acts xii. 6.

S. PETER'S DAY. May 15, 1825: but begun in 1824.

The scene described is that of S. Peter's sleep on the night of his arrest by Herod. Christ watches by the sleeper and makes his dreams peaceful with the thought of His past love, especially of His loving look in the Judgment-hall, and of the last scene on the Lake of Galilee, when he was told that hereafter another should gird him and carry him whither he would not. The sleep is broken, as he thinks, by the executioner coming for him, but it is an Angel who leads him into freedom, and he turns himself back to his task of feeding Christ's sheep, till the time of his crucifixion shall come.

THOU thrice denied, yet thrice beloved,¹
Watch by Thine own forgiven friend ;
In sharpest perils faithful proved,
Let his soul love Thee to the end.

The prayer is heard—else why so deep
His slumber on the eve of death ?
And wherefore smiles he in his sleep
As one who drew celestial breath ?

He loves and is beloved again—
Can his soul choose but be at rest ?
Sorrow hath fled away, and pain
Dares not invade the guarded nest.

¹ S. John xxi. 15-17.

Thou art her only Spouse,
 Whose arm supports her, on Whose faithful breast
 Her persecuted head she meekly bows,
 Sure pledge of her eternal rest.

Thou, her unerring Guide,
 Stayest her fainting steps along the wild ;
 Thy mark is on the bowers of lust and pride,
 That she may pass them undefiled.

Who then, uncalled by Thee,
 Dare touch Thy spouse, Thy very self below ?
 Or who dare count him summoned worthily,
 Except Thine hand and seal he shew ?

Where can Thy seal be found,
 But on the chosen seed, from age to age
 By Thine anointed heralds duly crowned,
 As kings and priests Thy war to wage ?

Then fearless walk we forth,
 Yet full of trembling, Messengers of God :
 Our warrant sure, but doubting of our worth,¹
 By our own shame alike and glory awed.

Dread Searcher of the hearts,
 Thou who didst seal by Thy descending Dove
 Thy servants' choice, O help us in our parts,²
 Else helpless found, to learn and teach Thy
 love.

¹ "Not doubting our commission but our worth."
 —MSS.

² "But Thou who know'st all hearts
 As by Thy Spirit, Thou didst the choice approve
 Of Thine Apostles, help us in our parts."—MSS.

The original form seems conclusive evidence that we should read "Thy servants' choice," not "Thy servant's choice" as in nearly all previous editions.

THE ANNUNCIATION OF THE
BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee, blessed art thou among women. S. Luke i. 28.

CHRIST'S CONSECRATION OF THE LOVE OF
MOTHER AND SON. June 1, 1823. March 9, 1826.

The one earthly tie which Christ sanctified by His own example was that between Son and mother: He being the true Son, She the true mother prepared by God's love for such a task, and therefore worthy of all but adoring love from us. And the blessing that was hers, Christ has promised to all who do His Father's will.

The first six stanzas were written soon after his own mother's death in May 1823. They were followed then by four stanzas, in which he confessed his own shortcomings as a son, and prayed for true penitence and love for her who was gone. These were felt too sacred for publication when the volume first appeared, and the last four, written in 1826, were substituted for them. The original four, which have since been published in the "Miscellaneous Poems," are appended here:

"Alas, when those we love are gone,
Of all sad thoughts, 'tis only one
 Brings bitterness indeed:
The thought what poor, cold, heartless aid
We lent to cheer them while they stayed,
 This makes the conscience bleed.

"Lord, by Thy love and by Thy power,
And by the sorrows of that hour,
 Let me not weep too late.
Help me in anguish meet and true
My thankless words and ways to rue,
 Now justly desolate.

The flame, that in a few short years
 Deep through the chambers of the dead
 Shall pierce, and dry the fount of tears,
 Is waving o'er his dungeon-bed.¹

Touched he upstarts—his chains unbind—
 Through darksome vault, up massy stair,
 His dizzy, doubting footsteps wind
 To freedom and cool moonlight air.

Then all himself, all joy and calm,
 Though for a while his hand forego,
 Just as it touched, the martyr's palm,
 He turns him to his task below :

The pastoral staff, the keys of Heaven,
 To wield awhile in grey-haired might,
 Then from his cross to spring forgiven,
 And follow Jesus out of sight.

S. JAMES'S DAY

Ye shall drink indeed of My cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with : but to sit on My right hand and on My left, is not mine to give ; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of My Father. S. Matthew xx. 23.

S. JAMES'S DAY. October 7, 1823.

The example of S. James—prepared by the sight of the Transfiguration to drink of Christ's cup—leads to a prayer for each Christian that the visions of Christ's glory which are given us sometimes on earth, as, for instance, at the sight of some "holy placid death," may nerve him to endure suffering until the time of release shall come.

¹ 2 Peter iii. 9-11 ; Rev. xxi. 4. The heavenly light which saves him from death, is the same which ere long at the Resurrection will awake all the dead and bring them to Him who will wipe away all tears.

The poem was probably written at a time when Keble's heart was still full of the thought of his mother's death.

SIT down and take thy fill of joy
At God's right hand, a bidden guest.

Drink of the cup that cannot cloy,
Eat of the bread that cannot waste.

O great Apostle! rightly now
Thou readest all thy Saviour meant,
What time His grave yet gentle brow
In sweet reproof on thee was bent.

“Seek ye to sit enthroned by Me?
Alas! ye know not what ye ask!
The first in shame and agony,
The lowest in the meanest task—
This can ye be? and can ye drink
The cup that I in tears must steep,
Nor from the whelming waters shrink
That o'er Me roll so dark and deep?”

“We can—Thine are we, dearest Lord,
In glory and in agony,
To do and suffer all Thy word;
Only be Thou for ever nigh.”

“Then be it so; My cup receive,
And of My woes baptismal taste;
But for the crown that angels weave
For those next Me in glory placed,

“I give it not by partial love;
But in My Father's book are writ
What names on earth shall lowliest prove,
That they in Heaven may highest sit.”

For He, thy Son and Saviour, vows
 To crown all lowly lofty brows
 With love and joy like thine.

Bless'd is the womb that bare Him—bless'd¹
 The bosom where His lips were pressed!—
 But rather bless'd are they
 Who hear His word and keep it well,
 The living homes where Christ shall dwell
 And never pass away.

S. MARK'S DAY

And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other. Acts xv. 39. Cf. 2 Timothy iv. 11. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.

THE RECONCILIATION OF CHRISTIANS. 1820.

How little can we rest on earthly ties, when change and dispute can separate even Apostles as they did S. Paul from S. Barnabas and S. Mark! Yet even on earth the reconciliation may come, as it did between S. Paul and S. Mark, and, if not, yet though their path on earth be divided, faithful Christians shall meet in the Saviour's Presence, with all mists cleared away.

What a new force this poem must have gained to its writer after 1845, when Newman left the Church of England! Miss Yonge rightly quotes, as an illustration of the fourth stanza, the meeting of Keble, Newman, and Pusey at Hursley in 1865. "Musings on the Christian Year," p. 302: cf. Coleridge's "Memoir," p. 517.

O H! who shall dare in this frail scene
 On holiest, happiest thoughts² to lean,
 On Friendship, Kindred, or on Love?

¹ S. Luke xi. 27, 28.

² "Thoughts:" "things."—MSS.

Since not Apostles' hands can clasp
Each other in so firm a grasp,
But they shall change and variance prove.

Yet deem not, on such parting sad
Shall dawn no welcome dear and glad :
Divided in their earthly race,
Together at the glorious goal,
Each leading many a rescued soul,
The faithful champions shall embrace.

For even as those mysterious Four,
Who the bright whirling wheels upbore
By Chebar in the fiery blast,¹
So, on their tasks of love and praise
The Saints of God their several ways
Right onward speed, yet join at last.

And sometimes even beneath the moon
The Saviour gives a gracious boon,
When reconcilèd Christians meet,
And face to face and heart to heart,
High thoughts of holy love impart
In silence meek or converse sweet.

Companion of the Saints ! 'twas thine
To taste that drop of peace² divine,
When the great soldier of thy Lord
Called thee to take his last farewell,
Teaching the Church with joy to tell
The story of your love restored.

¹ They turned not when they went ; they went every one straight forward. Ezekiel i. 9.

² "That drop of peace" : "that cup of joy."—K. 2.

The Son of God : and that indeed
 We see Him as He is, we know,
 Since in the same bright glass we read
 The very life of things below.—

Eye of God's word !¹ where'er we turn
 Ever upon us ! thy keen gaze
 Can all the depths of sin discern,
 Unravel every bosom's maze :

Who that has felt thy glance of dread
 Thrill through his heart's remotest cells,
 About his path, about his bed,
 Can doubt what spirit in thee dwells ?

“ What word is this ? Whence know'st thou me ? ”

All wondering cries the humbled heart,
 To hear thee that deep mystery,
 The knowledge of itself, impart.

The veil is raised ; who runs may read,
 By its own light the truth is seen,
 And soon the Israelite indeed
 Bows down t' adore the Nazarene.

¹ “ The position before us is, that we ourselves, and such as we, are the very persons whom Scripture speaks of, and to whom, as men, in every variety of persuasive form, it makes its condescending though celestial appeal. The point worthy of observation is, to note how a book of the description and the compass which we have represented Scripture to be, possesses this versatility of power ; this eye, like that of a portrait, uniformly fixed upon us, turn where we will.”—Miller's “ Bampton Lectures,” p. 128 (Ed. 2). J. K.

So did Nathanael, guileless man,
 At once, not shame-faced or afraid,
 Owing Him God who so could scan
 His musings in the lonely shade :

In his own pleasant fig-tree's shade,
 Which by his household fountain grew,
 Where at noon-day his prayer he made
 To know God better than he knew.

Oh ! happy hours of heavenward thought !
 How richly crowned ! how well improved !
 In musing o'er the Law he taught,
 In waiting for the Lord he loved.

We must not mar with earthly praise
 What God's approving word hath sealed ;
 Enough, if right our feeble lays
 Take up the promise He revealed ;

“ The child-like faith, that asks not sight,
 Waits not for wonder or for sign,
 Believes, because it loves, aright—
 Shall see things greater, things divine.

“ Heaven to that gaze shall open wide,
 And brightest angels to and fro
 On messages of love shall glide
 Twixt God above and Christ below.”

So still the guileless man is blest,
 To him all crooked paths are straight,
 Him on his way to endless rest
 Fresh, ever-growing strengths await.¹

¹ They go from strength to strength. Psalm lxxxiv. 7.

Then grudge not thou the anguish keen
 Which makes thee like thy Lord,
 And learn to quit with eye serene
 Thy youth's ideal hoard.

Thy treasured hopes and raptures high—
 Unmurmuring let them go,
 Nor grieve the bliss should quickly fly
 Which Christ disdained to know.

Thou shalt have joy in sadness soon ;
 The pure, calm hope be thine,
 Which brightens, like the eastern moon,
 As day's wild lights decline.

Thus souls, by nature pitched too high,
 By sufferings plunged too low,
 Meet in the Church's middle sky,
 Half way 'twixt joy and woe,

To practise there the soothing lay
 That sorrow best relieves :
 Thankful for all God takes away,
 Humbled by all He gives.

S. BARNABAS

The son of consolation, a Levite. Acts iv. 36.

THE CONSOLING POWER OF THE CHRISTIAN
 MINISTER BOTH IN THIS LIFE AND AFTER
 IT. July 4, 1825.

In this world of sickness and unrest he helps most
 who can comfort and console: such power had the first Apostles: such, above all, S. Barnabas, the son of consolation, who, by entire surrender of his own goods,

won the power to draw others to Christ, to clear away distrust between Christians, and to carry the Church's alms to those in need. Such saints even when departed may still sympathize with our griefs, and may delight to think that while they love and praise in Heaven, they still help Christ's work on earth, as their memory kindles the Christian Pastor to like deeds of consolation.

Perhaps there is no poem which expresses so beautifully the influence of the saints after death, and none which so truly is a picture of Mr Keble's own character and work. (Cf. W. Lock, "Memoir of Keble," chapter x.)

THE world's a room of sickness, where each
heart

Knows its own anguish and unrest ;
The truest wisdom there and noblest art,
Is his who skills of comfort best ;¹
Whom by the softest step and gentlest tone
Enfeebled spirits own,
And love to raise the languid eye,
When, like an angel's wing, they feel him fleeting
by :—

Feel only—for in silence gently gliding
Fain would he shun both ear and sight,
'Twixt prayer and watchful love his heart
dividing,
A nursing-father day and night.
Such were the tender arms where cradled lay,
In her sweet natal day,
The Church of Jesus ; such the love
He to His chosen taught for his dear widowed
Dove.

¹ Compare the Twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity, written a month before.

Who carry music in their heart
 Through dusky lane and wrangling mart,
 Plying their daily task with busier feet,
 Because their secret souls a holy strain repeat.¹

How sweet to them, in such brief rest
 As thronging cares afford,
 In thought to wander, fancy-blest,
 To where their gracious Lord,
 In vain, to win proud Pharisees,
 Spake, and was heard by fell disease—
 But not in vain, beside yon breezy lake,
 Bade the meek publican his gainful seat forsake :²

At once he rose, and left his gold ;
 His treasure and his heart
 Transferred, where he shall safe behold
 Earth and her idols part ;
 While he beside his endless store
 Shall sit, and floods unceasing pour
 Of Christ's true riches o'er all time and space,
 First angel of His Church, first steward of His Grace :

Nor can ye not delight to think
 Where He vouchsafed to eat,
 How the Most Holy did not shrink
 From touch of sinners' meat ;
 What worldly hearts and hearts impure
 Went with Him through the rich man's door,

¹ "The most perfect specimen of Mr Keble's versification."—Miss Yonge.

² It seems from S. Matthew ix. 8, 9, that the calling of Levi took place immediately after the healing of the paralytic in the presence of the Pharisees.—J. K.

That we might learn of Him lost souls to love,
And view His least and worst with hope to meet above.¹

These gracious lines shed Gospel light
On Mammon's gloomiest cells,
As on some city's cheerless night
The tide of sunrise swells,
Till tower, and dome, and bridge-way proud
Are mantled with a golden cloud,
And to wise hearts this certain hope is given ;
"No mist that man may raise shall hide the eye of Heaven."²

And oh ! if even on Babel³ shine
Such gleams of Paradise,
Should not their peace be peace divine
Who day by day arise
To look on clearer heavens, and scan
The work of God untouched by man ?
Shame on us, who about us Babel bear,
And live in Paradise, as if God was not there !

¹ S. Matthew ix. 10.

² Was this stanza suggested by the morning view of Oxford from Bagley wood? Compare Keble's "Miscellaneous Poems," p. 64. There may also be a reminiscence of Wordsworth's Sonnet on Westminster Bridge.

This City now doth like a garment wear
The beauty of the morning ; silent, bare,
Ships, towers, domes, theatres, and temples lie
Open unto the fields and to the sky.

³ "Babel": i.e. the type of worldly city life. Compare the Third Sunday in Advent, st. 6 (p. 15).

S. MICHAEL AND ALL ANGELS

Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?

Hebrews i. 14.

S. MICHAEL AND ALL ANGELS. 1821.

The angels,—who are like eagles in Heaven—are implored to let earth's faint warblers combine with their praise; for they, victorious in their own struggle, are always ready to help struggling man. They were present at Bethlehem, at the Temptation, at Gethsemane, at the Resurrection: they foretold Christ's coming again, and we could not venture to face that day, were it not that the Lord and our Angel-friends will meet us there. May they at that day find Christ's mark upon us still, and rejoice over our penitence.

Cf. S. Luke ii. 13. S. Matt. iv. 11. S. Luke xxii. 43. S. Matt. xxviii. 5. Acts i. 11. S. Matt. xviii. 10. S. Luke xv. 10.

YE stars that round the Sun of Righteousness
 In glorious order roll,
 With harps for ever strung, ready to bless
 God for each rescued soul,
 Ye eagle spirits, that build in light divine,
 Oh! think of us to-day,
 Faint warblers of this earth, that would combine
 Our trembling notes with your accepted lay.
 Your amarant wreaths were earned; and homeward all,
 Flushed with victorious might,
 Ye might have sped to keep high festival
 And revel in the light;
 But meeting us, weak worldlings, on our way,
 Tired ere the fight begun,
 Ye turned to help us in the unequal fray,
 Remembering Whose we were, how dearly won:

Remembering Bethlehem, and that glorious night
 When ye, who used to soar
Diverse along all space in fiery flight,
 Came thronging to adore
Your God new-born, and made a sinner's child ;
 As if the stars should leave
Their stations in the far ethereal wild,
And round the sun a radiant circle weave.

Nor less your lay of triumph greeted fair
 Our Champion and your King,
In that first strife, whence Satan in despair
 Sunk down on scathèd wing :
Alone He fasted, and alone He fought ;
 But when His toils were o'er,
Ye to the sacred Hermit duteous brought
Banquet and hymn, your Eden's festal store.¹

Ye too, when lowest in the abyss of woe
 He plunged to save His sheep,
Were leaning from your golden thrones to know
 The secrets of that deep :
But clouds were on His sorrow : one alone
 His agonising call
Summoned from Heaven to still that bitterest groan,
And comfort Him, the Comforter of all.

Oh ! highest favoured of all Spirits create,
 (If right of thee we deem)
How didst thou glide on brightening wing elate
 To meet the unclouded beam

¹ Cf. Milton, "Paradise Regained," iv. 562-639.

Of Jesus from the couch of darkness rising !
 How swelled thine anthem's sound,
 With fear and mightier joy weak hearts surprising,
 "Your God is risen, and may not here be found !"

Pass a few days, and this dull darkling globe
 Must yield Him from her sight ;—
 Brighter and brighter streams His glory-robe,
 And He is lost in light.

Then, when through yonder everlasting arch,
 Ye in innumeros¹ choir
 Poured heralding Messiah's conquering march,
 Lingered around His skirts two forms of fire :

With us they stayed, high warning to impart ;
 "The Christ shall come again
 Even as He goes ; with the same human heart,
 With the same Godlike train."—

Oh ! jealous God ! how could a sinner dare
 Think on that dreadful day,
 But that with all Thy wounds Thou wilt be there,
 And all our angel friends to bring Thee on Thy way ?

Since to Thy little ones is given such grace,
 That they who nearest stand
 Always to God in Heaven, and see His face,
 Go forth at His command,
 To wait around our path in weal or woe,
 As erst upon our King,
 Set Thy baptismal seal upon our brow,
 And waft us heavenward with enfolding wing :

² "Innumeros : " i.e. beyond all count. Cf. Milton, "Paradise Lost," vii. 455 ; "Comus," 348. The language of the whole poem recalls that of Milton.

Grant, Lord, that when around the expiring world
 Our Seraph guardians wait,
 While on her death-bed, ere to ruin hurled,
 She owns thee, all too late,
 They to their charge may turn, and thankful see
 Thy mark upon us still ;
 Then all together rise, and reign with Thee,
 And all their holy joy o'er contrite hearts fulfil !

S. LUKE

Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas, greet you.
 Colossians iv. 14.

Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world . . . Only Luke is with me. 2 Timothy iv. 10, 11.

S. LUKE. April 6, 1822.

The fortunes of S. Luke and Demas are types of the different destinies of men, and teach us that no position of privilege, no nearness to the saints, can save without the true pilgrim's heart.

TWO clouds before the summer gale
 In equal race fleet o'er the sky ;
 Two flowers, when wintry blasts assail,
 Together pine, together die.

But two capricious human hearts—
 No sage's rod may track their ways,
 No eye pursue their lawless starts
 Along their wild self-chosen maze.

He only, by Whose sovereign Hand
 Even sinners for the evil day¹
 Were made—who rules the world He planned,
 Turning our worst His own good way ;

¹ The Lord hath made all things for Himself; yea, even the wicked for the day of evil. Proverbs xvi. 4.

He only can the cause reveal,
 Why, at the same fond bosom fed,
 Taught in the self-same lap to kneel
 Till the same prayer were duly said,
 Brothers in blood and nurture too
 Aliens in heart so oft should prove ;
 One lose, the other keep, Heaven's clue ;
 One dwell in wrath, and one in love.

He only knows,—for He can read
 The mystery of the wicked heart,—
 Why vainly oft our arrows speed
 When aimed with most unerring art ;
 While from some rude and powerless arm
 A random shaft in season sent
 Shall light upon some lurking harm,
 And work some wonder little meant.¹

Doubt we how souls so wanton change,
 Leaving their own experienced rest ?
 Need not around the world to range ;
 One narrow cell may teach us best.

Look in, and see Christ's chosen saint
 In triumph wear his Christ-like chain ;
 No fear lest he should swerve or faint ;
 "His life is Christ, his death is gain."²

¹ "See Scott's 'Marmion.'"—MSS. The reference is to the effect of the Palmer's words on Marmion. Canto iii. 13, 14:

"Thus oft it haps, that when within
 They shrink at sense of secret sin,
 A feather daunts the brave ;
 A fool's wild speech confounds the wise,
 And proudest princes veil their eyes
 Before their meanest slave."

² Philippians i. 21.

Two converts, watching by his side,
Alike his love and greetings share ;
Luke the beloved, the sick soul's guide,
And Demas, named in faltering prayer.

Pass a few years—look in once more—
The saint is in his bonds again ;
Save that his hopes more boldly soar,¹
He and his lot unchanged remain.

But only Luke is with him now :—
Alas ! that even the martyr's cell,
Heaven's very gate, should scope allow
For the false world's seducing spell.

'Tis sad—but yet 'tis well, be sure,
We on the sight should muse awhile,
Nor deem our shelter all secure
Even in the Church's holiest aisle.

Vainly before the shrine he bends
Who knows not the true pilgrim's part :
The martyr's cell no safety lends
To him who wants the martyr's heart.

But if there be who follows Paul
As Paul his Lord, in life and death,
Where'er an aching heart may call,
Ready to speed and take no breath ;

¹ In the Epistle to the Philippians, "I know that I shall abide and continue with you all: . . . I count not myself to have apprehended," i. 25 ; iii. 13.

In 2 Timothy, "I have finished my course," etc., iv. 7, 8.—J. K.

Whose joy is, to the wandering sheep
 To tell of the great Shepherd's love ;
 To learn of mourners while they weep
 The music that makes mirth above ;¹

Who makes the Saviour all his theme,
 The Gospel all his pride and praise—
 Approach : for thou canst feel the gleam
 That round the Martyr's death-bed plays :

Thou hast an ear for angels' songs,
 A breath the Gospel trump to fill,
 And taught by thee the Church prolongs
 Her hymns of high thanksgiving still.²

Ah ! dearest Mother, since too oft
 The world yet wins some Demas frail
 Even from thine arms, so kind and soft,
 May thy tried comforts never fail !

When faithless ones forsake thy wing,
 Be it vouchsafed thee still to see
 Thy true, fond nurslings closer cling,
 Cling closer to their Lord and thee.

¹ The gospel of S. Luke abounds most in such passages as the parable of the lost sheep, which display God's mercy to penitent sinners.—J. K.

² The Christian hymns are all in S. Luke: the Magnificat, Benedictus, and Nunc Dimittis.—J. K.

S. SIMON AND S. JUDE

That ye should earnestly contend for¹ the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. S. Jude 3

THE BLESSING OF COMRADESHIP

April 3, 1826.

As at the time of the Church's greatest sorrow, between the Crucifixion and the Resurrection, S. John took the Virgin (the type of the Church) to his home for comfort; as also our Lord sent out His apostles two by two; so He always loves to see His servants duly paired and helping each other, old with young, eager students with simple souls, saddened penitents with cheerful spirits; such comradeship gives strength in the darkest hours.

The first few verses describe the days after the Crucifixion, (cf. the Sunday after Ascension Day) but perhaps they are coloured by reference to later persecutions of the Church, as in the time of the Commonwealth, when its ministers had to take refuge in the private houses of the Cavaliers (cf. the poem for the Restoration of the Royal Family).

SEEEST thou how tearful and alone,
And drooping like a wounded dove,
The cross in sight, but Jesus gone,
The widowed Church is fain to rove?

Who is at hand that loves the Lord?²
Make haste and take her home, and bring
Thine household choir, in true accord
Their soothing hymns for her to sing.

¹ ἐναγωνίεσθαι: "be very anxious for it": "feel for it as for a friend in jeopardy."—J. K.

² Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home. S. John xix. 27.

Soft on her fluttering heart shall breathe
 The fragrance of that genial isle,
 There she may weave her funeral wreath,
 And to her own sad music smile.

The Spirit of the dying Son
 Is there, and fills the holy place
 With records sweet of duties done,
 Of pardoned foes and cherished grace.

And as of old by two and two¹
 His herald Saints the Saviour sent
 To soften hearts like morning dew,
 Where He to shine in mercy meant ;

So evermore He deems His Name
 Best honoured, and His way prepared,
 When watching by His altar-flame
 He sees His servants duly paired.

He loves when age and youth are met,
 Fervent old age and youth serene,
 Their high and low in concord set
 For sacred song, Joy's golden mean.²

He loves when some clear soaring mind
 Is drawn by mutual piety
 To simple souls and unrefined,
 Who in life's shadiest covert lie.

Or if perchance a saddened heart
 That once was gay and felt the spring,
 Cons slowly o'er its altered part,
 In sorrow and remorse to sing,

¹ S. Mark vi. 7. S. Luke x. 1.

² Cf. S. Philip and S. James, st. 12 and 13 (p. 238).

Thy gracious care will send that way
 Some spirit full of glee, yet taught
 To bear the sight of dull decay,
 And nurse it with all-pitying thought ;

Cheerful as soaring lark, and mild
 As evening black-bird's full-toned lay,
 When the relenting sun has smiled
 Bright through a whole December day.

These are the tones to brace and cheer
 The lonely watcher of the fold,
 When nights are dark, and foemen near,
 When visions fade and hearts grow cold.

How timely then a comrade's song
 Comes floating on the mountain air,
 And bids thee yet be bold and strong—
 Fancy may die, but Faith is there.

ALL SAINTS' DAY

Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads. Revelation vii. 3.

October 28, 1825.

As on a quiet autumn day the winds seem bound and waiting till the last flower shall fade, so in the world God's judgments seem stayed, and it is because He is waiting till some saint or some penitent is ready for the skies, or because the prayers of some simple soul are still upholding the fabric of the world. May such saints still fight their fight until they are ready to join the saints above.

WHY blow'st thou not, thou wintry wind,
 Now every leaf is brown and sere,
 And idly droops, to thee resigned,
 The fading chaplet of the year ?

Yet wears the pure aërial sky
 Her summer veil, half drawn on high,
 Of silvery haze, and dark and still
 The shadows sleep on every slanting hill.

How quiet shews¹ the woodland scene !
 Each flower and tree, its duty done,
 Reposing in decay serene,
 Like weary men when age is won,
 Such calm old age as conscience pure
 And self-commanding hearts ensure,
 Waiting their summons to the sky,
 Content to live, but not afraid to die.

Sure, if our eyes were purged to trace
 God's unseen armies hovering round,
 We should behold by angels' grace
 The four strong winds of Heaven fast bound,
 Their downward sweep a moment stayed
 On ocean cove and forest glade,
 Till the last flower of autumn shed
 Her funeral odours on her dying bed.

So in Thine awful armoury, Lord,
 The lightnings of the judgment day
 Pause yet awhile, in mercy stored,
 Till willing hearts wear quite away
 Their earthly stains ; and spotless shine
 On every brow in light divine
 The Cross by angel hands impressed,
 The seal of glory won, and pledge of promised rest.

¹ See p. 170, note.

Little they dream, those haughty souls
 Whom empires own with bended knee,
 What lowly fate their own controls,
 Together linked by Heaven's decree ;—
 As bloodhounds hush their baying wild
 To wanton with some fearless child,¹
 So Famine waits, and War with greedy eyes,
 Till some repenting heart be ready for the skies.

Think ye the spires that glow so bright
 In front of yonder setting sun,
 Stand by their own unshaken might ?
 No—where the upholding grace is won,
 We dare not ask, nor Heaven would tell ;
 But sure from many a hidden dell,
 From many a rural nook unthought of there,
 Rises for that proud world the Saints' prevailing prayer.

On, Champions blest, in Jesus' name,
 Short be your strife, your triumph full,
 Till every heart have caught your flame,
 And, lightened of the world's misrule,
 Ye soar those elder Saints to meet,
 Gathered long since at Jesus' feet,
 No world of passions to destroy,
 Your prayers and struggles o'er, your task all praise and joy.

¹ Cf. "Lyra Innocentium," "Children with dumb creatures," st. 3 :

"And as thou hold'st the creatures dear,
 So are they fain on thee to wait ;
 Bloodhounds at thy caress abate
 Their bayings wild."

HOLY COMMUNION

January 31, 1827.

Sinners shrink back from the awful Presence of God in the Eucharist, but the Church draws them near with the comfortable words of invitation, and by the sense of the presence of the Saints and Angels joining in our Eucharistic praise.

O GOD of Mercy, God of Might,
 How should pale sinners bear¹ the sight,
 If, as Thy power is surely here,
 Thine open glory should appear!

For now Thy people are allowed
 To scale the mount and pierce the cloud,
 And Faith may feed her eager view
 With wonders Sinai never knew.

Fresh from the atoning sacrifice
 The world's Creator bleeding lies,
 That man, His foe, by whom He bled,
 May take Him for his daily bread.

O agony of wavering thought
 When sinners first so near are brought!
 "It is my Maker—dare I stay?
 My Saviour—dare I turn away?"

Thus while the storm is high within
 'Twixt love of Christ and fear of sin,
 Who can express the soothing charm,
 To feel thy kind upholding arm,

¹ "Bear": "brook."—MSS.

My mother Church? and hear thee tell
Of a world lost, yet loved so well,
That He, by whom the angels live,
His only Son for her would give? ¹

And doubt we yet? thou call'st again;
A lower still, a sweeter strain;
A voice from Mercy's inmost shrine,
The very breath of Love Divine.

Whispering it says to each apart,
"Come unto Me, thou trembling heart"; ²
And we must hope, so sweet the tone,
The precious words are all our own.

Hear them, kind Saviour—hear Thy spouse
Low at Thy feet renew her vows;
Thine own dear promise she would plead
For us her true though fallen seed.

She pleads by all Thy mercies, told
Thy chosen witnesses of old,
Love's heralds sent to man forgiven,
One from the Cross, ³ and one from Heaven. ⁴

This, of true penitents the chief,
To the lost spirit brings relief,

¹ "So God loved the world, that He gave His only-begotten Son." See the Sentences in the Communion Service, after the Confession.—J. K.

² "Come unto me all that travail and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you."

³ "One from the Cross": i.e. S. John. (S. John xix. 26.)

⁴ "One from Heaven": i.e. S. Paul. (Acts xxvi. 15-18.)

Lifting on high the adorèd Name :—
 “Sinners to save, Christ Jesus came.”¹

That, dearest of Thy bosom friends,
 Into the wavering heart descends :—
 “What ! fallen again ? yet cheerful rise,
 Thine Intercessor never dies.”²

The eye of Faith, that waxes bright
 Each moment by Thine altar’s light,
 Sees them e’en now : they still abide
 In mystery kneeling at our side ;

And with them every spirit blest,
 From realms of triumph or of rest,
 From him who saw creation’s morn,
 Of all Thine angels eldest born,³

To the poor babe, who died to-day,
 Take part in our thanksgiving lay,
 Watching the tearful joy and calm,
 While sinners taste Thine heavenly balm.

Sweet awful hour ! the only sound
 One gentle footstep gliding round,
 Offering by turns on Jesus’ part
 The Cross to every hand and heart.

¹ “This is a true saying, and worthy of all men to be received, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.”

² “If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.”

³ “Therefore with Angels and Archangels and with all the company of Heaven we laud and magnify Thy glorious name.”

Refresh us, Lord, to hold it fast ;
 And when Thy veil is drawn at last,
 Let us depart where shadows cease,
 With words of blessing and of peace.

HOLY BAPTISM

GOD'S PRESENCE IN THE BAPTIZED CHILD.

April 13, 1826. Written as for the Eighth Sunday after Trinity, with Romans viii. 15 as text, and suggested by the baptism of his brother's eldest son.

The happy parents who bring their child to Holy Baptism are sent happier away, as they take it home with its new life and new consecration, so that they see a new meaning in each movement and expression, and find God's Presence more clearly there than in the stars or in the flowers. May the child early know that Presence too.

WHERE is it mothers learn their love?—
 In every Church a fountain springs
 O'er which the eternal Dove
 Hovers on softest wings.

What sparkles in that lucid flood
 Is water, by gross mortals eyed :
 But seen by Faith, 'tis blood
 Out of a dear Friend's side.

A few calm words of faith and prayer,
 A few bright drops of holy dew,
 Shall work a wonder there,
 Earth's charmers never knew.

O happy arms, where cradled lies,
 And ready for the Lord's embrace,
 That precious sacrifice,
 The darling of His grace !

Blest eyes, that see the smiling gleam
 Upon the slumbering features glow,
 When the life-giving stream
 Touches the tender brow !

Or when the holy cross is signed,
 And the young soldier duly sworn
 With true and fearless mind
 To serve the Virgin-born.

But happiest ye, who sealed and blest
 Back to your arms your treasure take,
 With Jesus' mark impressed,
 To nurse for Jesus' sake : ¹

To whom—as if in hallowed air
 Ye knelt before some awful shrine—
 His innocent gestures wear
 A meaning half divine :

By whom Love's daily touch is seen
 In strengthening form and freshening hue,
 In the fixed brow serene,
 The deep yet eager view.—

Who taught thy pure and even breath
 To come and go with such sweet grace ?
 Whence thy reposing faith,
 Though in our frail embrace ?

O tender gem, and full of Heaven !
 Not in the twilight stars on high,
 Not in moist flowers at even
 See we our God so nigh.

¹ Cf. Exodus ii. 9. Take the child away and nurse it for me.

Sweet one, make haste and know Him too,
 Thine own adopting Father love,
 That like thine earliest dew
 Thy dying sweets may prove.¹

CATECHISM

THE POWER OF CHILDREN TO LEARN THE TRUTH. February 16, 1827. The MS. adds the text—S. Mark x. 14: Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not.

Though children may not understand all they learn, yet they can take it in, and in time unwind its harmonies; for Our Lord was taught as a child, and loved to speak of Heaven in the presence of children. Though angels praise Him, He loves also to hear the simplest attempt of children: their praises may be imperfect; yet so are our own prayers, we are only half conscious of their meaning: to the angels they mean much more; but to God they mean much more even than to the angels: yet God accepts them.

OH! say not, dream not, heavenly notes
 To childish ears are vain,
 That the young mind at random floats,
 And cannot reach the strain.

¹ "Sweets": sweet—R.; but the plural is common in 17th and 18th century writers in the sense of "sweetness," "pleasures." Cf. Milton, "Paradise Lost," iv. 760.

"Hail wedded love, . . .
 Perpetual fountain of domestic sweets."

The meaning seems to be: that as the waters of Baptism tell of God's love to you, so your dying happiness may be a witness to the same love having followed you all your life. Cf. S. James's Day, st. 6, p. 250:

"Too happy, on my silent path,
 If now and then allowed, with Thee
 Watching some placid holy death,
 Thy secret work of love to see."

Dim or unheard the words may fall,
 And yet the heaven-taught mind
 May learn the sacred air, and all
 The harmony unwind.¹

Was not our Lord a little child,
 Taught by degrees to pray,
 By father dear and mother mild
 Instructed day by day?

And loved He not of Heaven to talk
 With children in His sight,
 To meet them in His daily walk,
 And to His arms invite?

What though around His throne of fire
 The everlasting chant
 Be wafted from the seraph choir
 In glory jubilant?

Yet stoops He, ever pleased to mark
 Our rude essays of love,
 Faint as the pipe of wakening lark,
 Heard by some twilight grove:

Yet is He near us, to survey
 These bright and ordered files,
 Like spring-flowers in their best array,
 All silence and all smiles,

¹ "The sacred words unheard may fall,
 And yet the heaven-taught ear
 At pleasure may the chant recall
 And love the music dear."

So K. and R. The latter has not the verse here, but inserts it after stanza 8.

Save that each little voice in turn
 Some glorious truth proclaims,
 What sages would have died to learn,
 Now taught by cottage dames.

And if some tones be false or low,
 What are all prayers beneath
 But cries of babes, that cannot know
 Half the deep thought they breathe?

In His own words we Christ adore,
 But Angels, as we speak,
 Higher above our meaning soar
 Than we o'er children weak : ¹

And yet His words mean more than they,²
 And yet He owns their praise :
 Why should we think He turns away
 From infants' simple lays?

¹ Compare the poem for the Fourth Sunday after Advent.

² "More than they": i.e. than the angels. There is a picture of a hierarchy of prayer. The Lord's Prayer is lifted up from sphere to sphere as it is uttered by a child, by a man, by an angel: in each it gains a fresh meaning and power: and in each it falls short of the full meaning which it conveys to God.

Compare the Evening Hymn for Emigrants ("Miscellaneous Poems," p. 101):

"We say the prayer our Saviour taught
 As household words with homely thought:
 But angels bear it on and on
 In all its meaning to the Throne."

CONFIRMATION

February 21, 1827.

As the Israelites in the wilderness sometimes rested with the cloud overshadowing them, then at the sign of the pillar of fire moved forth to war: so the Holy Spirit first rests on Christ's champions in Confirmation, and then sends them forth fearless to face life. Hence their love is both steady and fixed like stars reflected in the ice, and also gentle and soft in its influence on life. May the Spirit which has this double power shelter them from all feverish restlessness in youth and age, and make the memory of the Confirmation a strength in time of sin and sorrow.

THE shadow of the Almighty's cloud
 Calm on the tents of Israel lay,
 While drooping paused twelve banners proud,
 Till He arise and lead the way.¹

Then to the desert breeze unrolled
 Cheerly the waving pennons fly,
 Lion or eagle—each bright fold
 A lodestar to a warrior's eye.

So should Thy champions, ere the strife,
 By holy hands o'ershadowed kneel,
 So, fearless for their charmed life,
 Bear, to the end, Thy Spirit's seal.

Steady and pure as stars that beam
 In middle heaven, all mist above,
 Seen deepest in the frozen stream:—
 Such is their high courageous love

¹ Cf. Numbers ix. 15-23.

And soft as pure, and warm as bright,
They brood upon life's peaceful hour,
As if the Dove that guides their flight
Shook from her plumes a downy shower.

Spirit of might and sweetness too!
Now leading on the wars of God,
Now to green isles of shade and dew
Turning the waste Thy people trod ;¹

Draw, Holy Ghost, Thy seven-fold veil
Between us and the fires of youth ;
Breathe, Holy Ghost, Thy freshening gale,
Our fevered brow in age to soothe.

And oft as sin and sorrow tire,
The hallowed hour do thou renew,
When beckoned up the awful choir
By pastoral hands, tow'rd Thee we drew ;

When trembling at the sacred rail
We hid our eyes and held our breath,
Felt Thee how strong, our hearts how frail,
And longed to own Thee to the death.

For ever on our souls be traced
That blessing dear, that dove-like hand,
A sheltering rock in Memory's waste,
O'ershadowing all the weary land.²

¹ Cf. Psalm cvii. 35.

² Cf. Isaiah xxxii. 2.

MATRIMONY

1827. Entitled in the MS. "Communion after Matrimony," which explains the allusion in stanza 6.

The Fall of Man has caused an element of awe and fear in our joys; even wedded joy distrusts itself until it has received God's blessing, and even then its strain is tuned and measured; far different from the poetry which would profane love by thoughts of wild passion are the strains which welcome Christian love as it draws near to receive Christ's blessing, feeling sure that He will give an eternal value to each prayer and offering that it makes.

Cf. Sexagesima Sunday, st. 6 (p. 65).

THERE is an awe in mortals' joy;
 A deep mysterious fear
 Half of the heart will still employ,
 As if we drew too near
 To Eden's portal and those fires¹
 That bicker² round in wavy spires,
 Forbidding, to our frail desires,
 What cost us once so dear.

We cower before the heart-searching eye
 In rapture as in pain;
 Even wedded Love, till Thou be nigh,
 Dares not believe her gain:
 Then in the air she fearless springs,
 The breath of Heaven beneath her wings,
 And leaves her woodnote wild, and sings
 A tuned and measured strain.³

¹ Cf. Genesis iii. 24.

² "Bicker": i.e. flash. Cf. Milton's "Paradise Lost," vi. 767: "Bickering flame and sparkle dire."

³ Is there a reminiscence here of Wordsworth's poem, "O Nightingale! thou surely art," with its contrast between the fiery heart of the nightingale and the stock-dove's homely tale?

Ill fare the lay, though soft as dew
 And free as air it fall,
 That, with Thine altar full in view,
 Thy votaries would enthrall
 To a foul dream, of heathen night,
 Lifting her torch in Love's despite,
 And scaring with base wildfire light
 The sacred nuptial hall.¹

Far other strains, far other fires,
 Our marriage offering grace :²
 Welcome, all chaste and kind desires,
 With even matron pace
 Approaching down the hallowed aisle !
 Where should ye seek Love's perfect smile,
 But where your prayers were learned erewhile,
 In her own native place ?

Where, but on His benignest brow,
 Who waits to bless you here ?
 Living, He owned no nuptial vow,
 No bower to Fancy dear :
 Love's very self—for Him no need
 To nurse, on earth, the heavenly seed :
 Yet comfort in His eye we read
 For bridal joy and fear.³

'Tis He who clasps the marriage band,
 And fits the spousal ring,
 Then leaves ye kneeling, hand in hand,
 Out of His stores to bring

¹ The allusion is perhaps to Byron's poetry. Cf. Palm Sunday (p. 87, note).

² "Our marriage offering": "our bridal pageant."—MSS. ; but the offering brings out more clearly the idea of sacrifice and consecration emphasised in stanza 7.

³ Cf. the poem for the Annunciation (p. 232).

His Father's dearest blessing, shed
 Of old on Isaac's nuptial bed,
 Now on the board before ye spread
 Of our all-bounteous King.

All blessings of the breast and womb,
 Of Heaven and earth beneath,
 Of converse high and sacred home,
 Are yours, in life and death.

Only kneel on, nor turn away
 From the pure shrine, where Christ to-day
 Will store each flower ye duteous lay
 For an eternal wreath.

VISITATION AND COMMUNION OF THE SICK

1827.

The spell by which we can soothe others in sorrow can only be learnt from our own sufferings; and its best language is taught by the Church in her services for the Visitation of the Sick with its salutations of peace, and for the Holy Communion with its memorial of Jesus' death. The memories of such hours become a soothing power ever after to ourselves.

The poem scarcely needs analysis. Perhaps more than any one other it illustrates 'that soothing tendency in the Prayer Book' of which the Advertisement speaks (p. xxxviii.).

○ YOUTH and Joy, your airy tread
 Too lightly springs by Sorrow's bed,
 Your keen eye-glances are too bright,
 Too restless for a sick man's sight.
 Farewell: for one short life we part:
 I rather woo the soothing art,
 Which only souls in sufferings tried
 Bear to their suffering brethren's side.

Where may we learn that gentle spell?
 Mother of Martyrs, thou canst tell!¹
 Thou, who didst watch thy dying Spouse
 With piercèd hands and bleeding brows,
 Whose tears from age to age are shed
 O'er sainted sons untimely dead,
 If e'er we charm a soul in pain,
 Thine is the key-note of our strain.

How sweet with thee to lift the latch,
 Where Faith has kept her midnight watch,
 Smiling on woe: with thee to kneel,
 Where fixed, as if one prayer could heal,
 She listens, till her pale eye glow
 With joy, wild health can never know,
 And each calm feature, ere we read,
 Speaks, silently, thy glorious Creed.

Such have I seen: and while they poured
 Their hearts in every contrite word,
 How have I rather longed to kneel
 And ask of them sweet pardon's seal!
 How blessed the heavenly music brought
 By thee to aid my faltering thought!
 "Peace!" ere we kneel, and when we cease
 To pray, the farewell word is, "Peace!"

I came again: the place was bright
 "With something of celestial light"²—
 A simple altar by the bed
 For high Communion meetly spread,

¹ "Mother of Martyrs": i.e. the Church, as typified by the Virgin. Cf. S. Simon and S. Jude, st. 1 (p. 265).

² "With something of celestial light": a slightly

Chalice and plate and snowy vest.—
 We ate and drank : then, calmly blest,
 All mourners, one with dying breath,
 We sate and talked of Jesus' death.

Once more I came : the silent room
 Was veiled in sadly-soothing gloom,
 And ready for her last abode
 The pale form like a lily shewed,
 By virgin fingers duly spread,
 And prized for love of summer fled.
 The light from those soft-smiling eyes
 Had fled to its parent skies.

O soothe us, haunt us, night and day,
 Ye gentle spirits far away,
 With whom we shared the cup of grace,
 Then parted : ye to Christ's embrace,
 We to the lonesome world again,
 Yet mindful of the unearthly strain
 Practised with you at Eden's door,
 To be sung on, where angels soar,
 With blended voices evermore.

inaccurate quotation from Wordsworth's poem, "She was a phantom of delight."

"And yet a spirit still and bright
 With something of an angel light."

(Or, as in ed. 1845 :

"With something of Angelic light.")

BURIAL OF THE DEAD

And when the Lord saw her, He had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not. And He came and touched the bier: and they that bare him stood still. And He said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise.

S. Luke vii. 13, 14.

September 27, 1822. Originally written for the Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity.

Even an autumnal scene has promise of spring in it, and so Christ can speak a word of hope even to mourners as they carry out their dead. The assurance, "I am the Resurrection and the Life," which meets us as we enter the Churchyard, leads us to trust our dear ones to Him, feeling that it is better for them to be with Him, and sends us back with fresh hope to the tasks of life.

Side by side with this poem should be read the paraphrase of the Burial Service, printed in Keble's "Letters of Spiritual Counsel," cliv.

WHO says the wan autumnal sun
 Beams with too faint a smile
 To light up nature's face again,
 And, though the year be on the wane,
 With thoughts of spring the heart beguile?

Waft him, thou soft September breeze,
 And gently lay him down
 Within some circling woodland wall,
 Where bright leaves, reddening ere they fall,
 Wave gaily o'er the waters brown.¹

And let some graceful arch be there
 With wreathèd mullions proud,
 With burnished ivy for its screen,
 And moss, that glows as fresh and green
 As though beneath an April cloud.—

¹ Compare Monday in Whitsun week. Miss Yonge suggests that the allusion is to the Church at Burthrop, near Fairford.

286 BURIAL OF THE DEAD

Who says the widow's heart must break,
The childless mother sink?—
A kinder, truer voice I hear,
Which even beside that mournful bier
Whence parent's eyes would hopeless shrink,

Bids weep no more—O heart bereft,
How strange, to thee, that sound!
A widow o'er her only son,
Feeling more bitterly alone
For friends that press officious round.

Yet is the voice of comfort heard,
For Christ hath touched the bier—
The bearers wait with wondering eye,
The swelling bosom dares not sigh,
But all is still, 'twixt hope and fear.

Even such an awful soothing calm
We sometimes see alight
On Christian mourners, while they wait
In silence, by some churchyard gate,
Their summons to the holy rite.

And such the tones of love which break
The stillness of that hour,
Quelling th' embittered spirit's strife—
"The Resurrection and the Life
Am I: believe, and die no more."—

Unchanged that voice—and though not yet
The dead sit up and speak,
Answering its call, we gladlier rest
Our darlings on earth's quiet breast,
And our hearts feel they must not break.

CHURCHING OF WOMEN 287

Far better they should sleep awhile¹
Within the Church's shade,
Nor wake, until new Heaven, new earth,
Meet for their new immortal birth,
For their abiding-place be made,

Than wander back to life, and lean
On our frail love once more.

'Tis sweet, as year by year we lose
Friends out of sight, in faith to muse
How grows in Paradise our store.

Then pass, ye mourners, cheerly on,
Through prayer unto the tomb,
Still, as ye watch life's falling leaf,
Gathering from every loss and grief
Hope of new spring and endless home.

Then cheerly to your work again,
With hearts new-braced and set
To run, untired, love's blessèd race,
As meet for those who face to face
Over the grave their Lord have met.

CHURCHING OF WOMEN

March 13, 1827.

The "awe in mortal's joy" that was present at matrimony is present still when the mother comes to offer her thanks for the birth of a child. Hope, joy, and love inspire her prayers, but the gentlest of all angels must be there to carry the prayer upward; Heaven's fire must fall to kindle the incense: the Holy Spirit must mould earth's wishes into heavenly aspirations: the thought of the childhood of Jesus must come to soothe the mother's fluttering heart.

¹ "Far better": cf. Phil. i. 23. To be with Christ, which is far better.

IS there, in bowers of endless spring,
 One known from all the seraph band
 By softer voice, by smile and wing
 More exquisitely bland!

Here let him speed: to-day this hallowed air
 Is fragrant with a mother's first and fondest prayer.

Only let Heaven her fire impart,
 No richer incense breathes on earth:
 "A spouse with all a daughter's heart,"¹
 Fresh from the perilous birth,
 To the great Father lifts her pale glad eye,
 Like a reviving flower when storms are hushed on high.

O what a treasure of sweet thought
 Is here! what hope and joy and love!
 All in one tender bosom brought,
 For the all-gracious Dove
 To brood o'er silently, and form for Heaven
 Each passionate wish and dream to dear affection given.

Her fluttering heart, too keenly blest,
 Would sicken, but she leans on Thee,
 Sees Thee by faith on Mary's breast,
 And breathes serene and free.

Slight tremblings only of her veil declare²
 Soft answers duly whispered to each soothing
 prayer.

¹ Perhaps the allusion is to Andromache (cf. p. 89, note), but I cannot trace the quotation to its source.

² When the woman comes to this office, the rubric (as it was altered at the last review) directs that she be decently apparelled, i.e. as the custom and order was formerly, with a white covering or veil. Wheatly, "On the Common Prayer," c. xiii. sect. i. 3.—J. K.

We are too weak, when Thou dost bless,
 To bear the joy—help, Virgin-born,
 By Thine own mother's first caress,
 That waked Thy natal morn !
 Help, by the unexpressive¹ smile, that made
 A Heaven on earth around the couch where Thou wast laid !

COMMUNION

March 9, 1827.

On Ash Wednesday the Church in this time of her decay waits before celebrating the Eucharist to do penance for her sins. First she warns, then she pronounces all the curses of the law on sin, which come with a sterner note from her forgiving voice—and at last (like a mother baring her breast to win her child from a precipice) she ends with pleading words. Perhaps the sinner may think his sin too easily pardoned: if so, he is called upon to pronounce his own condemnation, and then to rise up in thankfulness, not shaming the Cross by indulging in remorse.

THE prayers are o'er: why slumberest
 thou so long,

Thou voice of sacred song ?

Why swell'st thou not, like breeze from mountain cave,

High o'er the echoing nave,

The white-robed priest, as otherwhile, to guide

Up to the altar's northern side ?—

A mourner's tale of shame and sad decay
 Keeps back our glorious sacrifice to-day,

¹ "Unexpressive." Compare S. Peter's day, st. 12, note (p. 247).

The widowed spouse of Christ ; with ashes crowned,
 Her Christmas robes unbound,¹
 She lingers in the porch for grief and fear,
 Keeping her penance drear.—
 O is it nought to you ? that idly gay,
 Or coldly proud, ye turn away ?²
 But if her warning tears in vain be spent,
 Lo, to her altered eye the Law's stern fires are lent.

Each awful curse, that on Mount Ebal rang,
 Peals with a direr clang
 Out of that silver trump, whose tones of old
 Forgiveness only told.
 And who can blame the mother's fond affright,³
 Who sporting on some giddy height
 Her infant sees, and springs with hurried hand
 To snatch the rover from the dangerous strand ?

But surer than all words the silent spell
 (So Grecian legends tell)

¹ "Robes": "wreaths."—MSS

² Cf. Lamentations i. 12.

³ Alluding to a beautiful anecdote in the "Greek Anthology," tom. i. 180, ed. Jacobs. See Rogers: "Pleasures of Memory," p. 133 :

"While on the cliff with calm delight she kneels,
 And the blue vales a thousand joys recall,
 See to the last verge her infant steals:
 O fly, yet stir not, speak not, lest it fall.
 Far better taught she lays her bosom bare,
 And the fond boy springs back to nestle there."—

J. K.

When to her bird, too early scaped the nest,
She bares her tender breast.

Smiling he turns and spreads his little wing,
There to glide home, there safely cling.

So yearns our mother o'er each truant son,
So softly falls the lay in fear and wrath begun.¹

Wayward and spoiled she knows ye: the keen blast

That braced her youth is past:

The rod of discipline, the robe of shame—²

She bears them in your name:

Only return and love. But ye perchance

Are deeper plunged in sorrow's trance:

Your God forgives, but ye no comfort³ take Till ye have scourged the sins that in your conscience ache.

O heavy-laden soul! kneel down and hear
Thy penance in calm fear:

With thine own lips to sentence all thy sin;

Then, by the judge within

Absolved, in thankful sacrifice to part

For ever with thy sullen heart,

Nor on remorseful thoughts to brood, and stain
The glory of the Cross, forgiven and cheered in vain.⁴

¹ Compare the last few paragraphs of the Exhortation in the Commination Service.

² "The rod of penance and the robe of shame."—MSS.

³ "Comfort": "pardon."—MSS.

⁴ Cf. Keble's "Letters of Spiritual Counsel," Letter 1, "I am certain no person who believes in the Atonement ought to indulge in bitter remorse, and therefore, by God's blessing, I do not mean to be uncomfortable if I can help it, even in the thought of my past faults."

FORMS OF PRAYER TO BE USED AT SEA

When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee. Isaiah xliii. 2.

1827.

As the sights and sounds at sea recall those on land, so the Church Service used at sea with its prayers and thanksgiving, at times of tempest or of fight, reminds the sailor of the worship of the Church at home. The Presence of the Church soothes him in time of victory, and also when he commits a comrade to the deep, reminding him that God can guard him there and bring him thence on the Resurrection Day, as surely as if he lay in the Churchyard at home.

THE shower of moonlight falls as still and clear
 Upon the desert main,
As where sweet flowers some pastoral garden cheer
 With fragrance after rain :
The wild winds rustle in the piping shrouds,
 As in the quivering trees :
Like summer fields beneath the shadowy clouds,
 The yielding waters darken in the breeze.¹

¹ I cannot doubt that there is a reminiscence in this stanza of Wordsworth's poem, "The Brothers." Compare especially the lines :

 " But he had been reared
Among the mountains, and he in his heart
Was half a shepherd on the stormy seas.
Oft in the piping shrouds had Leonard heard
The tones of waterfalls and inland sounds
Of caves and trees."

Thou too art here with thy soft inland tones,
 Mother of our new birth ;
 The lonely ocean learns thy orisons,
 And loves thy sacred mirth :
 When storms are high, or when the fires of war
 Come lightening round our course,
 Thou breath'st a note like music from afar,
 Tempering rude hearts with calm angelic force.¹

Far, far away, the homesick seaman's hoard,²
 Thy fragrant tokens live,
 Like flower-leaves in a precious volume stored,
 To solace and relieve
 Some heart too weary of the restless world ;
 Or like thy sabbath Cross,³
 That o'er the brightening billow streams unfurled,
 Whatever gale the labouring vessel toss.

O kindly soothing in high victory's hour,
 Or when a comrade dies,
 In whose sweet presence sorrow dares not lower,
 Nor expectation rise

¹ The service in the Prayer Book is divided into three parts: Prayer in storms at sea and thanksgiving for deliverance: Prayer before a fight and thanksgiving for victory: Prayer at the burial of the dead at sea. To each of these allusion is made here.

² While the homesick sailor is far away at sea, the service becomes treasured by him because of its associations, just as dried flowers which recall some past happiness are treasured by one weary of life, or as the cross that floats on the ship reminds him of all that it symbolises.

³ "Thy sabbath Cross": i.e. the special flag, bearing a Cross upon it, hoisted on men of war during the

Too high for earth ; what mother's heart could spare
 To the cold cheerless deep
 Her flower and hope? but thou art with him
 there,
 Pledge of the untired arm and eye that cannot sleep : ¹

The eye that watches o'er wild ocean's dead,
 Each in his coral cave,
 Fondly as if the green turf wrapt his head
 Fast by his father's grave.—
 One moment, and the seeds of life shall spring
 Out of the waste abyss,
 And happy warriors triumph with their King
 In worlds without a sea,² unchanging orbs of bliss.

religious service on Sunday. Compare the Morning Hymn for Emigrants, st. 9. ("Miscellaneous Poems," p. 98):

“ Still overhead the saving sign
 Streams, and we know that we are thine :
 What course soe'er the vessel take,
 The signal of our King we make.”

¹ The Church service prevents elation in the hour of victory or too great grief on the loss of a comrade. Compare the words of the penultimate prayer: “ We bless and magnify Thy great and glorious name for this happy victory, the whole glory whereof we do ascribe to Thee, who art the only Giver of victory ” ; and the words with which the body is committed to the sea: “ We therefore commit his body to the deep, to be turned into corruption, looking for the Resurrection of the body (when the sea shall give up her dead) and the life of the world to come, through our Lord Jesus Christ.”

² And there was no more sea. Revelation xxi. 1.

GUNPOWDER TREASON

As thou hast testified of Me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome. Acts xxiii. 11.

November 11, 1827. "Addressed to converts from Popery."—MSS.

The Church, which mourned her Lord's Crucifixion in the East, has now to bear her Cross in the West. There she mourns over the sight of misdirected worship and of martyrs slain at Rome. She mourns also for the perplexities of those who are separated from Rome, and who long to be united to her. But they may not go back; for she offers them, where they are, the sure certainty of truth, and allows the imagination to dwell on the Presence of the Dead (without the lurid mist of Purgatory), and on the presence of the Lord on the altar and in the heart. They may not then be tempted back, but they should speak gently of Rome's fall, that she may be restored.

BENEATH the burning eastern sky
 The Cross was raised at morn :
 The widowed Church to weep stood by,
 The world, to hate and scorn.

Now, journeying westward, evermore
 We know the lonely Spouse
 By the dear mark her Saviour bore
 Traced on her patient brows.

At Rome she wears it, as of old
 Upon the accursèd hill : ¹
 By monarchs clad in gems and gold,
 She goes a mourner still.

She mourns that tender hearts should bend
 Before a meaner shrine,
 And upon Saint or Angel spend
 The love that should be thine.

¹ "The accursed hill": i.e. Calvary.

By day and night her sorrows fall
 Where miscreant hands and rude
 Have stained her pure ethereal pall
 With many a martyr's blood.

And yearns not her parental heart,
 To hear their secret sighs,
 Upon whose doubting way apart
 Bewildering shadows rise ?

Who to her side in peace would cling,
 But fear to wake, and find
 What they had deemed her genial wing
 Was Error's soothing blind.¹

She treasures up each throbbing prayer :
 Come, trembler, come and pour
 Into her bosom all thy care,
 For she has balm in store.

Her gentle teaching sweetly blends
 With the clear light of Truth
 The ærial gleam that Fancy lends
 To solemn thoughts in youth.—

If thou hast loved, in hours of gloom,
 To dream the dead are near,
 And people all the lonely room
 With guardian spirits dear,

Dream on the soothing dream at will :
 The lurid mist is o'er,
 That shewed the righteous suffering still
 Upon the eternal shore.

¹ Cf. p. 154, note.

If with thy heart the strains accord,
 That on His altar-throne
 Highest exalt thy glorious Lord,
 Yet leave Him most thine own ;

O come to our Communion Feast :
 There present, in the heart ¹
 As in the hands,² the eternal Priest
 Will His true self impart.—

Thus, should thy soul misgiving turn
 Back to the enchanted air,
 Solace and warning thou mayst learn
 From all that tempts thee there.

And O ! by all the pangs and fears
 Fraternal spirits know,
 When for an elder's shame the tears
 Of wakeful anguish flow,

Speak gently of our sister's fall :
 Who knows but gentle love
 May win her at our patient call
 The surer way to prove ?

¹ "There present in the heart." A copy in a private letter written by Miss Keble reads: "There treasured in the heart."

² "As in the hands": "not in the hands."—MSS. and all early editions. For the meaning which Mr Keble attached to the words cf. his "Eucharistical Adoration," ed. 2. p. xiii. note. And for the circumstances of the change which was made in 1866 cf. Coleridge's "Memoir," p. 163, or "J. Keble: a Biography": by W. Lock, p. 56, and Church Quarterly Review, July 1878, pp. 539-544.

KING CHARLES THE MARTYR

This is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. 1 S. Peter ii. 19.

1827.

Though Apostles and Prophets have passed away, we still have martyrs, alike in cottage hearths and on the throne; such was our royal Saint around whose memory have grown almost sacred associations, and who has endeared the prayers and psalms which he used. The Church which he loved tended him in his death, and thanks God still for his memory.

For Mr Keble's feeling towards Charles the First compare the sermon preached on this day in 1831 ("Sermons Academical and Occasional," No. 5.), and also "Occasional Papers and Reviews," p. 120.

PRAISE to our pardoning God! though silent now

The thunders of the deep prophetic sky,¹
Though in our sight no powers of darkness bow
Before the Apostles' glorious company;²

The Martyrs' noble army still is ours,
Far in the North our fallen days have seen
How in her woe the tenderest spirit towers
For Jesus' sake in agony serene.

Praise to our God! not cottage hearths alone,
And shades impervious to the proud world's glare,

Such witness yield: a monarch from his throne
Springs to his Cross and finds his glory there.

Yes: wheresoe'er one trace of thee is found,
As in the Sacred Land, the shadows fall:³

¹ Cf. S. Luke ix. 54, 55; Revelation x. 3, 4.

² Cf. S. Luke x. 17, 18; Acts x. 9; xiii. 8, 11.

³ "The shadows fall." Perhaps, "shadows of blessing fall upon our spirits, like the shadow of S. Peter

With beating hearts we roam the haunted ground,
Lone battle-field or crumbling prison hall.

And there are aching solitary breasts,
Whose widowed walk with thought of thee is cheered,

Our own, our royal Saint : thy memory rests
On many a prayer, the more for thee endeared.

True son of our dear Mother, early taught
With her to worship and for her to die,
Nursed in her aisles to more than kingly thought,
Oft in her solemn hours we dream thee nigh.

For thou didst love to trace her daily lore,
And where we look for comfort or for calm,
Over the self-same lines to bend, and pour
Thy heart with hers in some victorious psalm.

And well did she thy loyal love repay ;
When all forsook, her Angels still were nigh,
Chained and bereft, and on thy funeral way,
Straight to the Cross she turned thy dying eye.¹

falling upon and healing the sick" (Acts v. 15; cf. "Lyra Innocentium;" Holy Places and Things, § 8); or perhaps, "there is a restful overshadowing atmosphere, as though we were in the Holy Land" (cf. the Fourth Sunday in Advent, p. 17).

¹ His Majesty then bade him (Mr Herbert) withdraw; for he was about an hour in private with the Bishop (Juxon): and being called in, the Bishop went to prayer; and reading also the 27th chapter of the Gospel of S. Matthew, which relateth the Passion of our Blessed Saviour. The King, after the Service was done, asked the Bishop, if he had made choice of that chapter, being so applicable to his present condition? The Bishop replied, "May it please your Gracious Majesty, it is the proper lesson for the day, as appears by the Kalender;" which the King was much affected with, so aptly serving as a seasonable preparation for his death that day." Herbert's "Memoirs," p. 131.—J. K.

And yearly now, before the Martyrs' King,
 For thee she offers her maternal tears,
 Calls us, like thee, to His dear feet to cling,
 And bury in His wounds our earthly fears.

The Angels hear, and there is mirth in Heaven,
 Fit prelude of the joy, when spirits won
 Like thee to patient Faith, shall rise forgiven,
 And at their Saviour's knees thy bright example own.

THE RESTORATION OF THE ROYAL FAMILY

And Barzillai said unto the King, How long have I to live, that I should go up with the King unto Jerusalem? 2 Samuel xix. 34.

1827.

As in the brightness of Easter there is mingled a reminiscence of the Saviour's death, so amid the triumph of the Restoration of the Monarchy there was a note of sadness in the memory of the martyred king and in the coincidence of the death of Dr Hammond.
 May teachers, true to his teaching, ever remind us not to confine our hopes to earthly kingdoms.

AS when the Paschal week is o'er,
 Sleeps in the silent aisles no more
 The breath of sacred song,
 But by the rising Saviour's light
 Awakened soars in airy flight,
 Or deepening rolls along :¹

¹ The organ is silent in many Churches during Passion week : and in some it is the custom to put up evergreen boughs at Easter as well as at Christmas time.—J. K.

The while round altar, niche, and shrine,
 The funeral evergreens entwine,
 And a dark brilliance cast,
 The brighter for their hues of gloom,
 Tokens of Him who through the tomb
 Into high glory passed :

Such were the lights and such the strains,
 When proudly streamed o'er Ocean plains
 Our own returning Cross ;
 For with that triumph seemed to float
 Far on the breeze one dirge-like note
 Of orphanhood and loss.

Father and King,¹ O where art thou ?
 A greener wreath adorns thy brow,
 And clearer rays surround ;
 O for one hour of prayer like thine,
 To plead before the all-ruling shrine
 For Britain lost and found !

And he,² whose mild persuasive voice
 Taught us in trials to rejoice,
 Most like a faithful dove,
 That by some ruined homestead builds,
 And pours to the forsaken fields
 His wonted lay of love :

¹ " Father and King " : i.e. Charles the First.

² Read Fell's " Life of Hammond," p. 283-296. Oxford, 1806.—J. K. Dr Henry Hammond, who had been Charles the First's chaplain and one of the most active Episcopalian writers during the Commonwealth, was summoned to London in 1660 at the time of the Restoration, " to assist in the composure of breaches in the ' Church " ; but he was seized with a fatal illness and died on the very day on which Parliament decided on the Restoration of Charles the Second.

Why comes he not to bear his part,
To lift and guide the exulting heart?—

A hand that cannot spare
Lies heavy on his gentle breast :
We wish him health ; he sighs for rest,
And Heaven accepts the prayer.

Yes, go in peace, dear placid spright,
Ill spared ; but would we store aright
Thy serious sweet farewell,
We need not grudge thee to the skies,
Sure after thee in time to rise,
With thee for ever dwell.

Till then, whene'er with duteous hand,
Year after year, my native Land
Her royal offering brings,
Upon the Altar lays the Crown,
And spreads her robes of old renown
Before the King of Kings,

Be some kind spirit, likest thine,
Ever at hand, with airs divine
The wandering heart to seize ;
Whispering, " How long hast thou to live,
That thou shouldst Hope or Fancy give
To flowers or crowns like these ? "

ACCESSION

As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. Joshua i. 5.

1827.

God's Promise to Joshua, "I will not fail thee nor forsake thee," is a constant source of comfort in times of death. The glimpse which it gives of one unchanging love and might gives strength to the monarch as he ascends the throne: to the Priest as he takes up his pastoral task: and to all it tells of the lesson of content.

THE voice that from the glory came
 To tell how Moses died unseen,
 And waken Joshua's spear of flame
 To victory on the mountains green,
 Its trumpet tones are sounding still,
 When Kings or Parents pass away,
 They greet us with a cheering thrill
 Of power and comfort in decay.
 Behind the soft bright summer cloud
 That makes such haste to melt and die,
 Our wistful gaze is oft allowed
 A glimpse of the unchanging sky:
 Let storm and darkness do their worst;
 For the lost dream the heart may ache,
 The heart may ache, but may not burst:
 Heaven will not leave thee nor forsake.
 One rock amid the weltering floods,
 One torch in a tempestuous night,
 One changeless pine in fading woods:—
 Such is the thought of Love and Might,
 True Might and ever-present Love,
 When Death is busy near the throne,
 And Sorrow her keen sting would prove
 On Monarchs orphaned and alone.

In that lorn hour and desolate,
 Who could endure a crown? but He
 Who singly bore the world's sad weight,
 Is near, to whisper, "Lean on Me:
 Thy days of toil, thy nights of care,
 Sad lonely dreams in crowded hall,
 Darkness within, while pageants glare
 Around—the Cross supports them all."

O promise of undying Love!
 While monarchs seek thee for repose,
 Far in the nameless mountain cove
 Each pastoral heart thy bounty knows.
 Ye, who in place of shepherds true
 Come trembling to their awful trust,
 Lo here the fountain to imbue
 With strength and hope your feeble dust.

Not upon Kings or Priests alone
 The power of that dear word is spent;
 It chants to all in softest tone
 The lowly lesson of Content:
 Heaven's light is poured on high and low;
 To high and low Heaven's Angel spake;
 "Resign thee to thy weal or woe,
 I ne'er will leave thee nor forsake."

ORDINATION

After this, the congregation shall be desired, secretly in their prayers, to make their humble supplications to God for all these things: for the which prayers there shall be silence kept for a space.

After which shall be sung or said by the Bishop (the persons to be ordained Priests all kneeling), "Veni, Creator Spiritus." (Rubric in the Office for Ordering of Priests.)

March 28, 1828.

The thought of the poem is so simple that no analysis seems needed.

'T WAS silence in Thy temple, Lord,
 When slowly through the hallowed air
 The spreading cloud of incense soared,
 Charged with the breath of Israel's prayer.¹

'Twas silence round Thy throne on high,
 When the last wondrous seal unclosed,²
 And in the portals of the sky
 Thine armies awfully reposed.

And this deep pause, that o'er us now
 Is hovering—comes it not of Thee?
 Is it not like a mother's vow,
 When with her darling on her knee,

She weighs and numbers o'er and o'er
 Love's treasure hid in her fond breast,
 To cull from that exhaustless store
 The dearest blessing and the best?

And where shall mother's bosom find,
 With all its deep love-learnèd skill,
 A prayer so sweetly to her mind,
 As, in this sacred hour and still,

Is wafted from the white-robed choir,
 Ere yet the pure high-breathèd lay,
 "Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,"
 Rise floating on its dove-like way?

¹ Cf. 1 Kings viii. 10 ff.

² When he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour. Revelation viii. 1.

And when it comes, so deep and clear
 'The strain, so soft the melting fall,
It seems not to the entrancèd ear
 Less than Thine own heart-cheering call,

Spirit of Christ—Thine earnest given
 That these our prayers are heard, and they
Who grasp this hour the sword of Heaven,
 Shall feel Thee on their weary way.

Oft as at morn or soothing eve
 Over the Holy Fount they lean,
Their fading garland freshly weave,
 Or fan them with Thine airs serene,

Spirit of Light and Truth ! to Thee
 We trust them in that musing hour,
Till they, with open heart and free,
 Teach all Thy word in all its power.

When foemen watch their tents by night,
 And mists hang wide o'er moor and fell,
Spirit of Counsel and of Might,
 Their pastoral warfare guide Thou well.

And O ! when worn and tired they sigh
 With that more fearful war within,
When Passion's storms are loud and high,
 And brooding o'er remembered sin

The heart dies down—O mightiest then,
 Come ever true, come ever near,
And wake their slumbering love again,
 Spirit of God's most holy Fear !

INDEX

	PAGE
And is there in God's world so drear a place . . .	75
And wilt Thou hear the fevered heart . . .	36
Angel of wrath! why linger in mid air . . .	72
As rays around the source of light . . .	24
As when the Paschal week is o'er . . .	300
At length the worst is o'er, and Thou art laid . . .	103
Awake—again the Gospel-trump is blown . . .	7
Beneath the burning eastern sky . . .	295
Bless'd are the pure in heart . . .	226
Creator, Saviour, strengthening Guide . . .	142
Dear is the morning gale of spring . . .	236
Father to me Thou art, and Mother dear . . .	89
Fill high the bowl, and spice it well, and pour . . .	92
First Father of the holy seed . . .	114
Foe of mankind! too bold thy race . . .	64
Go not away, thou weary soul . . .	162
Go up and watch the new-born rill . . .	109
Hold up thy mirror to the sun . . .	251
Hues of the rich unfolding morn . . .	1
I marked a rainbow in the north . . .	47
In troublous days of anguish and rebuke . . .	167
Is it not strange, the darkest hour . . .	101
Is there, in bowers of endless spring . . .	288
Is this a time to plant and build . . .	173
It is so!—ope thine eyes and see . . .	192
It was not then a poet's dream . . .	152

	PAGE
Lessons sweet of spring returning	42
“Lord, and what shall this man do?”	26
Lord, in Thy field I work all day	138
 My Saviour, can it ever be	 122
 Not till the freezing blast is still	 11
Now is there solemn pause in earth and Heaven	125
 O day of days! shall hearts set free	 106
O for a sculptor’s hand	117
O God of Mercy, God of Might	270
O hateful spell of sin! when friends are nigh	150
O holy mountain of my God	98
O Lord my God, do Thou Thy holy will	95
O Youth and Joy, your airy tread	282
Of the bright things in earth and air	17
Oh! say not, dream not, heavenly notes	275
Oh! Thou who deign’st to sympathise	232
Oh! who shall dare in this frail scene	234
On Sinai’s top, in prayer and trance	178
 Praise to our pardoning God! though silent now	298
Prophet of God, arise and take	165
 Red o’er the forest peers the setting sun	 205
 Say, ye celestial guards, who wait	 28
See Lucifer like lightning fall	78
Seest thou how tearful and alone	265
Since all that is not Heaven must fade	135
Sit down and take thy fill of joy	249
Soft cloud, that while the breeze of May	128
Star of the East, how sweet art Thou	39
Stately thy walls, and holy are the prayers	188
Sweet Dove! the softest, steadiest plume	67
Sweet nurslings of the vernal skies	183
 Ten cleansed, and only one remain!	 181
’Tis gone, that bright and orbèd blaze	4
’Tis true, of old the unchanging sun	31
The bright-haired morn is glowing	211

INDEX

309

	PAGE
The clouds that wrap the setting sun	146
The earth that in her genial breast	130
The heart of childhood is all mirth	44
The historic Muse, from age to age	84
The live-long night we've toiled in vain	156
The midday sun, with fiercest glare	222
The morning mist is cleared away	201
The prayers are o'er ; why slumberest thou so long	289
The shadow of the Almighty's cloud	278
The shower of moonlight falls as still and clear .	292
The Son of God in doing good	175
The voice that from the glory came	303
The world's a room of sickness, where each heart	239
The year begins with Thee	34
There are, who darkling and alone	58
There is an awe in mortals' joy	280
There is a Book, who runs may read	62
They know the Almighty's power	51
Thou first-born of the year's delight	111
Thou thrice denied, yet thrice beloved	245
'Twas silence in Thy temple, Lord	305
Twice in her season of decay	242
Two clouds before the summer gale	261
Wake, arm divine ! awake	54
We were not by when Jesus came	219
Well may I guess and feel	119
What liberty so glad and gay	203
What sudden blaze of song	20
What went ye out to see	14
When bitter thoughts, of conscience born	159
When brothers part for manhood's race	217
When God of old came down from Heaven	133
When Nature tries her finest touch	81
When Persecution's torrent blaze	196
Where is it mothers learn their love ?	273
Where is the land with milk and honey flowing	145
Where is Thy favoured haunt, eternal Voice	198
Who is God's chosen priest ?	229
Who says the wan autumnal sun	285
Why blow'st thou not, thou wintry wind	267
Why doth my Saviour weep	170

	PAGE
Why should we faint and fear to live alone . . .	208
Will God indeed with fragments bear . . .	213
Wish not, dear friends, my pain away . . .	186
Ye hermits blest, ye holy maids . . .	255
Ye stars that round the Sun of righteousness . . .	258
Ye whose hearts are beating high . . .	87
Yes—deep within, and deeper yet . . .	70

107

PRINTED BY
TURNBULL AND SPEARS, EDINBURGH

Date Due

FACULTY

F 3 '48

F 16 '48

AG 24 '48

~~DEC 2 2003~~

~~JUL 2 2010~~

JUN 3 0 2014

Princeton Theological Seminary Libraries

1 1012 01250 2052

